UNDERTAKER.
Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.
All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.

A FRAGMENT.

When, at the twilight hour,
After the scenes of the day,
Memory twines a bower
Of the most brilliant ray,
Then! Oh then! thou shalt be to me
As a sweet flower in memory.

When, at the midnight hour,
The moonbeams gently play,
And stars show forth their power
With a mild twinkling ray,
Then! Oh then! thou shalt be to me
As midnight stars in memory.

LILY'S CHOICE.

A solitary figure, with few lines of comeliness or grace, John Hollaway sat upon the meadow gate, looking into the distance. He was whistling softly, and yet he seemed to be in a deep reverie, for his great, tender eyes had a far-away expression in their brown depths as he gazed out over the sunlit meadows where the blood-red clover and the golden buttercups swayed under the soft, caressing breeze. Suddenly an imperious voice broke the silence.

"Mr. Hollaway, please let me take down the bars. I'm in a hurry and came the shortest way."

The young man started; he had not heard her approach, and there beside him stood the very object of his thoughts.

Ah, clover blooms and buttercups, paled were your charms now! A lithe, graceful figure in the daintiest of cambric dresses and underneath the wide hat a sweet, girlish face, with velvety, peach-tinted cheeks and eyes as blue as freshly gathered violets. Such was Lily Lawrence, the prettiest girl—so the popular verdict ran—in all the country round. A flush rose to John's sunbrowned face as he quickly rose and began to take down the bars.

"Out for a walk, Miss Lily?"

"Yes," very briefly.

"So you are fond of quiet strolls? I am too."

"Really, Mr. Hollaway, I don't see what it is to you—"

Then she stopped. She did not mean to be rude, but truly she thought to herself, it was high time she should show this young man that his openly expressed admiration was exceedingly distasteful to her. It had been going on some time and every one, even Lily herself, had come to see that the sun rose and set for John Hollaway where she was.

"He must be intensely stupid not to know how utterly indifferent I am to him," she thought.

But John was not stupid. He understood the unfinished sentence, and as he drew away without another word to let her pass, Lily saw that he did, and a shame-faced, compunctious look stole into her eyes. For from the richest to the poorest, every one acknowledged John Hollaway's noble sterling character.

Lily walked slowly along the road, half-determined to turn back and apologize for her rudeness, until a turn brought her face to face with some one whose handsome eyes met her own with such a glad welcome that all other thoughts were for the time driven completely away.

"Ah, good afternoon, Miss Lawrence! I was hoping I would meet you."

And the wavy black locks were bared to the breeze as Richard courteously lifted his hat and walked on beside her.

What a contrast to John Hollaway! And the contrast was great in many other ways than Lily thought. But the girl was but young to read character, and that Richard Blake was very handsome and elegant none could deny—a lover of whom any one might be justly proud.

When Lily's home was reached, and with another graceful bow Richard had left her, she did not go directly into the house, but lingered a while among the flowers that filled their little garden. Her thoughts were very busy. She knew that she had behaved very unkindly to her old friend, and her memory went back to the first time she had met him. It was at a picnic, and she had fallen and sprained her ankle. She remembered how the great fellow, so much stronger than his mates, had persisted in carrying her all the long distance back to her home. Since then he had shown in a hundred ways what she was to him, and knowing his noble nature, perhaps her heart would have gone out to him before this if Richard Blake had not come from college.

But he had, and Lily fancied his gay, debonair manners, and his entertaining conversation, and like many another young girl had begun to take for true, heart-deep love that liking which we all have for things pleasant to the sight.

And so she shook off her reproachful feelings and went into the house.

"Why, mother, dear, what is the matter? Crying, and I out enjoying myself! Tell me, what is it, dear? Let me share your trouble."

Mrs. Lawrence lifted a face, smiling through her tears.

"Yes, crying, Lily, darling, but not from grief. Sit down here beside me, and let me show you what a load has been lifted from my mind this morning. Lily, I did not tell you, but some time ago Mr. Burton, the lawyer, came to me and informed me that the holder of the mortgage on our home was in need of money, and intended to foreclose unless the mortgage was paid in full when he should demand it. Now child, you know what a trouble has been weighing upon me, for I knew that it would be impossible for me to raise the sum necessary, and that we must leave the dear old home that we have loved so well. And now, this very morning, Mr. Burton came and told me that a kind friend, hearing of the intended foreclosure, has paid the amount in full."

"Who is it that helped you, mother?"

"That is the strangest part of it, Lily. Mr. Burton said he had strictly promised not to tell the name of my benefactor, and as to who it can be I have no idea."

But though she did not say so, Lily had; and when later, in her usual impulsive way, she told John Hollaway how sorry she was that she had been so rude to him, and then asked him frankly whether he was not the kind friend who had come so opportunely to her mother's relief, his manner confirmed her suspicions.

It is said that "gratitude is neighbor to love," and whether that be true or not, it is certain that from that time the manly young farmer was often in Lily's thoughts, while Richard Blake was just as steadily losing ground. But John of course did not know it. He was not one to wear his heart upon his sleeve, and at length, after a hard struggle, had decided to abandon his hopeless suit and leave the field to that rival who evidently was the favored one. Lily noticed the difference; but woman-like, she did not appear to care, and so the months went by much the same, until at length the crisis came.

The village in which our heroine lived was just on the shores of a little bay, and many were the pleasure parties that enjoyed a trip over its limpid waters.

When they reached the beach who should be waiting in readiness to manage the boat but John Hollaway.

"Hallo, Hollaway, are you turning into boatman?" exclaimed Blake, in astonishment.

Lifting his cap to Lily, John answered:

"Not exactly; but Joe came to me in great distress, saying he did not feel well enough to go out, but had promised not to disappoint you, and knowing I could manage a boat he asked me to take his place. Joe has done me many a good turn and so I could not refuse him" he added, wrongfully interpreting the little flush that had risen in Lily's face as she listened: "and he said, too, that it was your sister who was to be your companion. Else I should not have come; I would not for the world be a marsport."

The bitterness in his tone touched a chord in Lily's heart. For some little time back she had been slowly but surely learning a lesson—the difference between real worth and mere glitter; and now her heart sank as she saw, or thought she saw, how completely her conduct had driven all affection toward her from John's mind, and that she had foolishly thrown away her own happiness.

"Well, Hollaway, I'm sure I'm much obliged. It's very kind of you," was Blake's reply.

And the two young men soon had the litcraft in readiness for its fair freight.

Blake had seen John's liking for Lily, but his vanity had not been alarmed; he knew by experience the power of his dark eyes, and Lily Lawrence was like any young lady if she were ten times prettier. So he reasoned.

They floated lightly over the blue water, anchoring after a while under a bluff, and dropping their lines to fish Lily chatted gayly in her own fascinating way, and never had she seemed more lovely in Richard Blake's eyes, while poor John, who had thought of late that he had driven her image from his mind, felt the old charm creeping over him again stronger than ever before; but he hid his pain manfully, and kept his part in the lively conversation.

Time crept on, and just as they decided on returning, to their dismay the heavens suddenly clouded over, and a peal of thunder brought them to their feet in alarm. Squalls were not common on the bay, but one was evidently now upon them, and John saw the great danger. A moment and they were dashing at mad rate over the waves, while overhead the awful darkness gathered more ominously all the while, and every now and then vivid flashes of flames seemed to envelope them on all sides.

Suddenly there was a blinding glare, then a terrific flash, and half the mast dropped over the bows, while the sails were dragged into the seething water. For an instant John was almost stunned; then his first thought was Lily. Where was she? A second more and he caught the gleam of yellow curls in the cruel waves among the tattered sails; the ropes had twisted about her light figure and dragged her over the bow.

He sprang to Blake's side.

"If she is to be yours, it is you who ought to save her! Quick or it will be to late! Your chance will be gone!"

But Blake still cowered tremblingly where he was, unheeding the peril of the one he professed to love.

Another instant John was struggling among the sails; a few seconds of awful suspense while the waves were tugging savagely at him; then weak almost fainting, he crept back into the boat with Lily's insensible form clasped close to his brave heart. He had saved her!

Then, still in imminent danger, they remained clinging to the dismantled boat, until, as suddenly as it had fallen, the squall lifted, and a welcome hail from the shore proclaimed that help was near at hand.

In an instant the memory of what had passed came to her. She did not turn away but raised her lustrous eyes to his as if to read his inmost thoughts; then the cold cheek pressed itself closer against his own, while her arms wound themselves softly around his neck.

"John—dear John!" was all she said.

And John knew that with the greatest peril the greatest blessing of his life had come to him; while Richard Blake, looking on with pale, scowling face, comprehended clearly that John's words had been prophetic when he had said, Your chance will be gone.

Sixth Councillor Convention.

The Republican Convention of the Sixth Councillor District will be held at

Lowell, in Jackson Hall,

—ON—

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 10, '82,

At 2 o'clock P. M., to transact such business as may properly come before it.

GEORGE S. LITTLEFIELD, Chairman.

H. A. WADSWORTH, Secretary.

Lawrence, Sept. 30, 1882.

MR. BOWMAN'S LETTER.

The letter of Hon. S. Z. Bowman accepting the Republican nomination for Congress in this District has been published. We commend its careful perusal to the voters of this District, especially to those super-excellent civil service reform gentlemen who made such opposition to his nomination, and have been talking of a bolt since. Possibly after reading the letter with minds open to conviction they may conclude that Mr. Bowman isn't such a terrible fellow after all. The document has an honest ring to it. It caters to nobody's whims and was evidently not written to "catch votes." It is an honest declaration of principles; the writer's political platform; and we do not see how it can be objected to by any true Republican. After thanking the Committee for the honor bestowed, and devoting some remarks to the tariff, Mr. Bowman lays down the following as his civil service creed:

In regard to my attitude concerning the question of civil service reform there is no need of any evasions, concealments or misunderstanding, either as to the past or future. Concerning these questions I have never, in precept, principle or practice, been opposed to a true civil service reform, and to the doctrine that those men should be appointed to office who are the best fitted practically to perform the duties of that office, and who can best serve the interests of the Government, preference being given, in accordance with the present law and with what I am sure is also public opinion, to the soldiers and sailors of the country, provided they are equally well qualified. I believe in a fair, square, honest, plain, practical test for candidates for office, by which, without exclusive regard to literary, scholastic or educational attainments, those men shall be chosen who are the best practical experts in the particular business which they are to perform, and the best fitted practically to do that business. On this creed or platform I have always stood and propose to stand. It has been charged that I am an advocate of what is popularly called "the spoils system," the general interpretation of which term in the public mind is that the offices must be filled by politicians whose sole or principle qualification is their ability to carry caucuses and perform political work. That I have been such an advocate, or ever in word, act or deed favored such a system, I boldly and unhesitatingly deny, and such a statement is neither in accordance with my record or my words. I, early in my Congressional life, announced my principles concerning recommending men for appointments, and that as to indorsing recommendations of applicants, I would not do so unless they were recommended to me by well-known and reliable citizens as honest and competent, and I believed them to be such. From this principle I have never deviated, and, in all the twelve years of my public life, I am not aware that I have ever indorsed the petition or recommended the appointment of any man to any State or national office without inquiring into his record and obtaining satisfactory evidence that he was worthy and qualified for the position, both intellectually and morally. I may have made mistakes and been deceived, but it a gratification to me to believe that no unworthy man has ever yet been appointed to office on my recommendation. I have indeed felt it a previlege if I could occasionally help a poor man—perhaps a soldier or sailor—worthy, capable and with a dependent family, toward work, and that is all I have cared for patronage, and I have not used it for any personal or political motives whatever. Few have any idea of the pathetic and pitiful appeals for work and help constantly made to one in official position by men in want, by old soldiers and sailors, by widows with dependent children and by children with dependent parents, appeals to which he cannot respond, and he would be grateful for any means or any law which would relieve him therefrom. One thing is certain, however great the benefit from civil service reform in regard to appointments to the people, to the Government and to the applicants for office, to no one will it be so great a benefit and so great a relief and blessing as to members of Congress and others in official positions. There is nothing in my past record or convictions, expressed or otherwise, which prevents my standing squarely upon the platform adopted so recently at Worcester by the Republican State Convention, and reaffirmed by the Congressional Convention of this District. The provision therein, that "appointments shall be made only upon impartial, practical tests of the fitness of the applicants, giving due preference to persons disabled in the military or naval service of the country," and the other provisions, are not only in accordance with the views which I have always held, but, when properly formulated into law, will receive my earnest support in the endeavor to have them engrafted upon the legislation of the country. This legislation in regard to the method of appointments with have a good effect in all respects, but I do not sympathize with the widespread and sweeping denunciation of the civil service of the Government. I claim to have some knowledge of the civil service of this country, and I unhesitatingly assert that, taken as a whole, it is fully up to the standard, not only of the civil service of any other country, but of the similar service in any private branch of business or employment.

FOR COUNCILLOR.

George Heywood, Esq., of Concord, is now serving his third term as a member of the Governor's Council. The usages of the party were waived by the Republican convention last year to give him, at his earnest request, a third nomination, and when they had done that and elected him they felt that they had dealt by him liberally, and also that he was in duty bound to keep his pledge to retire voluntarily at the end of his third term. The Republicans of the Sixth Councillor District still hold to that opinion—that he has no moral right to ask at their hands a fourth nomination. Many of his warmest personal friends coincide with this view of the case and will oppose him at the approaching convention on that ground.

But, notwithstanding his promise of last year, Mr. Heywood is again an aspirant and will be a candidate before the convention. Hon. Jacob Emerson, Jr., of Methuen is also a candidate, with the chances for a nomination strongly in his favor. So far as we have been able to learn the Republicans of the District have quite generally settled down to the conviction that Mr. Emerson is the man wanted for Councillor this year, and they propose to give him the place. He is able and clean, and admirably answers the requirements for a useful member of the Governor's official family. He has served with credit and ability in both branches of the Legislature; is a sterling good man; a progressive Republican, and very popular with the people.

The contest is narrowed down between Mr. Heywood and Mr. Emerson, with the probabilities very strongly in favor of the nomination of the latter gentleman.

THE SIXTH DISTRICT.

The Republicans of the Sixth Congressional District had a hard time of it at their convention in Charlestown. It was almost as sharp a battle as that fought on the same ground in June, 1775. They had two spells at it, the time consumed in active hostilities being thirty-six hours, and 130 ballots were taken in all. There was never anything like it before in Massachusetts. Real grit and bulldog hang-on was exhibited by all parties all the way through.

After an all-night contest, at half past five o'clock on Tuesday morning last, Deacon Converse of Malden, won the prize. He took it by a majority of two—just by the skin of his teeth, so to speak. The "Essex end" of the District was handsomely whipped, and Middlesex carried the day. Middlesex has bigger men in it than the "Essex end" has. It is more intellectual, and has a greater number of statesman. Of course it was proper to relegate Lynn, Nahant, etc., to back seats. They are an aspiring lot, but lack ability.

Deacon Converse is a good man, and will be elected.

☞ Mr. Hayes has grown daily in the esteem of those who were brought in contact with him in the intimate relations growing out of his canvass. He takes his defeat philosophically, as a mere incident in life, and no word of bitterness passes his lips. The Fifth District is the loser—not Mr. Hayes—and they, not he, will have the most cause for regret at the loss of the services of a gentleman most eminently fitted to serve in the halls of Congress. Cambridge Chronicle.

While we do not quite coincide with the Chronicle in its estimate of the loss of the District in Mr. Hayes's defeat in the convention, we fully agree with it in its appreciation of the character of that gentleman. We go a step further and predict that the voters of the District will go to him one of these days, on their own motion, and ask him to accept the honor of their suffrage and the position for which he was lately defeated. He prosecuted a clean, honest and manly campaign, and does not whine or threaten to bolt because some one else happened to be preferred, and that is the sort of a man the JOURNAL likes. Be patient, friend Chronicle, the turn of Hon. Francis B. Hayes is sure to come.

☞ The Woburn JOURNAL does "not relish the comments of the Chronicle and Tribune of Cambridge in congressional affairs in this district." The Chronicle is very sorry that it is compelled to do anything distasteful to the JOURNAL, but our duty is plain as we understand it. If the Democrats give us a better—more progressive—man than Mr. Bowman, with the other necessary qualifications, we shall be inclined to support him. As the JOURNAL will see by our editorial in this issue we publish an "Independent Republican" paper.—Cambridge Chronicle.

Yes, we understand. This will do very well for an "independent" journal, and at the same time we expect to see the Chronicle advocate the election of Mr. Bowman, because it is quite certain that the Democrats will not "give us a better man." The Chronicle knows they will not.

☞ The Prohibitory State Committee has organized by the choice of Amos Cummings of Woburn, Chairman; Charles A. Hovey, Secretary; C. B. Travis, Treasurer, and J. D. Hunt, Auditor. A campaign paper and address to temperance voters will be published.

☞ The Middlesex County Republican Convention will be held at Lowell on next Tuesday to nominate County Officers.

— For some reason or other the "harvest moon," now well in the wane, hasn't attracted much attention, or been a remarkable success as an autumn exhibition.

— The Globe of last Sunday contained a good, commonsense article on Woburn's railroad necessities from the pen of its able local reporter. We wish its ideas might be adopted.

— A party of Woburn teachers, visiting Lynn last Saturday, were shown the mysteries of the printing-press by their former neighbor and school committee, Mr. John L. Parker.

— If the authorities can furnish good and valid reasons for cutting down ornamental trees by the sides of the streets, we will thank them for doing so. We believe it unwise, injudicious, and destructive of the beauty of the village.

— The Woburn public is asked to study with care Mr. Elmore A. Pierce's programme for the course of entertainments to be given here, published in this paper. A very rich treat is presented and we trust it will be enjoyed by large numbers of the people of this town.

— Mr. Albert Thompson, the artist, has opened studios at 506 Washington street, which he will occupy until the summer sketching time comes round again. His rooms are pleasantly and conveniently located, and Woburn friends will always be welcomed thereat.

Wheels won't stand so good a chance of getting smashed and axles of being twisted as they did with the old rails, and so drivers and owners will look on the new track as a blessing.

— Quite a lively religious interest is being manifested at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. On the last two Sunday evenings several have asked to be remembered in the prayers of the Christians present, and the spirit of the meetings point towards a religious revival. The rooms are filled to their utmost capacity at each meeting, which alone is an encouraging sign.

— A Carriers' Union was temporarily organized in Emerald Hall on last Saturday evening, and a permanent one will be formed at the same place to-morrow evening. Quite a number of representatives were present from Boston, Charlestown and other unions, by whom spirited addresses were made. Forty-three carriers put down their names for membership, and a strong union will be organized in this famous leather town.

— Those of our people who failed to attend the Voldo entertainment in Lyceum Hall last Monday evening missed two hours of genuine enjoyment. It was a first class thing and deserved a much better patronage than was vouchsafed it. The programme was pleasing and highly interesting all the way through, and we advise our readers to make up their minds to attend the second entertainment of the course on next Monday evening, if they would enjoy something really excellent.

— William Winn & Co. will sell for Mrs. Martha Andross, administratrix, the well known "Winship Stock Farm" located about a mile from Woburn Center on Burlington and Wyman streets, on Tuesday, October 17, as per notice in the advertising columns of this paper. It is a well known and very desirable property, either for farming purposes or a summer residence, and as it is to be sold without reserve, and on liberal terms, somebody is bound to get a good bargain in it.

— A. Grant would respectfully remind his customers that, notwithstanding the political excitement which is likely to sweep over the Old Bay State, and in many cases run up to fever heat, a reaction is sure to come, and in order to meet the demand for something to comfort the outer man, he has laid in an assortment of first class suitings and overcoatings to which he invites the attention of all in want of a first class article in his line. He winds up by saying: "Grant gives everybody fits, so Grant us a call at 169 Main street."

— On Tuesday morning last James N. Dow, Esq., cheered the soul of the JOURNAL's editor by presenting him wtih a generous bag of handsome Black Hamburg grapes, for which the humble pencil-propeller was duly grateful. The grapes were all that the heart could wish or the most exacting tooth demand—large, fair and luscious—and topped off a scanty editorial noon-day repast in a style that made it seem like a feast of fat things. Friend Dow will please accept our benedictions for a nice treat.

— Quite a good many of our people are complaining just now of being considerably under the weather. High living is supposed to be the underlying cause of it all. Rich food: clogged liver: machinery thrown out of gear: sick.

— We should think the friends and advocates of constitutional prohibition, which idea is rapidly gaining ground all over the country, would get Mrs. Ellen Foster of Iowa out here for a lecture. She is the ablest of the supporters of it, and did great work in Iowa. She was in Boston last week, and made a very able speech in Tremont Temple.

— Chief Engineer Bixby, Supt. of Fire Alarm Ulmer, and Aldermen Kimball and Dix of Newton, and Chief Engineer Parks of Waltham and two of his foremen, inspected the Woburn Fire Alarm Whistle last Wednesday and were very much pleased with it. R., John Maguire: R. S., Edward R. Lynch; F. S., Thomas D. Hevey; Treasurer, David Fitzpatrick; S. C., Daniel McLellan; J. C., James Murphy; I. S., James McCarthy; O. S., Peter Hogan.

— We were pleased to meet Mrs. John L. Parker, former junior boss of the JOURNAL, in town last Monday morning. She likes to come over and see us once in a while, and it would take a good deal of solid argument to make her believe that Woburn isn't one coruer of paradise—and the choicest corner at that, though she's got nothing to say against Lynn. John L. spent Sunday night here, but the Congressional fight rested heavy on his mind, and we didn't see him. Mrs. Parker was looking fair and lovely.

— Last Wednesday morning Mr. R. S. Spaulding, the expressman, presented the editor of the JOURNAL a great, handsome, and delightfully toothsome brook trout from the clear, cool waters of the Scoodac, away down near Maine's "jumping-off place," for which thanks are returned. It was in very deed a "speckled beauty," big enough for a large family dinner, and rich enough for the palate of a prince. Mr. Spaulding recently returned from a three week's visit to his old home on the Scoodac, during which time he caught over 1100 brook trout, and fatted amazingly thereon.

— It is reported that two dealers in groceries have failed in this town within the last week or two. That is one fact. They didn't advertise in their town papers. That's another fact. Now, put the two facts together, and what do you make of it? On the other hand, we have in our mind's eye some grocers who patronize their town papers. Fact one, of a new series. They are prospering like green bay trees. Fact No. 2, second series. Put them together, and what is the product? Business men, to these statements give heed. Not to advertise leads to failure: to advertise insures success.

— Mr. Walter Cushing, the champion Lodge man in the Sixth District, spent last Sunday here. Just why so many of the leaders in the fight over there came here to spend the Sabbath is one of the few things that we don't know, unless it was to consult with experienced politicians and get some "points" to be used at the renewal of the contest at Charlestown on Monday. It don't seem as if it could be that either, for though the old heads here could double-discount the Lynn youth and tie one hand behind them and then lick the crowd, they wouldn't be after giving instructions on Sunday, for they are all go-to-meeting people, and wouldn't consider it right to do so. But several of them were here, and mebby it was to get into better atmosphere than just then prevailed in the Sixth District.

— MESSRS. WM. S. BUTLER & CO., whose store is a popular resort for ladies shopping in Boston, present an attractive notice in our advertising columns to-day. Their fall importations have been very comprehensive and patrons are always sure of finding a choice assortment of goods, including the latest novelties, with tempting bargains in all departments. Their store at 90 Tremont street is easily reached by horse cars from all the railroad stations, and enjoys a deserved popularity in a very large curcuit outside the city.

— The Unitarian society resumed their monthly teas in the parlors of the church yesterday evening, and had a fine social sitting. The parlors have been elegantly fitted up of late. By politeness of good minister Young and lady and Mrs. Judge Converse we had the pleasure of going through them on Wednesday. The walls have been covered with new paper of rich design and color, a handsome new carpet laid, while fine pictures and other art works are profusely hung, altogether making a handsome and very comfortable apartment. And the Unitarians know how to enjoy all these good and nice things.

— The Board of Selectmen held a regular monthly session at their rooms on Tuesday evening.——A lease for a rifle-range for the Phalanx, for one year, at $20 per annum, on land of Luther A. Fowle, was drawn and approved.——A petition for the release of George McDermott from jail was referred to the Police Committee.——Chief Conn's monthly report was received and filed away in the archives.——Voted, That the hydrants now standing in the gutter between Walnut and Union streets be removed inside the curbstone to conform to the new grade of the street.——Fred P. Cushing was appointed special policeman, without pay for the Armory; and Charles Hennessey received a like appointment for Broad street.

— An examination of the arrangement which Mr. Amos Cummings has for showing his carpets to purchasers will prove interesting and profitable. By an arrangement of mirrors a yard of carpeting is apparently multiplied to the extent of covering the floor of a very large room, so that the lady may look in any direction and learn just how any particular pattern will appear when laid in her parlor or drawing-room. It is a novel thing, the employment of which supersedes the necessity of carpet warerooms, and gives much better satisfaction to buyers than the usual method of displaying patterns. Mr. Cumpings has a great variety of styles any one of which can be exhibited as covering a whole room in a moment's time. People are cordially invited to call at his store and examine this novel method of displaying carpets whether they desire to purchase or not.

— For several months past our good friend, Mr. Eli Cooper, the boss of the best eating and cigar stand in town, has been given to late rising in the morning. This has been due to imperfect working of his alarm clock, which was properly set, but failed to go off. Mr. Cooper has been in the habit of awaking from a night's refreshing slumbers, every morning, some time before the hour for the alarm to strike, and then wait for its shrill summons for him to get up and prepare for the duties of the day. Strange to say, he has never heard it yet. Sometimes he has been known to remain under the blankets to a very late hour in the morning; sometimes to near the middle of the forenoon, vainly listening for the whirr of the wheels. Finally, last Tuesday he took the clock to Nichols to have the machine put in order. Nichols opened the time-piece and there was no alarm in it! Just at that moment our friend, Mr. Cooper, was, probably, the most disgusted man in town.

— Several Woburn people have been in attendance on the annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions held at Portland this week, among them G. R. Gage, Esq., wife and daughter, Dea. Kendall Richardson, Dr. March, and Luke Warren Fowle. The meeting convened on Tuesday afternoon, and will close to-day at noon, and has been largely attended by distinguished ministers and laymen from all parts of the country. It is the most important of the missionary conventions of the year, and of peculiar interest to the Christians of this place from whence have gone several missionaries to foreign fields, among them a son of Dr. March, a brother of Luke Warren Fowle, and others. It is reported that Dr. March, who gave an address before the meeting, will narrate to his people the prominent incidents of the same, and give an interesting account of the week's proceedings, at some one of his meetings on next Sabbath perhaps.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend, if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case where our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that we might get before the people a fractional part of the confidence that is expressed to us every day in this medicine by those who have carefully noted (without prejudice) its effects upon the blood and through that upon the whole system, stimulating all the functions of the body to perform the duties nature requires of them. Try a bottle and satisfy yourself.

Cold Hands and Feet.

LOWELL, Feb. 3, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she had very little appetite; could take no long walks, and her face was badly broken out with a humor. She was low-spirited; troubled with cold hands and feet; her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve; and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits, is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

A. L. HINCKLEY,
No. 264 Broadway, Lowell, Mass.

— It is to be hoped that all good friends of temperance; all who prefer sobriety and good conduct to dissipation and wrong-doing; everybody that has an interest in the well-being of the community, will remember the temperance meeting to held at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and attend the same. Capt. J. Henry Simonds will preside at the meeting, and a full orchestra will contribute to the music on the occasion. This is expected to be a very interesting and profitable meeting, and an effort should be made to gain the attendance of as many of those for whose good it is to be held as possible.

A Card.

From personal experience we would again recommend Geo. W. Nichols, 169 Main street, Woburn, as being fully competent to repair Fine Watches. Baily, Bascome, Chase, Clark, Hibbard, Hyde, Langmade, Taylor, Warrick, Locomotive Engineers Boston, Lowell and Concord Rail Road.

A Delicious Appetizer,

That ensures digestion and enjoyment of food; a tonic that brings strength to the weak and rest to the nervous; a harmless diarrhœa cure that don't constipate—just what every family needs—Parker's Ginger Tonic.

A STARTLING STATEMENT!

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 1st, 1881.

DR. CHARLES CRAIG:—Dear Sir: Suffering as I have been for a long time with a fearful cold, that finally settled into what is termed a quick consumption, and so pronounced by the attending physician, I heard of your Consumption Cure, and while having little faith in anything benefiting me, procured some of it, used it, and to-day am to the wonder of myself and friends apparently a well man. I write this as I feel in duty bound to do for the benefit of suffering humanity, and can but hope that the thousands who are now suffering with that supposed incurable disease Consumption will try your Consumption Remedy. They will receive speedy relief and a permanent cure. You can send any one to me who cares to be advised as to the manner in which your medicines cured me.

P. H. SULLIVAN, Captain Police.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 14, 1882.

We, the undersigned are personally acquainted with Captain P. H. Sullivan. We know of his debilitated condition at one time, are knowing to the fact that he is now daily on duty, and are satisfied he would not make any statement that was not strictly true.

WINCHESTER.

Last week Arthur Marcy went to Worcester on a bicycle.

The Star gives the Woburn Advertiser all it can stand under in its last issue.

The Woburn road has been put into first-rate condition by the street commissioners.

Mr. C. W. Blood has bought an orange plantation in Florida and has gone there to run it.

After an enjoyable trip to the South Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Ayer have got home in good condition.

There are some burglars around here, but is suspected that they live in this vicinity. A sharp eye will be kept out for the dishonest fellows.

Winchester has the selection of the Representative for this class this year. I hope "the right man for the right place" will be found. Let us "get the best."

At the annual Harvest Concert, to be given next Sabbath, there will be a grand display of fruits, flowers and vegetables. The design is to make this the best.

The advice of the Star to "shoot burglars" is subversive of good government, and contrary to scripture. We notice that once in a while the Star gets reckless.

Dr. Adaline B. Church, who has been in Paris since last spring studying and practicing her profession, sailed from Liverpool on September 28 for home and will arrive in New York tomorrow.

A billiard table has been put into the newly improved rooms of the Young Men's Association for the members. The Association have very pleasant quarters, into which they allow none but members to pass on any condition.

Rev. C. M. Addison, Rector of the Arlington Episcopal Church, has been appointed regular supply to the Episcopal Society of this village, and will preach here every Sunday afternoon at half past three. The church is quite flourishing and growing.

Caleb N. Bacon, brother of John H. and Ann Bacon of this town, and son of the late Robert Bacon, died very suddenly at his home in St. Louis, Mo., on last Monday. He was 51 years of age and was, and had been for many years, a prominent railroad man.

Citizens of Winchester who wish their watches repaired by me may leave them with Dr. George P. Brown, who will immediately forward them to me, and to whom they will be sent for delivery when done.
George W. Nichols.

The Grammar School house was occupied last Monday as per notice. It was not in proper condition for teaching or even occupancy, and the school was dismissed until Wednesday. There has been a good deal of unnecessary delay in making the repairs and alterations in this building, for which, I believe, the School Board were not at fault. The work was not begun as soon as it should have been, and has not been pushed with vigor. However, it will be all right now, I hope.

The numerous friends of Hon. A. B. Coffin will leave no stone unturned to bring about his nomination to the office of Councillor to the Governor. I hope they will be successful. No name has yet been mentioned for the place that will command the strength his will, for everybody knows him to be, not only capable and amply fitted for it, but that he is a clean man. The chances are that Mr. Coffin will be given the nomination.

NOTE.—We hear that Mr. C., will not be a candidate.—ED.

Democratic Convention.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a candidate for State Senator in this District was held in Grand Army Hall, Woburn, on Tuesday afternoon, October 3. There were present 38 delegates, every town being represented. John G. Maguire, Esq., of Woburn, was chosen Chairman, and J. Hovey of Winchester Secretary.

After the preliminaries, on motion, Oliver Perkins, Esq., of Wakefield, was nominated a candidate for State Senator for the Sixth Middlesex District by acclamation.

Thomas Salmon of Woburn was chosen member of the State Central Democratic Committee, and the following gentlemen were elected a District Committee, viz: J. G. Maguire, Woburn; James Chandler, Tewksbury; James Read, Reading; Gustavus Parker, No. Reading: J. S. Gilmore, Stoneham; A. V. Lynde, Melrose; J. Hovey Winchester; E. H. Walton, Wakefield; Henry Eames, Wilmington; Thomas Castello, Bilerica; Stephen Carter, Burlington; Chairman of the Democratic Town Com. of Bedford, and Thomas Salmon, ex officio.

Only Two Bottles.

Messrs. Johnson, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of Gen. John C. Fremont, Gov. of Arizona, had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

Massachusetts Mayors, with two exceptions, and Massachusetts manufacturers have taken no interest in the proposed fair at Washington in the interests of the Garfield monument fund.

Messrs Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.—A few days ago I saw a lady who had used your Cream Balm for Catarrh, and had found more relief in one bottle than from all other remedies she had tried. I enclose $1 for two bottles. Yours respectfully, JAMES HITCHEN, M. D., Providence, R. I.

ALL KINDS OF PRINTING AT THE

JOURNAL OFFICE

In the month of October, 1880, I took a severe cold which resulted in Acute Nasal Catarrh and developed into Chronic Catarrh, and inflamation of the throat, from which I have suffered as few have, upon whom the disease has been for so short a time. Some months since a new pamphlet, by Mason M. Miles, M. D., came to my notice. My disease was so minutely described and the cases of some, whose names and address were given, are so remarkable in their cure, I was induced to consult the doctor. I was fully convinced he was master of his specialty, and a man of large experience and extensive practice in the medical world, and had been a great blessing to multitudes of afflicted, where other treatment had failed. It is now three weeks since I placed myself under the care of Dr. Miles, and from the first I have been helped, and I feel assured the doctor can and will cure me, and that speedily. I recently met J. H. Vivian, Esq., of London, Canada, who has been in Boston for several weeks past, under Dr. Miles' treatment for a deep seated disease of the throat. He informed me that he recently resided in Chicago, and knew the history of several of the cases described in the doctor's pamphlet—particularly those of Mrs. Gill and Rev. Mr. Ravlin. He said these cases were much worse than they were represented to be in the pamphlet, and had been pronounced incurable by several eminent physicians. Mrs. Gill has been perfectly free from the disease for the last 27 years—and Mr. Ravlin has been well for the last 21 years. If any person should wish to write to these people they can address Mrs. Gill, at No. 34—10 Rodes Ave., Chicago, Ill., or Rev. N. F. Ravlin, San Jose, Cal. Mr. Ravlin accepted a call from San Jose, and removed there about one year ago. By the solicitation of former patrons, Dr. Miles returned to Boston last January, and he has several bad cases under treatment, where he expects to perfect a cure in a short time. See his card in another part of this paper.

Fred. A. Wood, of the Eighth Maine Volunteers, although an excitable man, is well-known for cool bravery. In the battle of Fort Harrison, September 26, 1864, he had just given to the company that he commanded the "Right Dress," when a hundred-pound shell from the enemy struck a field gun with a yard of where he stood, and exploded, killing one man four horses, smashed the gun carriage and sent a whirlwind of splinters about the Lieutenant's head. Fred entirely undisturbed, roared out to one of his men: "Step up there into place, Jackman. You are always letting some little thing draw away your attention." —Lewiston Journal.

Covetousness in Disguise.

Bethlehem, Pa., claims the distinction of possessing the oldest hand fire engine in the country. It was built by Brooks of London in 1698 and imported by the Moravians of Bethlehem in that year. In 1848, after a century and a half of honorable service, it was retired to the museum of the Young Men's Missionary Society, where it now is, and, moreover, in working order. These statements are attested by the maker's original bill and the shipping papers.

Lynn, Mass. Proprietor.

Edward Barnes of Lynn, Mass., states that for over two years he was troubled with frequent spitting of blood, severe cold and cough, night sweats, and general debility, so that I was given up by my friends and my doctor to die. Finally I was advised to try your remedies, which I did for three months, the Swedish Lung Balsam for my lungs, the Swedish Botanic Compound to build up my constitution and restore my appetite, and the Swedish Pepsin Pills to regulate the bowels. The result is that today I am entirely cured, and feel as well as ever in life.

LYNN, March 8, 1882.

Dr. F. W. A. BERGENGREN: Dear Sir—I have been using your Swedish Botanic Compound for kidney complaint and Scrofulous Humor, and have derived great benefit from it. This is saying a good deal, as before I commenced to use the Compound I was the greatest part of the time unable to work, and I have tried medical advice and all kinds of medicine, but without avail until I used your Remedy. Since taking it I have been feeling like a new man, and been able to attend to my work. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter.

WM. E. KIMBALL,

Conductor L. & B. R. R.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

IT is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.
All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.

HETTY MARVIN.

When the British and Tories attacked New London, Conn., in 17—, and set a price on the head of Gov. Griswold, the latter fled to the town of L., where his cousin Mrs. Marvin, hid him for some days in a secluded farm-house. But at last the subtle foe discovered his retreat, and one sunny afternoon in May he was routed from his hiding-place by the tidings that a band of horsemen were approaching to capture him.

His only chance of escape was to reach the mouth of a little creek which emptied itself into the Connecticut River, just above the entrance of the latter into Long Island Sound. There he had a boat stationed with two faithful attendants hidden beneath the high banks of the creek. The distance from the farm-house to the boat was two miles by the usual traveled road. But a little path across the farmer's orchards would bring him to a road only a mile from the boat, and save a quarter's length of his fearful run for life.

The roll of linen was taken by the farmer or his stout "help" to a grassy plat, beside a spring or meadow brook. There it was thoroughly wetted and spread upon the green turf, to make the best heat of the sun by day and the dew by night. The little maiden who tended it would sit near it.

Thus sat Hetty Marvin, the young daughter of Gov. Griswold's cousin, when her hunted friend sprang past her into the road to escape from his pursuers. Hetty was a timid child of about twelve years, yet thoughtful and wise beyond any of her elders. She was frightened by the headlong haste with which the Governor rushed across the meadow. But she quickly comprehended the scene, and instantly quieted her faithful Towser, who, though a friend to the family guest, thought it becoming to bark loudly at his hurried footsteps.

Her wise forethought arrested the Governor's notice, and suggested a scheme to delude his pursuers. "Hettie," he said earnestly, "I am flying for my life; and, unless I can reach my boat before I am overtaken, I am a dead man. But you must tell those who are chasing me that I have gone up the road to catch the mail-wagon, which will soon come along, you know. Then, they will turn off the other way."

"O, cousin!" said the girl in an agony of distress, "I cannot tell a lie, indeed I cannot. Why did you tell me which way you were going?"

"Hetty, dear child, you certainly would not betray me to my death! Hark! they are coming! I hear the click of their horses feet. O, Hetty, tell them I have gone up the road instead of down, and Heaven will bless you."

"Heaven never blesses those who speak falsely, cousin! But I will not tell them which way you go even if they kill me. So run as quickly as possible."

"It's no use. Unless I can deceive them I am a dead man."

"Cousin, cousin, hide under my web of cloth. They'd never think of looking here for you. Come, get down as swift as you can; and I'll cover you, and stand sprinkmy linen."

"It's my only chance, child. I'll get down as you say." And, suiting the action to the word, the Governor was soon hidden under the folds of the cloth.

Angry that their intended prey had escaped from the house where they had hoped to secure him, the six mounted Tories, headed by a British officer, dashed along the road in swift pursuit. At the sight of the girl in the meadow, the leader of the party paused.

"Child," he said, sternly, "have you seen a man running hereabouts?"

"Yes, sir," replied Hetty, trembling and flushing.

"Which way did he go?"

"I promised not to tell, sir."

"But you must tell or take the consequences."

"I said I wouldn't tell, if you killed me," sobbed the frightened girl.

"I'll have it out of her," exclaimed the furious officer, with an oath.

"Let me speak to her," said his Tory guide. "I know the child, I think. Isn't your name Hetty Marvin?" he asked pleasantly.

"Yes, sir."

"And this man that ran by you a few minutes ago was your mother's cousin, wasn't he?"

"Yes, sir, he was."

"Well, we are friends of his. What did he say when he came along?"

"He—told me—that he was flying for his life."

"Just so, Hetty. That was very true. I hope he won't have far to fly. Where was he going to hide? You see, I could help him, if I knew his plans."

Now Hetty was not a whit deceived by this smooth speech; but she was willing to tell as much of the truth as would consist with his safety, and she wisely judged that her frankness would serve her kinsman better than her silence. So she answered her questioner candidly. "My cousin said he was going down this way to the river, where he has a boat; and he wanted me to tell the men that were chasing him that he had gone the other way to catch the mail wagon."

"Why didn't you do as he bid you, then, when I asked you where he had gone?" thundered the officer, fiercely.

"I couldn't tell a lie, sir," was the tearful answer.

"Hetty," again began the smooth-tongued Tory, "you are a nice child. Everybody knows you are a girl of truth. What did your cousin say when you told him you couldn't tell a falsehood?"

"He said he shouldn't think I'd betray him to his death."

"And then you promised him that you wouldn't tell which way he went, if you were killed for it?"

"Yes, sir."

"That was a brave speech; and so I suppose he thanked you for it, and ran down the road as quickly as possible!"

"I promised not to tell where he went, sir."

"Oh, I forgot. Well, tell us his last words, and we won't trouble you any more."

"His last words were, 'It's my only chance, child; and I'll get down as you say.'" And overcome by fright and a sense of her kinsman's danger, should they rigidly interpret the language which she had reported, she sobbed aloud, and hid her face from sight.

Her tormentors did not stay longer to soothe or question her. They had got as they supposed, the information they wanted, and pushed rapidly on down to the river. Now, the Governor had arranged a signal with his boatman that a white cloth by day, or a red light by night, displayed from the attic window of his hiding-place, which was just visible at the mouth of the river, should inform them if he were in trouble, and put them on the alert to help him. As soon therefore, as he started from his cousin's, the signal floated from the window to warn them; and when they saw the pursuing party dash madly down the road to the river, and recognized the British uniform of the leader, they pulled swiftly out to sea. The horsemen reached the shore only to see the boat with two men in it nearly out of sight, and supposing their destined prey had escaped, relinquished their pursuit.

Meanwhile the hunted victim lay safe and quiet, where the simple shrewdness of the little cousin had hidden him, until the time came for her to return to supper. Then, he bade her go as usual to her home, telling her to ask her mother to place the signal lamp, as soon as it grew dark, in the window for the boatman, and to send him there some supper, with his valise, which in the hurry of his departure he had left behind.

The signal recalled the boat, which after twilight had ventured in sight of the shore and the farm-house, and the Governor quietly made his way to the river in safety. When he rejoined his father in a secure home, he named his infant daughter, which had been born in his absence, "Hetty Marvin," that he might be daily reminded ot the little cousin whose truth and shrewdness saved his life.

Licking an Elder.

One summer in the years agone, while camp-meeting was in progress in Eaton county, Penn., there arrived upon the grounds a bully named Miller, who had made a vow to lick Elder Johnson, and break up the whole business. The Elder heard the news with calm composure, and as soon as at liberty, he hunted up a worldly friend of his own and asked:

"Friend Smith, didn't you used to fight in your younger days?"

"Ah! Elder, I have had many a turn with the boys."

"And what is the effect of a sudden blow between the eyes?"

"It astonishes and humbles."

"Is there any danger of killing a man by such a blow?"

"Never knew a case of it."

Miller had his coat off, and was hunting for him, and they met face to face as they turned a wagon. Miller started to crack his heels and crow, but he never finished.

The Elder struck him one square between the eyes, without stopping his pace, and it took twelve rowdies, three dippers of water, and two quarts of whiskey to revive the patient and get him off the grounds.

One day, a year afterwards, he met the Elder, and seriously asked: "Elder, some of the boys say I was kicked by a horse, and others stick to it that I was struck by lightning, but I've always had a suspicion that you hit me with a provision stand. How was it, anyhow?"

Only Two Bottles.

Messrs. Johnson, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of Gen. John C. Fremont, Gov. of Arizona, had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

Comets.

WOBURN, Oct. 4th, 1882.

MR. EDITOR:—The beautiful heavenly visitor which has appeared lately in our eastern sky has excited much interest and led many to inquire, "what is a comet?" Thinking perhaps the scientific idea of a comet might interest most readers I will give what seems to be the truth concerning them.

In the first place, comets are not members of our solar system, but intruders. They come from all directions, but mostly from the polar regions of the sun. They are transparent, not merely the tail but what is called the neucleus which latter is the real comet. Comets are composed of solid matter and hydro-carbon gases in an incandescent state; that is so highly heated as to emit light. The solid matter is principally iron and stone; this we know to be so from the fact that pieces of a comet have reached the earth. Indeed, meteors are said to be but parts of comets. The particles of solid matter of which the comet is composed are small and dissociated, not one large mass as is commonly supposed, for if this latter were the case the neucleus of the comet could not be transparent which is a fact since stars have been seen through it. Now as to the tail of the comet which has been heretofore considered a necessary and indispensable appendage, but the more advanced astronomers do not now so consider it. To explain the nature of a comet's tail it is necessary to consider some other physical conditions. The first of these conditions is that of zodiacal light. Zodiacal light, as it is called, consists of diffused particles of matter capable of being heated and under the heat combining so as to reflect light; in fact it may be called an extension of the atmosphere of the sun. Another condition is that comets rotate on their own axes. We do not know that this is true but we infer it from the fact that we know of no heavenly body which does not rotate. Admitting that the comet rotates, the solid matter would have a tendency to collect at the equatorial regions of the comet thereby giving it a double convex shape. It is a well-known fact that a comet never has a tail until it comes into the region of zodiacal light. The comet, because of its transparency and double convexity, acts as a double convex lense concentrating the rays of the sun. So when a comet reaches the region of zodiacal light, the diffused matter of this region is heated, combines and reflects light thereby forming the tail. The curve in the tail is accounted for by the fact of the matter first heated retaining some of its heat after the comet has moved away. The old idea, and it is hardly old either, that the tail is due to a repulsive force in the head of the comet is contradicted by the fact that the tail is sometimes in front of the comet. The new theory explains this by asserting that the comet reflects the light in front as well as allowing it to pass through. The reason that comets are sometimes lost is due to the attraction of the superior planets. One comet was lost for a long time among the moons of Jupiter and when it finally came forth was divided into two parts. This is to be sure only a theory with regard to them and may be changed in the future but that it is the most reasonable of those which have as yet been presented, I think no one will question.

A Much Married Woman.

Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their marriage-day. Her present husband has been sick for the last four months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange.

The peculiar action on the kidneys and urinary organs of asparagus is frequently noticed during the season. Prof. Benson recently proved in the case of the Emperor William and others that in combination with malt and quinine it is an absolute specific for diseases of the liver, kidneys and urinary organs. His method has been adopted by the Malt Bitters Company, and this great German food is now composed of malt, Hops, quinine bark and asparagus.—Medical Times.

OUR CANDIDATE.

E. E. Thompson, Esq., made a splendid run in the County Convention at Lowell, last Tuesday, for Treasurer. He had more delegates than any other candidate, and within three of a majority over all on the first ballot. Unfortunately the second ballot was taken while a few of his friends were absent from the hall, and Mr. Stone was renominated by one majority. It was very provoking to have a majority of the delegates and then lose the nomination.

We would have been glad to have had it otherwise. While not a word can be said against Mr. Stone, who has held the office continuously for twenty-seven years, we know what Mr. Thompson's qualifications are; we know the man all the way through; we know he is "white," and eminently deserving the confidence of the people, and so we regret the failure of his friends to compass his nomination.

OHIO ELECTION.

The returns look as though a Democratic cyclone had struck Ohio last Tuesday. A remarkable change was the result of the contest at the polls, the Democrats carrying the state by a very heavy majority. The German population, generally Republican, voted with the Democracy on the temperance issue, and fairly overwhelmned their opponents. The Democrats made large gains in the number of Congressmen, which is the worst feature in the case. However, the Republicans had a just cause and fought a good fight, and if they did not succeed they deserved success.

ACCEPTS.

Monday morning papers contained General Butler's acceptance of the Democratic and Greenback nominations. They are devoted chiefly to National affairs, such as the tariff, civil service, public expenditures, river and harbor bill, etc. That part of the letters which treats of State matters is in noways brash, nor indicative of a sharp campaign on the part of the General. Indeed, the documents seem somewhat subdued in tone and spirit. They read just as though the author has but little, if any, faith in his success at the polls.

☞ The Cambridge Press talks to its neighbor, the Tribune, in such a kind, fatherly way that we shall be disappointed if there isn't a change in the feelings and conduct of that paper right away. The Tribune oughtn't to be seeking after strange goods at this stage of the game. Bowman will be elected by the biggest kind of a majority, and to oppose him will be kicking against the pricks. Read what the Press says:

The Cambridge Tribune is mad, clean through, because it can't get a "mongrel independent" to allow his name to be used as a candidate for the Fifth Congressional district, against "Lucky Bowman." Why, friend Dexter, S. Z. Bowman will have the largest majority ever given to a Congressional candidate in this district. Even Leopold Morse, with his "bar'l," couldn't stem the current of public sentiment in favor of Mr. Bowman. Cambridge will give him a handsome majority, and don't you forget it.

☞ Hon. Leopold Morse declines a Democratic nomination for Congress in this District. The army of "Independents" who were expected to fall into line and petition him to run, after dilligent search, cannot be found, and as a Democratic candidate, pure and simple, he does not propose to stand. He knows too that Mr. Bowman is as sure to be elected as he lives, and to spend time, money and labor in an abortive attempt to defeat him Mr. Morse respectfully declines. It shows good sense on the part of Mr. Morse.

☞ The Republicans held the biggest kind of a meeting in Tremont Temple on Monday evening. Gov. Long, Bishop, Ames, Crapo, Robinson and all the guns of heavy calibre were present and made speeches. The sentiment of the meeting was that General Butler would be nowhere this year.

☞ The "Independents" of the Ninth made a move to enmesh Mr. Haskell, one of the proprietors of the Boston Herald, in their toils, but did not succeed worth a cent. He was invited to stand as the "Independent" candidate for Congress in that District, but couldn't see it in that light.

☞ The Boston merchants did not take President Arthur's refusal to sup with them this evening very kindly. They had laid out for a grand banquet in his honor, but he wrote to them declining the feast and honor. Arthur is considerable of a snob, and isn't particularly enamored of Massachusetts anyhow.

☞ West Virginia held a State election last Tuesday and if the reports can be depended on the Democracy swept the board. That is what the returns strongly indicate. But it was expected that a Democratic victory would be gained.

☞ Hon. Charles Theodore Russell positively declines to take the Democratic Congressional nomination in this District. The Democrats are sorely pushed for a candidate to be beaten by Mr. Bowman.

☞ At the Democratic Senatorial Convention held here in Woburn on Tuesday to nominate a candidate in place of Mr. Perkins, who was not eligible, Capt. William Youngs of Wakefield was nominated.

☞ Some of the assistant Democratic papers, sailing under Republican colors, in this District are still casting around for somebody to beat Bowman with. They'll hunt in vain.

☞ The Democrats claim fifteen of the Ohio Congressmen elected last Tuesday. The result of the election was in nature of a Waterloo for the Republicans.

☞ Woodford of New York succeeded in making quite an idiot of himself in his speech at Tremont Temple the other night. He would have saved some credit by staying away from the meeting.

☞ Rum lost Ohio to the Republicans last Tuesday. Or rather, beer, for the Germans all went over to the Democracy.

☞ Mr. Lawrence, the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Sixth District, declines the honor, and a new deal becomes necessary.

☞ The President's reception in Boston on Wednesday was the biggest kind of an affair.

— The gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A. rooms is well patronized by the young men of the village. One evening last week there were fifty-one of them from the streets, and they had an elegant evening of it. There is no better place in town for real, sensible pleasure than at the gymnasium.

— The St. Charles C. T. A. will give an assembly in St. John's Institute Hall this evening for which great preparations have been made. — "Indian Summer" seldom or never arrives in this latitude until November. Some people have an idea that it makes its advent simultaneously with September.

— Carpenters, masons, and painters are busier than bees here this fall. There is any amount of work for them to do, and the time when their implements must be laid by is rapidly approaching.

— By a change in the time table of the Woburn and Stoneham barge, to take effect next Monday, the trip leaving Woburn at 10.45 A. M. and Stoneham at 11.30 A. M., is dropped and will not longer be run. The late trip on Wednesday night is also stopped. The new table will be published next week.

— Mr. A. E. Thompson tried to get the Committee on Highways to include Market Square (that is what we call it), on the north side of the Common, with a big elm in the middle, in the "mecadamizing of Main street," but couldn't make it go. — T. H. Hill & Co. are agents for a large number of the best home and foreign insurance companies with which they are doing a good business. Not only do these gentlemen represent good companies, but they do business on business principles, fairly, at moderate rates, and to the satisfaction of the public. We cheerfully recommend Hill & Co. to parties who want policies in good companies issued by responsible agents.

— Last evening the Young Peoples' Union of the Unitarian Church assembled in the vestry of the meeting house for the purpose of laying plans for the season's entertainments, and to get things into working order. This society have laid the Woburn people under a good many obligations for pleasant evenings spent, and we suspect they will give us something nice this fall and winter.

— We have just received from the publishers "THE WHEELMAN," a handsome monthly magazine devoted to the interests of bicycling. It is a Boston production, neat, handsome and lively, and worthy of the support of the wheelmen of the Commonwealth. Its literary and pictorial contents are first class. The Woburn Club should extend to this new candidate for public favor a hearty patronage.

— A. H. Orr, who has had the management of the Woburn telephone exchange for a few weeks has been transferred to Charlestown by Mr. Division Superintendent Clarkson. He is a fine operator. Miss Ella Gilcreast has charge of the exchange now, who, with her sister, will attend to all business by day, and for night service, which is very light, a smart intelligent boy is wanted. A good lad will find it a "soft thing." Miss Gilcreast is a capital operator, and will give the Woburn public satisfaction.

— The Phalanx went to Boston on Wednesday to participate in the military display and do escort duty for President Arthur.

— It is currently reported that the School Committee of this town have issued a School Directory. It must be for their own accommodation.

— On Tuesday evening the 6 30 train from Boston met with an accident between Medford Hillside and West Medford which delayed things for some time.

— Smith & Son are having a very satisfactory trade in carpets. They are determined to make it an object for Woburn people to buy their carpets at home.

— There is a flock of gypsies around here who make daily raids on the houses with baskets to sell. Generally gypsies are not the most upright and conscientious people in the world.

— The fire alarm on Sunday was caused by a slight blaze at the gas house. The damage was very slight. By the alarm we don't see how the firemen ever found the location of the fire.

— The other night sneak theives entered the boarding house of George Cully on Main street and stole two watches belonging to boarders. These light-fingered gentry should be looked for.

— On Tuesday afternoon next Rev. A. B. Earle, the evangelist, is expected to be present at the Rooms of the Y. M. C. A. and take charge of the meeting there held for promotion of holiness.

— Mrs. E. T. Howard, whose husband died some two months ago, and who now resides with her father here, received from the Order of Golden Cross, of which her husband was a member, $2000, that being the amount due her.

— Mr. F. B. French, who has, since the first of May, been in Norfolk, Va., has received the appointment of Assistant Civil Engineer on the Mississippi river improvements, and will spend the winter on the river in the vicinity of Arkansas City.

— Our correspondent "Observer" hits the whole row of nails square on the head. A face of clay don't affright him to any great extent, and yet, taking all the facts together and bunching the circumstances of the case, it looks to us as though he were gnawing a a very hard file. But then, a good deal of life is made up of gnawing files.

— Superintendent Davis and Committeeman Norris attended the meeting of School Committees and Superintendents of Middlesex county held in Boston the other day to organize an association. One was formed and named "The Middlesex County Association of School Committees and Superintendents" (T. M. C. A. S. C. S.), of which Amos E. Lawrence of Newton was chosen President; John T. Prince of Waltham, Vice-President; Mary C. Reynolds of Natick, secretary.

— We didn't observe anything of a United States flag floating in the breeze from the top of the Liberty Pole on the Common last Wednesday in honor of the President's visit to Boston. But what better can be expected from a Bourbon Town Board? A hard lot of Democrats like they are are not going to display much bunting in honor of a Republican President, you bet! If the flag had been run up on Wednesday wouldn't the Advertiser, the Democratic organ, have howled though?

— Mr. Fred Leeds has had a telephone put into his drug store, and is now prepared to do business with all the modern improvements. He would inform the public that doctors' calls and orders for medicines will now be received by him at all hours by telephone and promptly attended to. Persons desiring any doctor will notify Mr. Leeds, night or day, who will notify the doctor, by which a great saving of time may be made. It is an excellent arrangement, and will no doubt add materially to Mr. Leeds's business.

— Mr. Clarence Littlefield, Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, has issued the following notice, dated October 10, to the public: Commencing Monday, October 16, for the purpose of thoroughly testing the new Steam Gong, instead of the usual one blow at quarter of twelve for test, a box will be pulled at that time each week day in the following order:—62, 63, 51, 53, 56, 32, 35, 45, 46, 23, 26. Should an alarm of fire be given from either box after October 13, that box will be omitted and the next take its place. Should anything be found wrong the same box will be pulled on the succeeding day.

— Last Monday evening the Woburn Public Improvement Association held a meeting for the election of officers to serve for the year to come. The list chosen is a capital one, every man and woman on it being actively interested in the progress and wellfare of the town. They are all leading citizens too, who when they put their hands to the plow never look back to see who is coming and how far they have got. The officers elected are as follows:—President, Charles B. Bryant; Vice Presidents, E. W. Champney, G. R. Gage, Charles W. Bryant, John Johnson; Secretary, Charles D. Adams; Treasurer, Alva S. Wood; Executive Committee, B. F. Whittemore, John W. Johnson, R. H. Chamberlain, F. A. Flint, J. B. McDonald, C. A. Jones, B. F. Hinckley, Jacob Brown, Mrs. C. D. Adams, Mrs. C. G. Lund, Mrs. E. W. Champney, Mrs. J. S. True, Miss Hattie C. Blake, Miss Maria Carter.

— The opening entertainment of the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course, Elmore A. Pierce, manager, will be given at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening, October 18, by the Royal Hand Bell Ringers, to hear which is worth going miles. This is not the common sort of Bell-Ringers, but something as superior as a flute is superior to a pumkin-vine whistle, and if the people don't say so when they have heard it, the money will be refunded. Everybody who has heard or knows anything about this company says it is A 1—charming, and a good deal the best thing in the line of music from bells in the world. Mr. Pierce has secured this eminent troupe of artists at a great expense to open the Woburn course with, and it is to be hoped that real encouragement will be given him by turning out a full house next Wednesday evening. The best plan would be to buy season tickets, for every entertainment of the course will be fine, and all of them should be attendended.

— Mr. W. R. Putman advertises Rooms to Rent.

— We have had some cold, sour, fall-like weather this week, and some not so much so.

— We shall tell all about the fall opening of Mrs. Parker next week. See her card.

— The Home Savings Bank of Boston has declared its regular semi-annual dividend at the rate of four per cent. per annum.

— About 11 o'clock on last Monday evening, Mr. George W. Andrews, after an illness of some months, died at his home on Main street. He was born in Enfield, N. H., in 1814, came to Woburn about twenty-five years ago, and has resided here a large part of the time since. Though not one of the original members of the M. E. Church here he was among the first to join it, and has always been an active, earnest and efficient worker therein. An honest man, a devout, humble Christian, charitable and kind, no man in our community was more highly esteemed than Mr. Andrews, and his death will be sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He left a wife and two children to lament his loss. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon, at the M. E. Church.

— We have done the sum, and the answer is: If the Boston & Lowell Company would sell ten tickets from Woburn to Boston for a dollar instead of five tickets for ninety cents, its profits from the passenger traffic between the two points would be greater than at present. Figures say that, and figures will not lie. It is a little strange that the company does not see it this light. Years ago there were plenty of men, and some of them pretended statesmen, who were willing to make oath in open court that to reduce the postage on letters from existing rates to five cents all over the Union would ruin the nation. What was the result of the reduction? The Eastern and Revere Beach railroads are just coining money on their five cent rates, because it is the true system; and if the B. & L. would follow suit it would have to buy an extra vault to hold its money.

— It was worth one's while to be at the Unitarian church last Sunday evening. There was a houseful of people and they all appeared to be glad that they were not somewhere else. The vesper services were simply delightful. The Mozart Quartette were finely in voice and at their best. Endicott, the tenor, never handled himself better, and Mr. Shaw came in on the second bass in a manner that fully justified his reputation as a vocalist. The program couldn't have been bettered according to our idea, and the most critical could find no fault with its execution. Davis and Dickerson are first class. The organ was a little too ponderous for people well up towards the pulpit, but it was mellow and handled with great skill. Miss Poland of Boston had our preference, though Mrs. Linscott is prime. Briefly, it was a concert that one would have been perfectly satisfied to have paid a dollar for a reserved seat at. The pastor's reading and remarks were excellent and worked in between the music admirably. It was nice all the way through.

— The monthly temperance meeting at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on last Sunday afternoon was the best one that has yet been held. It was impossible to admit into the hall all who came to the meeting and quite a good many persons reluctantly left, finding the rooms were already filled to their utmost capacity. Public interest in these meetings is very encouraging, and increasing. Their influence is being felt in the reclamation of victims to strong drink. The good which they are destined to accomplish cannot be estimated. The exercises were exceedingly interesting. Eight members of the Mendelssohn club, P. E. Bancroft leader, assisted by Dr. Lang's orchestra, furnished splendid music for the occasion, which was highly enjoyed. To the listener whose heart was in the right place nothing could have been sweeter or more mellowing than this music—the singing of Gospel Hymns, temperance pieces, etc. and the accompaniment of a large orchestra of string and wind instruments. It gave great pleasure to all who had hearts attuned to the harmony of sweet sounds. Then there were brief addresses, speeches and remarks by numerous persons, all to the point, full of good meat and genuine feeling. A reformation spirit pervaded the meeting, which we hope will continue to grow and thrive until a rumseller can't find a place for the sole of his foot in Woburn.

— The annual fair of the Y. M. C. A. is being talked about, and will be held within a few weeks. Due notice of time and place will be given.

— It becomes necessary to raise the sidewalks on the north side of Main street on or adjoining the Wade estate several inches in order to fetch the mecadamizing and things out suent. We believe that was not anticipated, and somehow matters are not working smoothly. There is talk about damages and one thing and another, but what it will all end in we can't say. In fact, it isn't our funeral any way.

— The Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Robert King at their residence on Main street, last Saturday evening, was a very pleasant affair indeed. Mr. and Mrs. King are a worthy couple of aged people, who are respected and thought much of by this community, and when the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day came round, as with one accord, these friends agreed to celebrate the occasion appropriately and in a way pleasant to bride and groom. So, when Saturday evening came a large party of good people assembled at the pleasant home of the Kings, and made the hearts of the old couple happy. Many valuable presents were made, among them about $50 in gold, and other handsome and useful things. The inner man was abundantly served, and the evening was filled up with pleasant talk, mirth and social intercourse. Rev. George A. Simonson, pastor of the Baptist Church, made some remarks suitable to the occasion, and there was good music to sweeten the bridal ceremonies. On the whole it was an affair that will not soon be forgotten by any who participated in it.

— At noon last Monday, Mr. Willard Graves died very suddenly at the residence of his son, Dr. Frank W. Graves, on Pleasant street. His age was about 74 years. Though ailing for a short time back he had been seriously ill only a few days, and on the morning of his death was feeling so much better that his recovery was hoped for. About noon, however, he suddenly grew worse and lived only a few moments. The deceased was born in Windsor, Vermont, where he resided for some years, and afterwards at Concord, N. H. During the administration of President Buchanan he was an officer in the Boston Custom House and served the government faithfully. He was a man that has always been highly esteemed. Here where he had many warm friends he was greatly respected. He was quiet, unobtrusive, a man of excellent sense and a kind heart, and wherever he is or has been known there will be mourners for him. Mr. Graves retired from active business some years ago, since which he has led a quiet life, and made the most in the best sense of his declining years. He was well known by almost everybody in Woburn and will be greatly missed. His remains were taken to Concord, N. H., on Wednesday for burial.

— On October 14, 1869—13 years ago tomorrow— the soldiers' monument standing on the Common in this village was dedicated. It was a great day for Woburn, that is to say, there was a large celebration here, which a great many people attended, besides some other things. We have before us a copy of the "Order of Exercises" kindly furnished us by Edward Simonds, Esq., Woburn's veteran Collector, from which we learn that the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx did escort duty for the great procession; that Brown's Brigade Band, Gilmore's Band, and the Metropolitan Band furnished the music. Col. William T. Grammer was Chief Marshal, and his Aides were Capt. S. Converse, Capt. T. F. Page, Lieut. J. E. Tileston and George J. Pinder. General Cogswell delivered an address as also did the Chairman of the Monument Committee. The firemen and all the civic societies were in the procession, in the first division of which rode Gov. Claflin and Staff. The clergy were out in force, and the songs of the children and musical societies were heard at intervals during the day. By invitation of some of the fun-loving young men Daniel Pratt, the Great American Traveller, was present, and the joke cost them $10 although the General claimed $25. It was a great celebration, and though it occurred thirteen years ago, we suspect that, to Col. Grammer, Mr. Simonds and many others, it seems to have taken place a good deal less than half those years ago.

— The audience that went to Lyceum Hall last Monday evening to listen to the lecture of Venier Voldo and enjoy its illustrations was composed of our best and most intelligent people, and was therefore appreciative. They received a full equivalent for their money and were handsomely repaid for the time spent in the hall. Mr. Voldo is an educated gentleman, a great traveller, keen, intelligent observer, and his illustrated lectures occupy a front rank as literary entertainments. They are not only pleasant to listen to, but highly instructive, for which reason they are warmly endorsed by educated people. On Monday evening Mr. Voldo's theme was Colorado, with a flying sweep into New Mexico. Starting at Omaha the spectator is taken over the great plains to Denver, views of which wonderfully enterprising city are given; from thence to the Rocky Mountains, through Georgetown to the great Parks a hundred and more miles beyond, catching views of Pike's, Long's and other Peaks, and the Snowy Range. Swinging around, vivid descriptions of Colorado Springs, Manitou, and the Garden of the Gods are given; the most noted canyons are visited; Leadville, as it was and is, described and scenes viewed; old Mexican towns with their ancient adobe houses, churches, and halls of state are all portrayed in lecture and illustration in a manner that could not but please and interest. Briefly, it was a very fine entertainment, and our advice to the people of this village is to go to Lyceum Hall this Friday evening and enjoy a genuine literary and pictorial treat.

The Law.

MR. EDITOR:—The look of things in Woburn could not well be worse. The fiend of intemperance stares us in the face: apathy everywhere: men sworn to enforce laws, indifferent, careless, faithless. The law requires that Selectmen license only those they deem fit to be licensed. What judgment they have exercised!! The law expressly provides that the Board of Selectmen SHALL require all screens, of whatever sort, to be removed so that the view of licensed premises shall be unobstructed; "and the placing or maintaining of any of said obstructions shall of itself make the license void."

The law distinctly provides that the Selectmen may declare a license forfeited upon proof satisfactory to them that the legal conditions have been violated; and the licensee shall be disqualified to receive a license for a year thereafter.

The law distinctly provides that anyone violating the conditions of his license SHALL BE punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not less than one, nor more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment.

We are all the time told that evidence is so difficult to procure, that men will perjure themselves in court. But the facts are patent to the dullest observer that the laws above quoted are all the time violated by men whom our selectmen have licensed and so declared their opinion as to their fitness to be licensed. The law clothes the selectmen with authority to recall the license of any who "upon proof satisfactory to them" violate the conditions of the license law. Gentlemen of the Board of Selectmen, how much evidence would satisfy you? How much do you need? Every consideration—your official integrity, the good name of our town, the public safety, all demand that you do your duty in these regards. Are your policemen hired for any duty? If so, are they expected to go about with eyes bandaged?

The public have the right to demand a better enforcement of law than is to-day known here. The existing state of things is lamentable, disgrace, shameful; it is filled with proof of official incompetence, if not of self-determined blindness.

WINCHESTER.

Rev. Mr. Leonard preached at home last Sunday.

Mr. W. F. Fitch and family have been down in the old Pine Tree State.

The preaching at the Unitarian Church next Sunday will be by Rev. Grindall Reynolds.

The Episcopal services, as before stated, are held in Harmony Hall every Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

Dr. Adaline Church arrived home from Europe last Tuesday week. She has been studying and walking the hospitals in Paris.

Rev. Mr. Williams and F. W. Perry were delegates to the installation of Rev. C. J. Staples at Reading last Wednesday evening.

Some necessary concreting has been done to the sidewalk and gutter on Prospect street. It is a great improvement, for which thanks.

The last Star indulged in its regular weekly lick at the Woburn Advertiser's Winchester reporter. This time it was on church reporting.

I still go for Dr. Brown for Representative. There is no mistake about it, George P. Brown, Esq., would honor Winchester in the General Court.

John Callahan, a broth of a boy, gives our police trouble every now and then. John loves the "critter" too well for his own good, and when full of it is a reckless fellow.

The Baptist people hold divine services at 2.30 p. m. on Sundays instead of in the forenoon. The Sunday school is held in the morning, the better to accommodate all round.

The Star takes kindly to Deacon Converse, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth District. Whether it will support Converse or Lawrence remains to be seen.

Messers. Wadleigh and Tweed attended the Boston meeting of Middlesex educationists last week, and aided in forming "The Middlesex County Association of School Committees and Superintendents."

Winchester is having accessions to her population from neighboring towns. Quite a good many have recently moved here, and more would come if good places could be had cheap. The fact is we are on the boom here.

Mr. George F. Richmond has moved from West Medford to this village and taken the Fletcher house on Church street—a very pleasant place. He was formerly a reporter on the Boston dailies, and is now engaged in stenographic work.

On Monday last the Selectmen's rooms in this town were connected with the outside world by telephone. On that day Mr. Division Superintendent Clarkson and men did the job. I find the people here are growing more and more hungry for the telephone.

Some godless boys on mischief bent raised Ned here last Monday night and caused the Fire Department to be called out. They filled a piece of old stovepipe full of all sorts of things and then shot it off in the Baptist Church yard, and it raised such a commotion that everybody thought there was a fire sure.

At a regular meeting of the Fortnightly Club held on last Monday afternoon a very interesting essay on "Domestic Economy" was read by Mrs. T. F. Wells. The Club is flourishing and bids fair to become one of the most useful organizations here. On next Monday it will give a tea, to which friends will receive tickets.

The pastor of the Catholic church here is an earnest, active, aggressive temperance advocate, and does much good. He preaches temperance in his pulpit, not in a namby-pamby way, but strips to the work, is in downright earnest, and condemns rumselling and rumdrinking in no soft and tender tones. He keeps square abreast of the times, and is doing good in the temperance cause.

I learned after sending my Winchester pickings and gleanings last week that Hon. A. B. Coffin would not be a candidate for Councillor, nor allow his name to be presented to the convention. It was on the understanding that Mr. Heywood would not be a candidate again that Mr. Coffin permitted his friends to use his name, and when it was announced that Mr. Heywood was going in for another pull Mr. Coffin withdrew. Our people were sorry at this turn of affairs, because there was a good show for our respected townsman, and we all wanted him to have the place.

The Harvest Concert at the Unitarian Church last Sunday evening was a very nice and enjoyable affair indeed. The house was elegantly decorated with plants, flowers, autumn leaves, etc., beautifully arranged, and the pulpit was in an especial manner inviting and pretty. The exercises were fully in keeping with the cheerful surrounding scenes and appropriate to the season. Everybody present was pleased with the concert.

The Executive Committee of the Village Improvement Association have appointed the following sub-committees: on streets, sidewalks and tree-planting—S. W. Twombly, J. H. Tyler, G. H. Eustis; on public grounds,—C. F. Lunt, H. C. Miller, George D. Rand; on depots, railroad facilities and buildings—D. N. Skillings, Edwin Ginn, F. H. Nourse. It is the intention and aim of the Association to do all that is possible to do for Winchester, not only in the way of its adornment, but to fetch business and population here. Good men are at the helm and I feel quite sure that their influence will be felt for the benefit of our handsome town.

A late issue of the Boston Globe contained the announcement that an old tomb in this town located near the Myopia Club House, whose owner lives in Arlington, contains the bones of several people which are not only exposed to the view of any one curious to see them but are made playthings of by boys who have free access to the interior, the door of the tomb having rotted away, and left everything exposed. According to the Globe somebody is allowing an outrage to be perpetrated not only on the memory of departed people, and the sense of decency of the community, but on the town, and it is high time that this thing should be looked after and put a stop to.

Republican County Convention.

The Republican Convention for Middlesex County was held at Lowell last Tuesday. It was full and harmonious. C. H. Richardson of Lowell call to order and J. L. Sargent of Dracut was chosen to preside. Henry Pitman of Somerville, Secretary of the Committee on Credentials, reported 55 cities and towns represented by 225 delegates. An informal ballot for County Commissioner for the unexpired term of the late Harrison Harwood resulted: Whole number 223; Wm. H. Ingraham of Watertown had 98; Wm. S. Frost of Marlboro', 98; Wm. Nutt of Natick, 12; rest scattering. The formal ballot gave Frost 119, Ingraham 105, and the former was nominated. Joseph H. Thompson of Lowell was renominated unanimously by acclamation as a candidate for Register of Deeds for the Northern District and Charles B. Stevens of Somerville for the Southern District.

Daniel G. Walton received 141 votes for Commissioner for three years and John H. Hooper 71 on an informal ballot, and the former was nominated by acclamation. For Treasurer, Amos Stone of Cambridge was nominated.

Sixth Councillor District.

The Republican convention of the Sixth Councillor Convention was held at Lowell on Tuesday, October 10, and was fully attended. George S. Littlefield of Winchester was Chairman of the convention, the business of which was speedily despatched. There was something of a contest for the nomination, which was finally won by the present incumbent, Hon. George Heywood of Concord. This is Mr. Heywood's fourth nomination to the position. He is very popular with the Republicans of the District who insisted that he should serve another term.

Musical.

From the Boston Home Journal.

The frequent appearance of the KNABE PIANOS in our concert rooms is not at all surprising to those acquainted with the history of the firm, or the character of the instrument itself. Not long since, the writer, when in a neighboring city, had occasion to play upon one of these pianos. It had withstood the test of twenty-five years' service. The greatest pleasure was still to be derived from its tone. It was so resonant and musical that it seemed as if—like old wine—it must have improved with age. In no other way than this could we justly illustrate its perfect state of preservation. The KNABE PIANO of to-day is in the foremost rank of instruments. As one listens to its ringing vibrations, it appears as though the poetry of tone itself were being revealed in a language far more complimentary and just than any verbal praise could possibly be.

A Friend in need.—DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing all diseases of the lungs and throat, coughs, colds, and pulmonary affectations and consumption? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

LITERARY NOTICES.

OUR LITTLE ONES for October makes a rather late appearance, but it is a beauty. The young people who cannot be satisfied with the stories and delightful pictures of the number must be hard indeed to please.

GOLDEN DAYS for October is received. We unhesitatingly pronounce this one of the best monthlies for "boys and girls" published in this country. It is elegantly gotten up, and is a real gem of a magazine. None are more beautifully illustrated, while its literary contents are first class. GOLDEN DAYS is published by James Elverson at Philadelphia.

WILFORD'S MICROCOSM for October presents a table of contents of an unusually high order of literary merit. The papers are devoted to religious questions and the bearings of the discoveries and the theories of modern science on them, all religiously discussed by able pens, and exceedingly interesting. A. Wilford Hall is the editor and proprietor of this popular and able religio-scientific monthly, which is published by Hall & Co., 20 Park Row, New York City, at $1.00 a year.

"Why suffer longer?" These are the words spoken but a day or two since, by one who for years had passed sleepless nights, and who chanced to meet a friend similarly afflicted. "Hops and Malt Bitters has completely restored me."

Did you read how Josiah Pitkin of Chelsea, Vt., was cured of a terrible sore leg, by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the blood purifier?

The world has no mercy on the man who makes a mistake, however much of good he may have accomplished. The Philadelphia Record notes that William Penn, when he had all the land in the state, made a great mistake in not laying out Chestnut street one hundred feet wide.

If the blood be impoverished, as manifested by pimples, eruptions, ulcers, or running sores, scrofulous tumors, swellings or general debility, take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Sold by all druggists.

A STARTLING STATEMENT!

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 1st, 1881.

DR. CHARLES CRAIG:—Dear Sir: Suffering as I have been for a long time with a fearful cold, that finally settled into what is termed a quick consumption, and so pronounced by the attending physician, I heard of your Consumption Cure, and while having little faith in anything benefiting me, procured some of it, used it, and to-day am to the wonder of myself and friends apparently a well man. I write this as I feel in duty bound to do for the benefit of suffering humanity, and can but hope that the thousands who are now suffering with that supposed incurable disease Consumption will try your Consumption Remedy. They will receive speedy relief and a permanent cure. You can send any one to me who cares to be advised as to the manner in which your medicines cured me.

P. H. SULLIVAN, Captain Police.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 14, 1882.

We, the undersigned are personally acquainted with Captain P. H. Sullivan. We knew of his debilitated condition at one time, are knowing to the fact that he is now daily on duty, and are satisfied he would not make any statement that was not strictly true.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER
OIL AND LIME.

Wilbor's Compound of Pure Cod-Liver Oil and Lime. The advantages of this compound over the plain Oil is, that the nauseating taste of the Oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but in this form the trouble is obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod-Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. For sale by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and by all druggists.

The Woburn Journal

HIS WORD OF HONOR.

The "Green Dragon," at Orpington, assumed to be an inn, was really little more than a wayside stopping place. Mr. Hunter, landlord and proprietor, was therefore not a little surprised and flurried when, upon a raw October afternoon, a young man presented himself at the bar of the "Green Dragon," and asked languidly if he could be accommodated with a bed and a sitting-room.

"A bed, sir?" replied Mr. Hunter, a big man with red face and gray hair; "yes I think we can manage to give you a bed."

"And a sitting-room?"

"A sitting-room?" echoed the landlord, in a tone of one who is considering some great undertaking; "one minute if you please, sir."

And Mr. Hunter disappeared into the little room adjoining the bar, there to hold counsel with some second person; the upshot being that, in a few minutes, Mrs. Hunter and a few Hunters just out of the crawling state, issued forth, bearing respectively working materials, socks in process of being mended, tin whistles and decapitated dolls.

"You can have this room all to yourself, sir," said Mr. Hunter, triumphantly.

"You really must not let me disturb you," replied the traveler.

"Don't you mention it," replied the landlord, in a tone which was at once genial and confidential; "we would not turn a customer away from our doors. You see we do not have much parlor company."

"And this is the only room you have that is disengaged?"

The traveler was glad enough to enter the apartment and draw close to the fire the one dilapidated arm-chair.

Arthur Seton, barrister by profession, and writer from choice, was not really more than thirty, though he looked considerably older; for the dark hair and beard were streaked with gray, and the face, with its regular, handsome features wore a look of intense mental weariness.

For some time he leaned indolently back, his hands clasped behind his head; at last he rose and took from his bag a locked-up diary, which he opened, and availing himself of pen and ink which stood upon the table, made the following entry:

"October 17, 1874.—Got up late. Called on the Brainstones; George was out. Had a pleasant chat with Annie; went like a fool to Richmond, and like a fool, haunted the Well house. It looked just the same as in the dear old days; but I heard children playing in the garden. The house I believe is let to city people. Came back to London; dined at the Pall Mall; went to the club. Got back to chambers late. Wrote a column 'Review.' A weary, weary day. Shall I never know a moment's forgetfulness?"

He drew then from the leaves of the diary a letter written in a delicate hand and addressed, "Arthur Seton, Esq., 12 Gray's Inn." This letter he regarded with a long, sad, loving look; then, resting his head on his hand, he read it through very slowly. It ran as follows:

"My Dear Arthur: If you will be so suspicious, so jealous and exacting, I cannot see how we are ever to be happy. Faith without works is dead, and love without faith is no blessing, but a weary burden. I am tired of cross words and looks. Some women, I believe, like the feverish excitement of quarrels, but I only wish for peace. This miserable jealousy is quite unworthy of you. Do try and put it from you; and remember that love, once wounded, is sometimes hurt past hope of recovery. I received your article quite safely, but I cannot speak about it now. You have made me too sad, too weary, and even a little indignant. Yours affectionately.

Alice Clarefield."

He replaced the letter, closed the diary, took up his pipe and began smoking. The early part of this day had been fine and mild, but toward the afternoon the sky grew leaden and the wind shifted to the northeast. Now the wind was rising and the rain was falling—a cold, penetrating impetuous, determined rain.

For want of something better to do, Seton began to write a letter; but he made slow work of it. For minutes together he sat holding the pen listlessly, leaning his arm wearily upon the table, listening, as we all listen when alone, to what sounds may be going on near us, from a feeling that is not curiosity, but more overpowering.

Suddenly what must have been a very light vehicle dashed swiftly down the road and drew up to the door of the "Green Dragon," while the voice of the new comer became audible. Seton, however, could only catch a few disconnected words, such as "caught in the rain—delicate—shelter—Chiselhurst—closed carriage."

Then the door opened, the landlord presented himself upon the threshold, and said, in a very pointed manner:

"If you please, sir, a young lady, driving over to Sevenoaks in a light open trap, has been caught in the rain, and her servant wants to know if I can give her a sitting-room while he drives back to Chiselhurst for a closed carriage."

"And is this the only one you have?" rejoined Seton. "Oh, ask her in by all means. However, I am sorry the room smells so of smoke," he added, as he knocked the ashes from his pipe.

"Don't mention it, sir, and thank you very much," replied the landlord.

In another moment the door opened again, and the unexpected intruder entered—a lady tall and graceful, having a pale, Madonna like face, and golden hair shining like an aureole round a classic head.

Seton's face had grown white to the very lips, and his voice quivered perceptibly as, extending his hand, he said:

"This is a very unexpected meeting."

"Very unexpected, echoed the lady, removing her wet mantle, and sitting down on the leather sofa. The recognition had been mutual, but women, as a general thing have more self-possession than the sterner sex.

"Let me recommend this chair," said Seton, laying his hand upon the one from which he had just risen. "No, thank you; I prefer sitting away from the fire."

"I am sorry the room should smell so of tobacco," observed Seton, after a pause, "but you see, I did not expect the pleasure of a visitor."

She smiled a rather forced smile by way of answer, and Seton folded elaborately and put into an envelope a blank sheet of paper.

"The country is very beautiful around here," he observed, writing his own name with great care upon the envelope.

"We have only been back from the continent six weeks," she observed, after a pause. "Mamma has taken a house near Chiselhurst. I was driving over to Sevenoaks this morning, and I was caught in the rain, and induced to ask for shelter here."

"And how is Mrs. Clarefield?"

"Mamma is quite well, thank you." Then after a pause, "Are you stopping here?"

"Hardly," said Seton, with an assumption of gayety in his tone, "but I'll tell you all about it. My friends kindly took it into their heads that I was sticking too closely to work—that I wanted fresh air and exercise—so they bound me over on my word of honor to walk from London to Hastings in a week. I acquiesce in everything now, so, of course, I acquiesced in this, and this is my first day of hard labor and imprisonment."

"But you used—," began the lady; then she colored a little and seemed unwilling to finish her sentence; "you used to be so fond of walking."

"But a man changes a good deal in three years," he replied, wearily.

It would weary you, reader, to set down here the dreary commonplaces with which these two tried to beguile the time for over an hour. At last they took refuge in silence, while the wind roared, and the rain lashed the window, the dusk came on prematurely, and Seton looked out on the cheerless prospect, shivered as with the cold. Then the lady rose very quietly, stirred the fire into a blaze, and resumed her seat on the sofa.

"No, you shouldn't really," said Seton, not turning round, however, and with a look of pain on his face. It is wonderful what suffering some small, commonplace word or action may cause us. What vistas of possible joys may they not open up to us.

"I suppose the carriage will soon be back," said Alice, presently, and speaking with effort; "our coachman drives very fast."

"Yes; your term of imprisonment will soon be up," rejoined Seton, resting his arms upon the mantlepiece, and examining with critical interest a photograph before him.

"How the time passes!" said Alice, in a low voice, as if speaking to herself. Then, with a sudden energy, "I cannot tell when we shall meet agian. Before we part, answer me one question. You are looking worn and weary—are you happy?"

Now he stood before her, and through the firelight his eyes flashed on her, as he said, in a low, harsh voice:

"Of which you need not fear the repetition," she rejoined, with cutting formality.

"No, it can't end like this," he went on. "Do you know, ever since you have been here, I have bitten my lips through and through to keep them from speaking of the past? This meeting was not of my seeking and it seems to me unmanly to take advantage of this opportunity."

"We are sometimes so much mistaken," she said, hurriedly, but her words were hardly audible, and he continued:

"Alice, you have treated me badly. On that day, now three years ago, when I gave you my love, and believed in yours, I was frank with you. I told you how wild and irregular my life had been, and how full of faults I was. You reclaimed me—you transformed my days—you made life pure and fair; and then, because some thorn in my love hurt you, you threw it all away and left me to perish miserably." She would have interrupted him, but he silenced her with a gesture, and went on: "And now when we meet after three years, you ask me if I am happy. If I loved you once, I shall love you forever. Do I look happy?"

"I think there were faults on both sides, she said quietly.

"Yes, there were," he replied; "but I was reading your last letter only to-day. Oh, how terribly bitter it was!"

"And have you forgotten your answer to that letter?" she said passionately, her voice quivering and her breast heaving.

"I don't remember it word for word," he returned quickly; "I know it was written on the impulse of the moment."

"But I have it by heart." "You said if your love, in its heart and strength, was a little exacting, mine was cold and tideless; in fact, no love, only a cold, sluggish affection. You almost thought I was right, and that we could not be happy. I am naturally proud," she went on; "but a woman with less pride than I could not have acted differently. Only one course was left to me—to be silent."

"Well—it is all over now; we shall probably never meet again."

"You won't take my friendship, then?"

"No, thank you; you are very generous, but I do not want that gift."

He drew himself wearily into a chair, and for a time there was silence. Hope is so subtle, so intangible, that we are only aware of its existance when it has ceased to be. Arthur Seton looked upon himself as a man without hope. It seemed to him that his life could not be more desolate than it was, yet who shall say what feeling, of which he was not directly conscious, may have sustained him during the last three years? Now everything seemed gone—there was nothing left for him but death.

Presently a carriage came down the road; carriage lamps flashed through the dusk, and grew stationary opposite the window. Mr. Hunter bustled in an announced that the carriage had come for the young lady, and had done the distance wonderfully quick. Then the door shut, and they were alone together again.

Softly and distinctly Seton heard her speak his name, "Arthur!" but he did not move. It seemed to him that he would keep back all his love, clinch fast his heart till she was gone, and then die swiftly of the pain.

"Arthur, I am waiting, dear. Won't you come? Are you not going to forgive me?"

He groped his way toward her. She stretched out her hand and drew him to her. Then he bent down; she raised her face, and the hearts and lips so long disunited came together in a long, passionate kiss. He knelt down by her, her head sank upon his shoulders, and for many minutes they remained thus, lost in love's profound peace and mistery. And the corks continued to pop, and the wagoners on their way to London tramped in an out of the bar, and good-nights were exchanged between customers and landlord, and as Arthur folded Alice's mantle around her, she said, shyly:

"You are coming back with me to see mama, are you not?"

"May I?" he answered joyfully.

So the bedroom which Mrs. Hunter had been preparing all the afternoon, and of which she was not a little proud, remained unoccupied; but the payment was lavish and the day's labor not regretted.

Oh! that never-to-be-forgotten ride to Chiselhurst throught the wild, windy evening! The rain ceased, and strange voices were abroad in the wind, singing jubilantly over love rerisen and redeeming. The clouds drifted away, and the pure, sweet moonlight quivered over wet fields and trees, and seemed love's benediction.

The reader is left to imagine the arrival home. Arthur had been a favorite with Mrs. Clarefield, and in the old days of quarrels would always take his part. When dinner was disposed of, Mrs. Clarefield pleaded household duties and went to her room. There she sat down before the fire and wept, dear soul, over the happiness of her children. Down stairs these two were very quiet. To them love was a solemn thing, and they were silent lovers. The moments went swiftly on.

Presently Alice said, as she looked up in Arthur's face:

"You are not going to continue your walk to Hastings, this week?"

He answered with a smile:

"But, dear, I have pledged my word of honor to do so."

"I command you to break it."

He did so; but none of his friends brought it as accusation against him that he for once in his life had broken his word of honor.

A Much Married Woman.
Mrs. Fowler, of this city, was married last January to her sixth husband, and strange as it may seem, five of them died exactly two years from their marriage-day. Her present husband has been sick for the last four months with chronic jaundice, and was given up by four of our best physicians; as a last resort he began using Sulphur Bitters, and yesterday told our reporter that they had saved his life, smilingly saying that he guessed Mrs. Fowler would be unable to take a seventh better half for some time to come.—Exchange.

A Delicious Appetizer,
That ensures digestion and enjoyment of food; a tonic that brings strength to the weak and rest to the nervous; a harmless diarrhœa cure that don't constipate—just what every family needs—Parker's Ginger Tonic.

The peculiar action on the kidneys and urinary organs of asparagus is frequently noticed during the season. Prof. Benson recently proved in the case of the Emperor William and others that in combination with malt and quinine it is an absolute specific for diseases of the liver, kidneys and urinary organs. His method has been adopted by the Malt Bitters Company, and this great German food is now composed of malt, Hops, quinine bark and asparagus.—Medical Times.

THOSE PETITIONS.

When a couple of weeks ago or so Hon. Leopold Morse was appealed to by the Democracy of this District to stand again for Congress he turned the matter over in his mind and concluded he wouldn't take it. He gave quite a number of reasons for declining the honor, chief among which was that he had all he wanted of Congress, and that private interests demanded more of his time and attention than he had been able to give them during his somewhat lengthy and tolerably brilliant congressional career. It was a very pretty and plausible letter that he wrote for publication, and by a good many believed to be honest.

But the Democracy knew better all the time. They held a convention, made no nomination, and adjourned for a week. This was done to afford an opportunity to work up a boom among the "Independents" and arrange matters so satisfactorily that Mr. Morse could easily be induced to reconsider his decision and accept of a nomination.

He was seen and the plan submitted for his consideration. It struck him favorably. The conferences resulted in this: Mr. Morse agreed to accept the nomination providing the committee would bring a list of fifteen hundred Republican names solemnly pledged to vote for him at the polls, nothing short of which would induce him to stand. The exhibition of such a list was the condition, and the only one, on which he would permit the use of his name in the convention.

This is not a very favorable showing for the integrity of Mr. Morse. Two weeks ago his private affairs and surfeit of public life would not admit of his accepting a nomination: a week later he promises to accept under certain circumstances, namely, the pledge of fifteen hundred Republicans to vote for his election. In other words, when there was no possible hope of his election he declined to run on the plea of the requirements of his private business: later, when from a movement among the "Independents" success seems reasonably certain, "Barkis is willin'." Briefly, Mr. Morse says: if you can assure me success at the polls I'll stand; if you can't, I decline the honor for private reasons. What sort of a man do you call that, fellow Republicans?

Full of faith in the promises of the "Independents" and confidence in their ability to secure the fifteen hundred names demanded by Mr. Morse as a condition of his acceptance the convention reassembled and nominated him. Immediately following the adjournment missionaries were dispatched into the cities, towns, villages, hamlets, highways, byways and hedges of the District for those names, and the amount of buttonholing and horse-shedding that has been done by them in the last week is truly astonishing.

But the names we are informed come in terribly slow, and Mr. Morse will probably have another opportunity to decline.

ORGANIZE.

It is encouraging to see that the Republicans of Woburn are thoroughly organizing for the campaign. It means good work followed by a cheering victory. They have never shown a better or more earnest temper than at the present time. The thing most needed—indeed it is essential—is a complete and exact canvass of the town. There is nothing equal to a thorough acquaintance with our forces and their location. This we have no doubt the Republicans will make at once.

☞ On last Monday afternoon the JOURNAL office had the pleasure of offering its only spare chair to Mr. D. Gilbert Dexter, editor of the Cambridge Tribune, one of the handsomest, ablest, and juiciest journals in the Fifth District. We found Mr. Dexter a pleasant, genial gentleman, neatly attired in a stovepipe hat and gloves, but as wrong-headed as wrong-headed could be on the subject of Mr. Bowman's successor, and hopelessly daft on the River and Harbor Bill. Likewise, though we did not call for an exhibit of the contents of his portmanteau, we had reason to believe that he came to town loaded down with petitions in blank to get Woburn's quota of the fifteen hundred Republican petitioners that Mr. Leopold Morse demands as a condition precedent to his acceptance of the Democratic nomination for Congress. We were grieved to see such an estimable gentleman and true Republican in the past scouring the country in the interests of a Bourbon Democrat as against Mr. Bowman whose Republicanism will "wash" every time; and so we labored with him gently and kindly, but, unfortunately, to no purpose. We found him not only joined to his idols like a somewhat notorious character of old, but fairly wedded to them, and so when we said to him "let us reason together," he declined. Well, luckily, our good friend Dexter found Woburn ground particularly unfitted for the growth of the article he was seeking, and he left with the virgin purity of his rolls of foolscap unsoiled by Woburn autographs—to any alarming extent.

☞ John G. Maguire, Esq., having concluded to serve his party as a high private this fall and to decline all offers of office from his friends, the Democracy of Woburn have settled down on Thomas H. Hill, Esq., as their candidate for Representative to the General Court. This means that the Republicans must nominate Mr. Hayden and sweep the board. Mr. Hill is popular with his party, and so is Mr. Maguire, but Mr. Hayden whipped the latter gentleman in a square, stand-up fight last fall, and we can't see why he may not be equally successful in a contest with Mr. Hill.

☞ That Morse petition business is not managed as intelligently as it might be. Therefore the success of the canvassers has not been brilliant so far. They are wasting much precious time, and breath not so precious. For example, Mr. Benjamin Hinkley, a member of the Republican Town Committee of Woburn, was the other day importuned to sign one of the Morse petitions. The missionary might with equal propriety and as much success have asked Hon. S. Z. Bowman to sign it. Also, E. D. Hayden, Esq., whose Republicanism is without variableness or shadow of turning, who was a prominent candidate before the convention that nominated Mr. Bowman, has been urged to put his sign manual to the Morse document. These are only specimen bricks of the way they are doing it. How long, think ye, will it take them to get the requisite 1500 names at such a rate?

☞ We have perused with care and interest Mr. Henry H. Faxon's last broadside, called "The Political Situation in Massachusetts as Viewed from the Independent Standpoint," but for the life of us we cannot discover in it his place in the present canvass nor what his course is to be. He flays the Republican party alive, but says, "I cannot work in a third party as parties now stand," meaning, we suppose, that he cannot join the Prohibitionist party and work with it. We wish the great Temperance Fighter of Quincy would be a little more explicit in defining his position.

☞ The people who oppose Mr. Bowman on his alleged civil service ideas are not consistant in taking up Mr. Morse to beat him with. The only civil service reform Mr. Morse believes in is to turn the Republicans out and put the Democrats in, and he would be among the foremost in advocating and insisting on the change if by any misfortune the Democrats should come into power.

☞ Its old proprietor, "Wash" Perry, Esq., has sold the Camden (Me.) Herald to an association of prominent business men of that thrifty town, who have engaged for its editor T. R. Simonton, Esq., a gentleman of excellent parts and a writer of marked ability under whose editorial management the Herald is bound to flourish and become a power in the regions of "Away Down East."

☞ At the Democratic County Convention held at Lowell on Monday, Thomas H. Hill, Esq., of Woburn, was nominated for County Treasurer. He accepted the nomination in a pleasant speech which won the applause of the convention. Mr. Hill will not probably throw up his private business here on the strength of his prospect of an election.

☞ If the Independent Republicans of this District would nominate one of their own men and vote for him there would be some sense in it; but in taking up a Bourbon Democrat and supporting him for Congress there is neither rhyme nor reason. Especially against so good a Republican as Mr. Bowman is.

☞ At the Councillor Convention last week the old District Committee were reappointed, namely: Geo. S. Littlefield of Winchester; H. A. Wadsworth, Lawrence; Augustus Merriam, Framingham; J. G. Pollard, Woburn; B. H. Martwell, Ayer; H. H. Wilder, Lowell; C. E. Trow, Methuen.

— If there are any Republicans who fail to attend the meetings at Headquarters, and we suspect there are a few, allow us to suggest to them that their presence is very much desired at these gatherings. Work has begun in dead earnest, and is desirable that every one take a hand in it. Let the headquarters be crowded at every meeting.

— Mr. W. R. Putnam, of the Cemetery Committee, informs us that all of the trees given by John Cummings and set out last spring by the Committee on Salem street, except one, lived and are thriving. — There are about seventeen milk carts running in this village, and so far as we know all of them are salting down wealth. It would seem though that a less number could do the business.

— Mr. George H. Conn is engaged in an insurance brokerage business in which he will do first rate. There isn't a smarter or more intelligent insurance man in America than Conn is. We want to see him succeed.

— Fred. Leeds has got his hot drinks down to a fine point, and nothing better can be got in Boston. Temperance people ought to encourage Mr. Leeds in keeping these wholesome and satisfying drinks for cold weather.

— As near as we can figure it out the vote of Woburn will be increased about one hundred and fifty this fall. The Democracy will naturalize about one hundred, and fifty more are expected from boys reaching their majority. Woburn is on the boom all along the line.

— Some of our young men visited the Park theatre last Monday evening and were perfectly carried away with "Esmeralda." It is a splendid play, every part of which is played to perfection. A great audience were present to enjoy it, which they did clean up to the handle.

— It is seldom that there are not local news enough here to fill several papers, but for some reason or other it has been quite dry this week, and yet we are rather proud of the exhibit in this paper. The JOURNAL is a long ways ahead of all competitors in furnishing home news.

— The family of the late Dr. Drew, with the exception of the youngest daughter who remains here to finish her school course, have moved to Dover, N. H., in which pleasant and prosperous town they will make their future home. A great many Woburn people will deeply regret their leave-taking.

— It is said that the police have a sharp eye out for violations of liquor licenses, and that there is likely to be something of a stirring up at an early day. If all stories are true there are a plenty of chances for the Police to exercise their powers, and violators of the liquor laws should be dealt with just as other violators are.

— We take back all the hard things said by us respecting the macadamizing of Main street—the mean and sour things—and say in their stead that when the street is completed there won't be a better one in Middlesex county. Of course it has cost enormously—Democrats always go in for big appropriations, and there is never any of them left over—but for all that we must confess that the street is a prime one, or will be when done.

— By reference to her card in this paper it will be seen that the fall millinery opening of Mrs. J. H. Parker is advertised for today and tomorrow, when we expect her handsome rooms on Salem street will be filled to overflowing with ladies. She has a large and very elegant stock of millinery goods in all the latest styles, to an examination of which she respectfully invites the ladies of Woburn and surrounding towns. Please bear in mind that the exhibit opens this morning and will continue through tomorrow, Saturday.

— At the meeting of the Young People's Union, connected with the Unitarian society, held last week, the following officers were elected: President, Rev. G. H. Young; Vice President, Miss Anna Hammond; Secretary, W. Fred Bosworth; Treasurer, Miss Annie Woods; Board of Directors, Albert Thompson and the officers above written. Committees on Entertainments for October, November and December were chosen. The stage in the vestry of the church has been improved, new and beautiful scenery furnished, and everything put in order for the season's entertainments. The Union is prosperous and growing.

— The Harvest services at the Unitarian church last Sunday were appropriate and pleasant. The concert in the evening was the chief attraction. The church was profusely and beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, but the display of vegetables and fruits was nothing to brag on. Everything looked very nice though and deserved the praise it received. The evening exercises were very entertaining and were enjoyed by a large audience. Miss Rebecca Ellis read the "Huskers" by Whittier admirably; Mrs. Dr. Bartlett and John W. Day also read some pieces finely; Mr. Charles Shaw and Mr. Davis each sang a solo, and the pastor made an interesting address to the children.

— The Republicans are holding well attended, spirited, and working meetings at their headquarters in this village. Considering that the party have not become fully aroused nor got their breast-plate and armor on, as they will have in season to sweep Uncle Benjamin clean off the track, the attendance on these meetings is very encouraging indeed, and the spirit of them is full of life and business. The Republicans here intend to fight just as hard as though Bishop's election was not as sure as the rising and setting of the sun, which is the true way. Because we are certain of victory is no reason why we should lie back on our oars and cease to pull. The Woburn Republicans are showing the right kind of spirit and grit. Shortly they will have a big rally here that will make the Democrats seeks their holes. It will be a rouser.

MISS MERTENA L. BANCROFT,

Will receive pupils in

AFTER SEPTEMBER 20.

Residence,—Franklin Street, Woburn. 37-tf

— We have reason to believe that local talent of first class order will give some very fine entertainments here when the season gets a little further advanced.

— The trial of the fire alarm gong has been in progress this week with satisfactory results. Occurring at 11.45 each day it has thrown some people a little "out of wind."

— Rev. John P. Forbes was installed pastor of the Unitarian church of Arlington last evening. A large number of Woburn people engaged seats in Mr. Jones's barge for a passage to Arlington to witness the installation ceremonies.

— Snare drums are employed in some of our schools with which to learn the young ideas how to shoot. It is a novel innovation this beating a snare drum in the schoolroom, but whether a good one or not is an open question. Probably the next step will be a whole brass band, or an orchestra, or a male quartette, or something sort of grand and noble. But we will wait and see what the snare drum grows into.

— The Merrimac Chemical Works near North Woburn are in a very flourishing condition. A large increase of business demands a corresponding increase of facilities to meet which the company are erecting buildings additional to the large ones now in use. Some fifty men are now employed at the works, and as soon as the new buildings are completed this number will be increased to 75 or 80. We are glad to note the success of this manufacturing industry in Woburn, and the prosperity of the Merrimac Company will be a matter of gratification to the JOURNAL.

— Several of our young gentlemen have concluded that a Social Club would be a good thing to have in town and have had a meeting about it. A Club is regarded as the thing now-a-days, and we don't know of any law that would interfere with the boys in organizing one. True, it may with considerable propriety be urged that Woburn is fairly burdened so to speak with clubs and societies, but a few more won't make any particular difference one way or the other, and so we say, in the words of the immortal Jackson, or some other great man—David Crocket perhaps—"be sure you are right and then go ahead."

— The reported elopement at or near Central Square didn't amount to anything worth mentioning, and the esteemed editor of the Advertiser and the reporters of the Boston dailies had their trouble for their pains. All there was to it was that a couple of young people up there wanted to wed each other and being of a romantic turn of mind they didn't proclaim their wishes from the housetops, but quietly lit out, went over to Stoneham, and was legally spliced. Gentlemen reporters, including the lynx-eyed veteran of the Advertiser, when you want to find out what's going on repair to the fountain-head—the JOURNAL—for it.

— We can truly say that the entertainment given as the initial number in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course by the Royal Hand Bell Ringers on Wednesday evening, was not only superb but one the most enjoyable and satisfactory that has been given in Lyceum Hall. Nobody ever heard that kind of bell-ringing before—nothing like it. The old troups that we used to hear and do now at odd times are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal to the Royals—really nothing in comparison. There was a good house present, and they all seemed to enjoy the delicious music of the bells as well as the vocal efforts of the company for all there was out.

— A meeting of the Board of Selectmen held on last Tuesday evening at the Public Rooms. All the members were present except Reade. A good degree of harmony pervaded the deliberations of the meeting.—Voted, that the regular November meeting be held on November 8, Wednesday, instead of Tuesday, November 7, on account of the State election.—The Police Committee were granted further time in the cases of Carpenter and McDermott. —Voted to reccommend the release of Patrick McCarthy, as prayed, on probation.—A request was received from Elbridge Trull tor a pulic hearing on cutting down trees on the sidewalks. Voted to hold such a meeting on Wednesday October 24, at 7.30 p. m. —Wm. Johnson asked for a reconsideration of the vote whereby lights were ordered on trees. Voted to reconsider.—Offers by Public Improvement Association of 200 trees. Mr. Salmon and others offered 150 trees, etc:—After which the Body adjourned in due and regular form.

Ringworm Humor and Salt-Rheum.

RAYNHAM, MASS., Aug. 12, 1878.

C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen— * * * * I have had ringworm humor and salt-rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had any number of doctors in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying to cures from the use of your Sarsaparilla and Olive Ointment. I felt forced to try it, although I had seen many things advertised that never did me any good. I have now taken two small bottles and one large one of Sarsaparilla, and used three boxes of Ointment. I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete.

I am gratefully yours,
EDGAR F. WHITMAN.

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gents—Please send me by express two bottles HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and a few Cook Books for distribution. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with sick headache and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from those severe headaches. She has not taken any of any account since last spring, and what little she had is lent to do some others some good, and we must have it in the house.

Yours truly,
HOMER B. NASH.

— It was the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, and not Dr. Lang's, that furnished the very fine instrumental music for the last temperance meeting held by the Association. On last Sunday afternoon again the rooms failed to accommodate all who went to the meeting and quite a number were obliged to turn back for lack of seats. There is no Association in the State in a more flourishing condition or doing more good than this in Woburn. There is talk of renting the large room adjoining those now occupied, enlarging and improving the Reading-room, and otherwise adding to the convenience and attractiveness of the quarters. It is not improbable that a male quartette will soon be formed, which will add to the inducements for people to attend the very interesting Sunday afternoon meetings of the Association.

— The next concert in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course will be the most novel and varied of the series. The Park Concert Company give a fine entertainment with great satisfaction to the audience everywhere. It is always a guarrantee of a good concert to have Mr. T. P. Ryder connected with it as pianist. Mr. Richards is an excellent humorist and those who love to laugh long and hearty should go to and hear him. He ranks with the best. Our people should turn out and pack the house. If Woburn does not support heartily such a course as Mr. Pierce has presented they make a mistake for he is in a position to give our people the best talent before the public, and all that is included in these entertainments is first class. Course tickets for the remaining six evenings will be $1.25, $1.70, $2.10. A Henry F. Miller's grand piano will be used at every concert.

JOURNAL COURT RECORD.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT OF EASTERN MIDDLESEX.

Parker L. Converse, Judge.

The character of the work turned off at the District Court this week has not been, as a whole, profoundly interesting nor of the greatest magnitude. As usual there have a few simple cases of intoxication, where some poor, unfortunate persons have been hauled up and fined for the gratification of an appetite that would not and could not be resisted, while the authors of their ruin are left to go on unmolested in their work. Sometimes it seems to this reporter as though the world is made up all wrong, but then he is not the judge, and is incapable of making a better one. Michael Foley was up for selling beer. Maguire defended.

LITERARY NOTICES.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for November is on our table, ahead, as usual, of all others. The present number has a beautiful steel-plate, "Little Red Riding Hood;" a double-sized colored steel fashion-plate; another exquisite engraving, "The falling leaves;" a spirited illustration of a poem, "Nearing Home," a ship in a storm on Thanksgiving Eve; and about fifty wood-cuts, in addition, of new dressss, bonnets, embroidery patterns, etc., etc. The stories are even better than usual, which is saying a great deal. With this number appears the Prospectus for next yeat, when six copyright novelets will be given, and more than a hundred shorter tales, many of them illustrated. Undoubtedly, "Peterson" is not only the best, but the cheapest magazine of its kind, being but two dollars a year to single subscribers. Everybody should take this magazine. Now is the time to subscribe. Address Charles J. Peterson, 309 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Specimans are sent, gratis, to get up clubs with.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for November, concluding the sixty-fifth volume of that periodical, is a brilliant number. Naturally, as a consequence of the immense popularity of Miss Constance Fennimore Woolson's Anne, the most prominent feature of the number is the commencement of a new novel by the same author, entitled For the Major. The leading article of the number, The Early Quakers in England and Pennsylvania, is timely in connection with the approaching celebration of the two hundreth anniversary of William Penn's landing at New Castle. William D. Howell's contributes a poem entitled Pordenone, accompanied by an illustration drawn by Fredericks. Mr. William Hamilton Gibson's charming paper, Across Lots, is accompanied by thirteen exquisite engravings from the author's drawings. There are two full-page illustrations by Abbey—illustrating poems by Herrick. William Henry Bishop contributes a second paper on Southern California, beautifully illustrated. Miss Ellen Mackay Hutchingson's poem, The Bride's Toilet is illustrated by Thulstrup. All who have read Lorna Doone will read with interest Miss Kate Hillard's, The Home of the Doones, describing the places on the North Devon Coast, effectively illustrated. Alice G. Howe contributes a beautiful description of Manchester-by-the-Sea (Massachusetts) in autumn, illustrated George Appleton Brown. Mr. W. Sloane Kennedy gives for the first time the history of the passenger elevator and its improvements. Prof. John Fiske contributes a truthful picture of Virginia society in the Colonial period. In The Problem of Living in New York Mr. Junius Henri Browne treats the subject of New York homes. Poems are contributed by Will Carleton, James Burke, Harrison Robertson, Juliet C. Marsh, and Horatio Nelson Powers. Mr. George William Curtis discusses political reform, the coming Mrs. Langtry, English criticism on Americans, and the illumination thrown by wealth upon the character of its possessor. The Editor's Drawer contains humorous contributions from R. J. Burdette, H. C. Bunner, G. T. Lanigan, and Bessie Chandler. The other editorial departments are well sustained.

The North American Review for November presents an unusually diversified Table of Contents. "English views of Free Trade," by the Hon. John Welsh of Philadelphia, is a clear and forcible exposition of the difference between the economic situation of England and that of the United States, and of the considerations which make Free Trade imperative for the former country, if she would retain her present position as the world's workshop. Joseph Neilson, Chief Judge of the Brooklyn City Court, writes of "Disorder in Court Rooms", a subject of profound interest to good citizens at all times, and more especially now in view of certain recent occurrences. The obiter dicta of the learned author touching the Guiteau trial and the Lawson-Gray incident at Dublin, are characterized by the best judicial temper. Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, ex-Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, offers "A Problem for Sociologists", the problem being to determine the degree of responsibility before the criminal law, of persons affected by certain forms of insanity. "The Industrial Value of Woman", by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, is a very able reply to an artcle recently published on "Woman's Work and Woman's Wages". "Advantages of the Jury System", by Dwight Foster, formerly a Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, will command the attention of every thoughtful citizen, being a grave and learned defense of an iustitution which it is becoming the fashion to belittle and decry. The remaining articles are "Safety in Theatres", by Steele Mackaye, the distinguished actor and theatrical manager; "The Pretensions of Journalism", by Rev. Geo. T. Rider; and a symposium on "The Suppression of Vice", by Anthony Comstock, O. B. Frothingham and Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley.

Mr. A. H. Cutting don't allow beer peddlers to mosey around among the tenants of his block any more. He has vetoed their nefarious business.

Mrs. Howe's lecture on "Two Years in the Azores," finely illustrated, on Tuesday evening, was very interesting indeed. It was a genuine treat. Mrs. Howe has an invalid husband, and has adopted the profession of lecturer for a livelihood.

The Baptist people gave their Harvest Concert last Sunday evening. Considering the scarcity of fruits, vegetables, etc., consequent of the severe and protracted drouth I should think Harvest Concerts would drag heavily. But I understand this was a good one.

The Congregational Church is increasing and flourishing. It was organized in 1840, just prior to the formation of the one in Arlington. The first meetings of the latter were held in about 1842 in the hall over Pettee's bakery, which was also used by the Lodge of Odd Fellows.

The Star vehemently urges every voter in Winchester to vote for their esteemed and popular townsman, Nelson D. Skillings, Esq., Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor of this great and glorious Commonwealth. Which is all well enough, but every voter won't do it, all the same.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will deliver a temperance lecture in the Baptist Church on next Sunday evening under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. She, as we all know, is one of the ablest and most popular lecturers of the day, and it is expected that a very large audience will be out to hear the gifted lady.

Mr. W. E. Taylor, who has run a barge between this place and Woburn for the three years last past, says he will resume his regular trips if our Selectmen will put the highway between the two towns in good repair. His barge service has been a great accommodation to both Winchester and Woburn.

Miss Josephine Lang of Woburn is teaching the piano to classes in this village. She is, I am informed, a very successful teacher, thoroughly educated, and apt in imparting instruction to others. Her Woburn classes have always made rapid progress, and I have no doubt but that she will become very popular with our musical people.

Messrs. S. C. Small, A. E. Rowe, Sumner Richardson, and J. R. Cobb have been constituted a committee to call a meeting for the formation of a "Winchester Branch" of the Mass. Citizens' Law and Order League. Hon. Rufus S. Frost of Chelsea is President of the State League and will attend to the organization of this "Branch," due notice of the time and place of which will be given.

The Republican Town Committee has reorganized and elected the following officers: Chairman—John T. Wilson; Secretary—S. C. Small; Treasurer—Edwin Robinson. At a recent meeting of the Committee it was decided to hold the caucus to nominate a Representative to the General Court, for the 16th Middlesex District, on Friday evening, October 27 in Lyceum Hall. The question of candidate seems to have narrowed down to James F. Dwinell and S. W. Twombly. J. T. Wilson has withdrawn in favor of Mr. Twombly. Mr. S. J. Elder refuses to be a candidate, and his friends, it is believed, will go for Mr. Twombly. As both are good men the contest will be a friendly one.

The Reform Club held an unusually interesting meeting last Sunday afternoon. Several temperance songs were impressively sung by Doctor Hallick of East Boston, and Mrs. Cross of Boston Highlands gave four recitations appropriate to the good work, in a finished manner. Next Sunday at 3.45 o'clock, P. M., the usual meeting will be held and addressed by Charles S. Parker, Esq., the talented and genial editor of the Arlington Advocate, who will be accompanied by Dr. Rugg, who will lead the singing. A very interesting meeting may be counted on with certainty. All the temperance organizations in the State are working for a constitutional amendment. Mrs. Livermore will speak in the Baptist church next Sunday evening on the subject.

The ninth annual meeting of the Mass. W. C. T. Union was held at Malden last week, in the First Congregational Church. The attendance was large, 150 delegates, with many other members being present from all parts of the State. Mrs. Livermore presided throughout with her usual grace and dignity. Two excellent addresses were given Wednesday; one by Dr. Mary J. Safford, Prof. in the Homeopathic Medical College, Boston, on "Physical effect of Alcoholic Beverages"; another by Alice Stone Blackwell, on "Social Drinking." The evening meeting was begun with a praise service followed by an address, "Drunkenness as it effects working women," by Jennie Collin; "Heredity of Alcohol" by Rev. Dr. Richard Eddy of Melrose. Thursday morning the election of officers took place. Mrs. Livermore, with most of old Board, was elected. As she had made a telling speech the previous day she did not consume time by another. The afternoon was crowded with good things, among them a paper on "Conditions of Temperance Work," by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. She knows what temperance work means, and has been the instrument of much good. Report of the Boston Home for Intemperate Women, by Mrs. Charpiot. Last, but not least, exercises by the Cold Water Recruits of Malden. A.

Re-Union of the Thirty-ninth Mass. Vols.

The 16th Annual Re-union of the 39th Regiment was held at Natick, Tuesday, Oct. 10, 1882, under the auspices of Co. I of that town, and to those who had the good fortune to attend, it proved an occasion of unalloyed pleasure. The visiting comrades about 120 in number received a hearty welcome from Co. I upon their arrival, and forming regimental line as of yore, commanded by Col. C. H. Porter, the regiment under escort of the Natick Cornet Band and Co. I, made a short parade through the principal streets to the soldiers' monument, where, halting, a tribute was paid to the memory of departed comrades, the band playing a dirge. The regiment then proceeded to Clark's Hall, where the business meeting was held. The President of the Association, Comrade Currier of Co. I, welcomed the comrades to Natick in a few well chosen words, after which records of the last meeting held at Woburn was read. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:—President, George A. Barker, Co. D; Vice President, George Thomas, Co. H; Secretary, C. H. Porter, Co. D; Treasurer, Wm. G. Sheen, Co. D; Executive Committee, C. H. Porter, Co. D; H. A. Seaverns, Co. H; A. P. Barrett, Co. K. Company Secretaries were elected, of whom Comrade A. P. Barrett represents Co. K. An invitation from Co. D, to meet with them the next year at Quincy, was enthusiastically accepted, having in lively recollection the pleasant reunion previously held at that place. At roll-call, eleven comrades were reported as having died during the year, of whom Noah Edgecomb was of Co. K. At the conclusion of the business meeting, a recess was taken until one o'clock, when rations were to be issued. The intermission quickly passed away in renewing old associations and recalling the reminiscences of the now distant past, and at the appointed hour the regiment again assembled and proceeded to the banquet hall.

After the invocation by Rev. J. F. Locke, full justice was done to one of the best dinners of which it has ever been our fortune to partake, and deservedly creditable to the caterer, Mr. C. E. Nash of Boston. At its conclusion, "the feast of reason and flow of soul" was next in order, and Com. C. H. Porter, in the opening address, dwelt upon the theme which was nearest and dearest to the heart of every comrade, the sad and untimely decease of their old beloved Commander, Gen. G. K. Warren, who passed away on the 8th of August last. Sketching in eloquent language the distinguished services he had rendered to the country, participating in every engagement in the East, from Big Bethel to Five Forks, especially at the Second Bull Run, and at Gettysburg, where, as the Hero of Little Round Top, he secured the victory to the Union, and possibly its very existence; vindicating his conduct at Five Forks, where, after having won the victory, he was unjustly removed from the command of his trusty Fifth Corps by Sheridan, he eulogized most fittingly his character as a man, his virtues as a patriot, and his gallant achievements as a soldier—"the foremost soldier of the United States, whose courage never failed, whose soldierly bearing made him beloved by all, and who, dying, left hosts of friends." The intimate personal relations which existed between Gen. Warren and himself, his knowledge of all the inner springs of action, unknown to the general public, and his familiarity with all the events which so closely affected the career of Gen. Warren, rendered his address one of great value and intense interest to his comrades, who eagerly listened with hardly repressed motion to his touching tribute of love and affection for their "Little Corporal" now no more. In closing, Com. Porter offered the following resolutions, which, after few remarks from Com. Barrett of Co. K, were unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

We, members of the 39th Regiment Association, learn with deep regret of the death of our beloved corps commander, Gen. G. K. Warren, at Newport, R. I., in August last. We can with pleasure bear our testimony to his gallantry and courage in the field in the famous and death-dealing battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Jericho Ford, Bethesda Church, Cold Harbor, Petersburg, Welden Railroad, Preble's Farm, Boynton Plank Road, Dabenny Mills, Gravelly Run, Quaker Road and Five Forks, and it is with great pride we remember his visits to our reunions in 1874 and 1881. We desire to add our praise of his soldierly and gallant bearing on the fields above-mentioned, and his ever ready desire to lead his corps into action. Fitted for the highest command, he suffered as only a man of his keen and sensitive nature could suffer by his removal on the field of battle, after a most decisive victory, by Gen. Sheridan, who, without sufficient cause, removed him from his corps. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we tender his widow and children our deepest sympathy in their affliction, and hope that the rugged road of life may be smoothed by the memory of the gallant and faithful soldier and friend and affectionate husband.

Resolved, that the resolutions be spread upon the records, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.

In the remarks of Com. Barrett, the following letter was introduced, never before published, which carries a peculiar significance at this time, as at last, although too late for him, the Court of Inquiry, before which his conduct at Five Forks had been under investigation, completely exonerated Gen. Warren from any misbehavior or wrong action, commends all his movements and actions at Five Forks, and shows that the removal was uncalled for. This was not obtained, however, without the most bitter and unscrupulous opposition from Gen. Sheridan, who placed Gen. Warren in the position of a culprit seeking acquittal from crime, rather than as a brave and patriotic officer demanding justice and relief from the stigma of unmerited disgrace. The consciousness of purity of motive and integrity of conduct which sustained him through those long terrible years, until the very last, when enfeebled by disease, and worn out with anxiety and "hope deferred," his noble spirit left is earthly abode; our trust in his character as true soldier and our unfaltering faith in his innocence, has at last been signally vindicated. Our beloved Warren died of a broken heart, a victim of cruel disgrace and systematic persecution, a victim to the unprincipled ambition of an over-rated Sheridan, whose recognition of, and reward for meritorious conduct on the part of a subordinate, stands forth in glaring contrast to that always exhibited by Warren, and expressed so nobly in the enclosed letter. Ever considerate of the lives of his soldiers, ever solicitous as to their welfare and comfort, the last to retire and the first to arise, is it any wonder that our "Little Corporal" so won the deep love and affection of his men that they would lay down their lives to preserve his own, of which a Sheridan may well be envious? As the Hero of Five Forks, he has been known in History, as such, he will ever be recognized in the future without cavil or dispute.

To A. P. Barrett, Comd'r Post 33, G. A. R., Woburn Centre, Mass.

DEAR FRIENDS—I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your gratifying letter of Aug. 28th, inviting me to be present at the dedication of your soldiers' monument. There is no object for which I would so gladly make any personal effort as to aid in doing honor to our dead comrades, but my official duties will prevent my accepting your invitation. I feel deeply grateful for your appreciation of the treatment I received after the battle of Five Forks. As long as I feel assured of the regard of those situated as you were and those for whom you speak, I shall not suffer from the detraction of malignants, while I live, nor have any apprehensions about what history shall say of me during the war.

I thank you most heartily for your kind expression. My own consciousness has never failed to sustain me in the most searching and unimpassioned review of my conduct at Five Forks, and I have exhausted every resource to obtain a public investigation. Although on a dark and stormy night one may feel competent to traverse a lonely road alone, it is cheering to have company and sympathy.

I remember at Five Forks when I rode in front of our line before the final charge was made, and there was some little hesitation in comprehending what I wished done, the color-bearer of some regiment stepped out to my side with a worn and ragged flag and said, "General, I'll go with you if there is not another man will." I have ever felt the greatest admiration and affection for him, for his act was understood by all. The colors all advanced and with them the line, and we swept the rebel entrenchment like a huge earthquake wave rolling to the shore. Where were my detractors then? I mention this incident because that color-bearer may be one you know, may be one of you, and I would like to know him to do him honor I could.

Had I not been so suddenly sent from my command I would not now be asking after such men, and it is one of those things which I have always thought the hardest in the treatment I received, that it deprived others of their reward.

Yours truly,

G. K. WARREN.

On offering the resolutions Com. Porter advocated the raising of a fund among the comrades of the regiment to be sent to the widow and children of Gen. Warren as a token of their affection for their old commander. The amount contributed at this time was $45, to which large additions will be made from those comrades who were unable to be present, for the collection of which arrangements were made through the company secretary.

Short and spirited addresses were made by Com. Locke, who 250 miles from "away down East," to attend the Re-union, the irrepressible Beck of Medford, the inimitable Oliver of Somerville, Com. Hall, who came from Greenfield and who will soon worthily represent the 39th in the Governor's Council, Com. Mills, of Somerville, who regretted very much the absence of brother Puffen, our old sutler who was seen that morning following up the regiment as of yore, with about as much satisfaction however as then, Com. Spear and Churchill of Quincy pleasantly refered to their company characteristics, Com. Thompson of Co. K, and Com. Mulligan of Co. I who most feelingly alluded to his experience in the service and his deceased comrades. Interspersed among the addresses was the music by the band which deserves honorable mention, as their excellent selections, especially our "Day in Camp," added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion. At four o'clock the formal exercises came to a close, and, upon the departure of the visiting comrades at five, the 16th Annual Re-union was over, a red-letter day in our calender.

To whatever cause it may be ascribed this re-union was pronounced by all the most pleasant the 39th had ever held. The day was beautiful in the extreme, the welcome of Co. I was cordial and earnest, but there was something beyond those considerations alone to account for it. There seemed to be firmer grasp of the hand, a deeper feeling of sympathy, a more perfect realization of that true comradship which brings us nearer to one another in heart and hand which makes us dear to each other as we grow older, manifested on this occasion. While there was a marked absence of external enthusiasm, which characterized some of our past re-unions, there has never been the time when so much real deep interest in all the proceedings was observable. Animated by one common devotion to their old Commander while living, their hearts were stricken by one common grief at his death and a tinge of sadness characterized all the proceedings, which, while it intensified their interest, subdued all outward manifestation. The tributes to his memory were alike honorable to the regiment and worthy of the grand old soldier they commemorated.

LITERARY NOTICES.

DR. FRANK H. HAMILTON opens THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY for November with a most valuadle article on the important subject of "Sewer-Gas." Dr. Hamilton sums up the subject clearly and judicially, and, what is more, indicates the only safe ground to be taken in regard to it. The second article, on The Science of the Present Period, is a masterly vindication of its influence and its broader tendencies. Dr. Nathan Allen gives the latest form to The Law of Human Increase. Science in relation to the Arts, is the address of the President of the Brittish Association for the Advancement of Science, and is instructive in its discussion of electric and gas lighting. Dr. Oswald's Physiognomic Curiosities is full of curious information. The article on Scientific Farming at Rothamsted, by Dr. Manly Miles, is a most timely and well-digested account of the systematic agricultural experiments of Lawes and Gilbert. The original and striking paper entitled Who was Primitive Man? appears without abridgment in the November Monthly. Some Curious Vegetable Growths, by W. H. Larrabee, The Brittish Lion, by W. Boyd Dawkins, Life among the Battas of Sumatra, by Dr. Schreiber, are also very readable articles. There are a biography and portrait of the French chemist, Wurtz, and the usual mass of miscellaneous information at the close, which is read first in The Popular Science Monthly. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

The Barnstable Patriot says the statement in the Boston papers that the case of T. R. Chase against that paper had been settled on payment of $200 and costs was incorrect. No such sum was paid, but an amicable settlement was effected.

A STARTLING STATEMENT!

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 1st, 1881.

DR. CHARLES CRAIG:—Dear Sir: Suffering as I have been for a long time with a fearful cold, that finally settled into what is termed a quick consumption, and so pronounced by the attending physician, and so pronounced by the attending physician, I heard of your Consumption Cure, and while having little faith in anything benefiting me, procured some of it, used it, and to-day am to the wonder of myself and friends apparently a well man. I write this as I feel in duty bound to do for the benefit of suffering humanity, and can but hope that the thousands who are now suffering with that supposed incurable disease Consumption will try your Consumption Remedy. They will receive speedy relief and a permanent cure. You can send any one to me who cares to be advised as to the manner in which your medicines cured me.

P. H. SULLIVAN, Captain Police.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 14, 1882.

We, the undersigned are personally acquainted with Captain P. H. Sullivan. We knew of his debilitated condition at one time, are knowing to the fact that he is now daily on duty, and are satisfied he would not make any statement that was not strictly true.

"A Drop of Joy in Every Word."

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Purgative Pellets" and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time that I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write.

Yours truly,

The Philadelphia Press has concluded to support the regular Republican ticket in Pennsylvania, but at the same time it is frantically calling on the Republican party to "unload" Cameron. Its position recalls a historical incident in which the momentious question was "Who"ll bell the cat?"

The law prohibiting the use of elevators not provided with safety appliances is a good one, but it don't go far enough. What is wanted is a law prohibiting the use of elevators to carry economically attired hotel guests up to the top story when there are plenty of empty rooms within walking distance.

For some time past Edinburgh, Scotland, has been awarded the palm for being the healthiest of large European cities. A recent convention of doctors at Geneva, however, transferred the honor to the latter city, finding the annual death rate to be 17 in each 1000, or one less than in Edinburgh. Naturally the doctors being in convention at Geneva and handsomely treated they had to do the neat thing by the town.

Lynn, Mass.

Edward Barnes of Lynn, Mass., states that for over two years he was troubled with frequent spitting of blood, severe cold and cough, night sweats, and general debility, so that I was given up by my friends and my doctor to die. Finally I was advised to try your remedies, which I did for three months, the Swedish Lung Balsam for my lungs, the Swedish Botanic Compound to build up my constitution and restore my appetite, and the Swedish Pepsin Pills to regulate the bowels. The result is that today I am entirely cured, and feel as well as ever in life.

LYNN, March 8, 1882.

Dr. F. W. A. BERGENGREN: Dear Sir—I have been using your Swedish Botanic Compound for kidney complaint and Scrofulous Humor, and have derived great benefit from it. This is saying a good deal, as before I commenced to use the Compound I was the greatest part of the time unable to work, and I have tried medical advice and all kinds of medicine, but without avail until I used your Remedy. Since taking it I have been feeling like a new man, and been able to attend to my work. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter.

I consider Swedish Botanic Compound the best Blood Purifier and Spring Medicine in use.

The Woburn Journal

WE MOURN HIS LOSS.

Written for the Woburn JOURNAL on the death of Cyrus L. Carter of Wilmington, Mass.

What we have lost, is his great gain,
'Tis pleasnre now to think
Within the cherished brink.
Though loved ones mourn and weep and sigh,
To part with such dear friend,
Yet God, whose presence ever nigh
With joy their grief will end.

True manhood reigned within his breast,
A Christian's heart had he,
And with the Saints forever blessed,
Rests in eternity;—
Ah! gracious thought, unique, sublime,
To view his life's career,
'Twas spotless, pure, with love did chime,
And brilliant did appear.

The Christian precepts he embraced
So holy, good, and true,
Were all innate, his heart had traced
And which, he did pursue;—
His character, he leaves behind,
Its mandates, rich and choice,
Will now, our aching hearts e'er bind
To God, though hushed his voice.

ZENAS CAREY'S REWARD.

Red and sullen, like the eyes of some baleful demon, the low sun glowed through the tangled depths of November woods, casting bloody lines of light across the fallen trees, whose mossy trunks were half hidden in the drifts of faded yellow leaves, and evoking faint, sweet scents like oriental sandal-wood and teak, from a thousand forest censors hidden away, who knows how or where? And above that line of dull flaming fire the sky frowned a leaden-grey concave, freighted, as the weather-wise could tell you, with snow-flakes sufficient to turn that broken forest into a fairy grove of pearl and ermine. So the daylight was ebbing away from the Thanksgiving eve.

"Now I wonder where I am!" said John Siddons, pausing abruptly in the scarce-visible foot-path that wound among the trees. "As completely turned round, as though I stood in the deserts of Egypt. I wish I had been wise enough to kept the high-road; these short cuts generally turn out very long ones. However, if I keep straight a head, I must inevitably emerge from these woods somewhere." He sat down on a mossy stump, leaning his head carelessly on one hand, while the other played unconsciously with the worn brim of his blue soldier-cap. A slender, pleasant-faced young man, with gray-blue eyes and dark hair thrown back from a bronzed forehead, which had been touched by the firey arrows of many southern sun, in lonely swamps and along the fever-reeking shores of sullen rivers. "Houseless, homeless!" he murmured to himself. "I wonder how many others are saying the same thing this Thanksgiving eve. To think that I should fight through the campaign unhurt, and return with an honorable discharge in my pocket, to a place where nobody knows or cares whether I'm alive or dead, while so many brave fellows were shot down at my side with bullets that tore through a score of hearts at home, carrying sharper pangs than death has to give! It's a queer thing to have only one relative in the world, and he a total stranger. If I find this second cousin of my father's he'll probably kick me out of doors for a shiftless, soldiering vagabond. But hang it! a man can't live alone like a tortoise in its shell. I remember wondering, when I was a boy, why the Madeira vines over the porch stretched out their green tendrils, and seem to grope through the sunshine for something to cling to. I think I understand it now."

He rose up and walked on through the russet leaves that rustled ankle-deep beneath his tread, still musing; trying to study out the unknown qualities in life's equation, while the sun went down behind a bank of lurid clouds, and the chill night wind began to sigh sorrowfully in the tree-tops. And suddenly the stately forest tapered off into a silver-stemmed thicket of white birches, and the white birches fringed a lonely country road with a little red house beyond, whose windows were aglow with fire-light, and whose door-yard was full of the peculiar perfume of white-and-maroon-blossomed chrysanthemums.

Zenas Carey was leaving over the gate, surveying the stormy sunset with critical eyes.

"I told Melindy so!" ejaculated Zenas, apparently addressing himself to the crooked apple tree by the road. I'll bet my best steer we have a good, old-fashioned fall of snow to keep Thanksgiving with. I smelt it in the air this morning, but women never believe nothin' until it comes to pass right under their noses, for—"

This rather obscure sentence was nipped in the bud by a footstep at his side. Zenas turned abruptly to meet the new arrival.

"Will you be kind enough to give me a glass of water, sir," said John Seddons wearily.

"Sartin, sir," said Zenas. "So you're a soldier, hey?"

"A returned soldier," said Seddons, draining the cool element from the cocoa-nut shell that always lay close to the well-curb at the side of the house.

"Goin' home to keep Thanksgivin'," questioned Zenas.

"Home! Sir, I have no home?"

Seddons had spoken sharply, as if the thought were goading to him. Zenas put out his brown knotted hand and grasped the retreating man's arm.

"My boy!" he said, with kindly abruptness, "you're a soldier, and to tell by your looks I should guess you were about the age of him that's buried at Gettysburg—my only son. I love that blue uniform for David's sake, and if there's a soldier that hasn't a home to go to on Thanksgivin' eve, there's a corner for him by Zenas Carey's fireside. Come in, sir, come in. You're welcome as flowers in May."

John looked into the eyes and working face of the old farmer an instant, and accepted his invitation without another word.

What a cheerful change it was, from the frosty air and chill twilight of the lonely road to that fire of resinous pine logs! And when Melinda Carey drew a humpbacked rocking-chair to the hearth for him and spoke a word or two of welcome, John Seddons wondered if the eyes of the mother who died when he was a babe, had not beamed upon him just so.

"I told mother so this very mornin'," said Zenas, with triumphant flourish of his hand, as he stirred up the logs to a waving, glorious sheet of flame, "says I, 'Melindy, we'll kill the biggest turkey, and I'll pick out the yallerest pumpkins on the barn-floor.' And says she, 'What for, Zenas, when there's only us two to eat 'em'; and, says I, 'Mother' says I, 'David was here with us last Thanksgivin' with his new uniform, as brave and handsome as you'll often see.' Now, mother, don't cry." Zenas interrupted himself to stroke his wife's gray hair with a strangely tender touch, and went on:

"Says I, 'He's gone where it's Thanksgivin' all the year round now, my poor boy, my brave boy!' but, says I, 'we'll make somebody welcome for David's sake; won't we, mother? And now, sir, you'll spend to-morrow with us, and tell us about the battle of Gettysburg, where Davie died crying out with his last breath not to let the flag be captured.'"

Zenas' voice died out into a choking gasping sob. John Seddons laid his hands softly on the rough, toil-hardened hand of the farmer, while a pang of envy shot through his heart. Ah! it was almost worth while being shot down in battle to be missed and mourned like dead Davie Carey.

"Oh, wife!" said Zenas, when John Seddons had fallen asleep in the little corner of the room that had been the lost boy's, "it is almost like having Davie back again! Wife, I fight my great sorrow down every night, but every morning it rises up again more stong than ever! God help us; God help every parent whose home is made desolate by the field of battle!"

Thanksgiving-day dawned through a white whirlwind of driving snow, and eddied among the gnarled boughs of the apple-tree in a mad frolic, and edged the old stone-wall with dazzling ermine. And the fiery sparks careering swiftly up Zenas Carey's wide chimney, met the steadily falling snow half way and gave battle, while the hearth glowed with ruddy brightness, as if it knew all about the Governor's proclamation and approved it.

"You have a cosy little farm here, Mr. Carey," said John, as he walked through the snow-storm to the church, whose spire nestled among the everlasting hills beyond.

"If I was only sure of it, sir," said Zenas with a sigh. "But I've been hard put to get along these times. Taxes and such like come heavy on poor men, and I've had a run o' ill luck, so that the place is mortgaged to its full value, and to a hard man, sir, one that will sell the home you've been and brought up in as soon as eat his breakfast, so he can make money by it. It will be a black day for Melindy and me when we have to leave Rock Farm; but it must come soon, and I don't much care what becomes of me afterward. I tell you, sir, when a man has lived to my age under one roof-tree he don't take kindly to bein' moved. Men are like forest trees, sir; you can take a young one and do as you please with it, but if you transplant an old one it dies. Let's talk o' something else, Mr. Seddons. I ought not to complain Thanksgiving-day."

John looked with a feeling of actual reverence at the hard featured old man, whose simple soul, borne down as he was by debt, and grief, and age, could still find something to be thankful for.

The turkey and the pumpkin-pies were smoking on the round table when John and Zenas returned from the church; and Mrs. Carey had brought out her best "flowing blue" plates and her choicest old-time silver spoons in honor of their guest. There was no beverage but coffee that never knew the shores of Java, and a pitcher of cold, sparkling cider, but champagne could not have been more cordially dealt out by Zenas; and Mrs. Carey's smiling kindness gave a flavor to the chickoried rye that is sometimes lacking in "egg-shell china."

The table was cleared away, and they were sitting round the fire, when the door was opened and Deacon Evans entered, bringing a small snowdrift on the shoulders of his shaggy overcoat.

"Well, I am beat!" quoth Zenas. "Take a chair, Deacon. Let me hang your coat before the fire to dry."

"Can't stay," said the Deacon, giving himself a shake, like a black water-dog on its hind legs. "I thought you'd like to hear the news, so I jest dropped in on my way to my darter's Thanksgiving dinner."

"News? what news!" exclaimed Zenas, while his wife dropped her knitting.

"I hain't heerd nothin' but the wind a-howling down the chimney, and Elder Smith's sarmon this mornin'," said Zenas a little impatiently.

"The Squire's dead up to the great house!"

"Dead! You don't tell me so! That's the man I was speaking of as holds my mortgage," explained Zenas, turning to John Seddons. "And when did it happen, Deacon?"

"Died last night, sir, just about nightfall, as quiet as a lamb. And lawyer Ovid says there's a regular will, and he's left all his property to the only relative he had living, a soldiering feller that he never as much as seen—one Sedgewick, Silby, or—what was his name now?—anyhow he's fell heir to all 'Squire Ailesford's property, and that's a pretty considerable windfall."

"Was the name Seddons," asked the soldier, who had hitherto listened to the conversation in silence. "That's it," said the Deacon, giving his knee a slap.

"Peter Pilesford was my father's cousin," said the young man, quietly.

"Land of Goshen?" ejaculated Deacon Evans, with growing veneration for the heir to the old 'Squire's money. "Now, reely, that's kind of providential, ain't it? To think that you should be right here on the spot."

"I was in search of Mr. Ailesford's house when I met you, sir," said Seddons turning to Carey; "but as I was unaware what kind of a reception I should get, your kind invitation decided me to wait a day or two."

In vain the Deacon tried to "pump" the young man. John Seddons was civilly uncommunicative, and the Deacon finally took leave, burning to unfold his budget of news elsewhere.

"I hope, sir," said Carey, uneasily, when they were once more alone, you won't be hard about that mortgage. I'm a poor man, and—"

"Mr. Carey," said John, quiety, "you shall burn that mortgage on this hearth the very day I come in possession of my relative's papers. No thanks, sir: I have not forgotten that I was a stranger and you took me in. Do you suppose I shall cease to remember the wecome of this Thanksgiving hearth? I never knew either father or mother; but to-day I have fancied what their kindness might have been."

"It was for David's sake," sobbed Mrs. Carey, fairly overcome.

"Then for your dead son's sake, will you let me fill his place toward you? Last night death took from me the only one in the world to whom I was alied by ties of blood; do not turn me from your hearts."

"The Lord bless thee—the Lord make his face to shine on thee! my second son!" said the old man solemnly.

Slowly the dusk gathered athwart the hills, with wailing winds and whirling drifts of snow—slowly the darkness wrapped them around; but in Zenas Carey's steadfast soul the light of an eternal Thanksgiving was burning; and his wife with tearful eyes, mused upon her two soldier boys—one dead at Gettysburg, the other sitting by her side.

The peculiar action on the kidneys and urinary organs of asparagus is frequently noticed during the season. Prof. Benson recently proved in the case of the Emperor William and others that in combination with malt and quinine it is an absolute specific for diseases of the liver, kidneys and urinary organs. His method has been adopted by the Malt Bitters Company, and this great German food is now composed of malt, Hops, quinine bark and asparagus.—Medical Times.

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no sort of need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters are taken occasionally.

SAMPLE COPIES.

We mail a large number of this week's issue of the JOURNAL to citizens of Woburn and neighboring towns, and ask those who receive copies to carefully examine its merits as a local and family paper. A desire to increase our circulation prompts us to take this course, believing that those of our people who are not subscribers to the JOURNAL only need to see and appreciate its value to send in their subscriptions. We have chosen this time to put forth a little extra effort to increase our list because the long evenings when people read most and have more time for it have come again. With the exception of an unusual amount of political matter, which a somewhat heated campaign makes necessary, and something less than common in the line of local news, this issue of the JOURNAL is a fair, average specimen copy. Will our people read it, and then as many of them as feel like it and can afford to do so, please bring in or send their orders.

SENATOR FRYE'S OPINION OF MR. BOWMAN.

No one will accuse Senator Frye of Maine of indulging in false statements on the stump or anywhere else. As a leading member of the upper house in Congress he has too much at stake to allow him to deal in loose talk. And then he is not the kind of a man to mislead the public on important matters discussed by him. He is honest and candid besides being able, and his statement of facts can always be relied on. In a speech made by him at a great meeting in Waltham on Monday evening last this is what he said of our Congressional candidate, Hon. S. Z. Bowman:—

Now I know your member of Congress from this district; I know Mr. Bowman well; I have served in Congress with him. I beg of you not to underestimate Mr. Bowman because occasionally a newspaper speaks of him lightly and with proper want of respect. I say to you that Mr. Bowman is the peer of any Representative in the Congress of the United State from New England. [Applause.] I say, and I say it knowingly, that Mr. Bowman is the equal of any member of Congress from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to-day. I say that he is an honest man, the first and highest requisite for a member of Congress. I say he is a true man. I say he is an active, vigorous man. I say he is a Republican [applause], holding to-day all the fundamental doctrines of the Republican party and believing in those doctrines. You can leave the ballot in his hands; he is safe. You can put your interests and the interests of the Republicans, of the Republic into his hands; he is safe. Try no experiment by putting those interests into the hands of the Democratic candidate, however well you may think of him personally.

MR. BOWMAN'S PROSPECTS.

A careful survey of the field shows that there is no opposition to Mr. Bowman in this District worthy of mention except among a little clique of esthetes and soreheads over in Cambridge. No man ever run for Congress or any other political office that didn't meet here and there an opponent in his own party, and that is true in Mr. Bowman's case. There is now and then a personal enemy who will not vote for him.

With the exception named there is really no opposition to his election in the District, and that won't amount to anything. If he lives until the 7th of November he will be elected M. C. from the new Fifth, and that in spite of "College Ward" and the pair of "Independent" newspapers in Cambridge.

Honest, thinking Republicans are not going to abandon Bowman for Morse or any other Democrat. Take Morse: what would Republicans gain by electing him? He is a Bourbon through and through. While in Congress he has never failed to vote with his party on all political questions. His civil service reform is thrown out to catch votes with; in short he is a Democrat; and a pretty thorough canvass of the District demonstrates the fact that not a great many Republicans will be found voting for Democrats this fall either for Congress or the gubernatorial chair.

After scouring the Fifth District all over, working night and day, the "independent" opponents of Mr. Bowman have succeeded in getting 484 names only to petitions praying Mr. Morse to run! They fell short of the requisite number just 1016! The "and others" represent the names they didn't get.

For the Journal.

By what process of reasoning a Republican can justify himself in voting for Butler for Governor, or Morse for Congress, "is what no feller can find out."

VOTER.

IMPORTANCE OF A FULL REPUBLICAN VOTE.

If Gen. Butler is elected on the 7th of next month it will be due to the apathy and negligence of the Republican party. Nobody seriously believes that he will poll the full strength of all the temporarily united factions which he leads, or that he will get as large a vote as he did in his last canvass. The conditions are not as favorable for him as they were in 1879, and yet unless Republicans do there whole duly his election is possible. But we do not believe they are quite ready to turn the State over to Gen. Butler. They are not prepared to give the helm up to the Democracy. Still, unless they go to the polls on election day and vote for Bishop such a fate awaits them. It is of the utmost importance that every Republican should do this. If they would win a victory there must be no stay-at-homes on election day. To be sure the signs all point to a Republican triumph; but battles have been lost by over-confidence, and we warn the members of our party that the only safe way is to go to the polls and vote, and get your neighbors to do likewise.

REGISTER.

This is one of the years when every Republican is expected to do his duty and his whole duty. If he places any value on his principles he ought to be willing to do something to maintain them. To maintain them he must vote, and as a preparatory step to that he must register. This duty is now in order. The Board of Registry are holding sessions for this purpose, and the books are open to receive Republican names. Do not put it off to the last moment when something may turn up to prevent you from visiting the Board, but go at once and make sure of it. The Democrats are piling up names on the registry, and there ought to be no luke-warmness, indifference, or neglect on the part of Republicans in taking this necessary preliminary step towards being heard at the ballot box.

We call upon every Republican voter in Woburn to lose no time in presenting himself before the Board of Registry and having his name recorded.

☞ If J. G. Maguire, Esq., who successfully practices law at 168 Main street, insists that the Democracy carry out their contract made with him on that memorable Sunday night before last spring's election to nominate him for the General Court this fall, there will be the biggest row in the Democratic camp that was ever seen or heard of in this neck of timber. Although he disclaims any intention of having his name used in the caucus leading Democrats aver that he will be a candidate, and will make a hot fight for the nomination. We shall see what we shall see.

☞ One of the Cambridge Morse missionaries, who hates Bowman as the devil hates holy water because he declined to "come down," came over here last week and tried to set temperance Republicans against him by telling the story that he is not a temperance man. The Cambridge Reform Club, which ought to know what it is about, two days before the Republican primaries were held in that city, invited Mr. Bowman to address the Club on temperance, which he did to their entire satisfaction.

☞ The enthusiasm which the nomination of Gen. Butler at first aroused in the souls of the Woburn Democracy seems to have pretty much died out. For a day or two after the convention it was declared that scores and hundreds of Republicans would vote for the General, but it would be hard to find a half dozen who even think of doing it. The enthusiasm was one of those quick, fierce blazes that, like a heap of carpenter's shavings, soon burn out.

☞ If we could find out without too much trouble which threw the brickbat—the Stoneham Independent, or the Winchester Star—we would submit a few remarks on the difference between a stable, consistant party newspaper, and a nondescript with an "independent" attachment, for its edification. Not being able to do this, we will keep our powder for larger game.

☞ It is said that the feelings of Mr. Morse have of late been so outraged by the criticisms of his personal record in Congress that he has determined not to wait for those fifteen hundred "independent" names, but has concluded to stand. In other words, he has got his back up, and petitioners or no petitioners, is bound to run and get beaten.

☞ Mr. Amos Cummings of this town was nominated for Congress by the Prohibition party at a meeting held in Boston last week. As Chairman of the State Central Committee he ought to be able to get hold of funds enough to elect himself.

☞ The report is current that Gen. Butler is to retire from the stump after making two more speeches. His committee think he is making too much capital for the Republicans, and if he is allowed to go on with his speech-making the fat will be all in the fire.

Republican Meetings.

Meetings are held every evening at the Republican Headquarters, 204 Main street, and will continue to be until the Campaign is closed. They are well attended. The rooms are crowded every night. An encouraging feature of the meetings is that many of the old Republicans who have kept aloof from political gatherings of late are regular attendants and participate in the proceedings. So much enthusiasm and so strong a disposition to strip to the work have not been exhibited by Woburn Republicans for a great while. They mean business. They mean to win if hard work and a full vote accomplish it. The Committee are greatly encouraged. They see Republicans all lifting together. There is no pulling apart. Everything is harmonious and determined. The prospect for Republican success here is first rate. Let everybody attend the meetings, especially the young men.

For the Journal.

Some of those Republicans of Woburn who declined to sign a paper to support Mr. Morse for Congress, but promised to vote for him, are known. Those "chickens are liable to come home to roost" sometime.

— The Democracy have thrown to the breeze a Butler flag, and are very proud of it. It contains only the name of Gen'l Benj. F. Butler, from which we conclude that the tail of the kite is of no sort of account to them. But out of respect for the office of Lieut. Governor it seems as though they ought to have put Bowerman's name on the flag.

— On last Friday morning while lifting a stove into his wagon Mr. Charles M. Strout injured his back very severely, with which he is still laid up. The same thing has occurred to him on several former occasions, and has proved very troublesome. He is somewhat better and will probably be about as good as new in a short time.

— We can't see that our good friend, Mr. Amos Cummings, carries his head any higher than before he was nominated for Congress. He isn't at all stuck up, but just as affable to poor folks as ever he was. He seems to be a good bit prouder of his new Boston superintendent of his ladies' suit rooms than the nomination, although there are not many of us who would turn up our noses at the honor of a Congressional nomination.

— Charlie Strout has got a new thing in candles that fairly takes the cake. They come cheap, and for a light to go about the house or down cellar with we have seen nothing that compares with them.

— Smith & Son are enjoying a much better trade in carpets than they anticipated. People have learned that they can save money by buying their carpets of Smith instead of going to Boston for them.

— Post 33, G. A. R. gave a very fine entertainment at Grand Army Hall last evening. The hall was well filled, and the exercises, consisting of music, readings, etc., were capital, and capitally received.

— The tally-ho coach used at the Globe theatre in Boston in the play of "Youth," with a full deck load and more in the hole, stopped at the Central House on the way through town last Sunday afternoon.

— Mr. Thomas Wilkins, who has purchased Mr. Porter's tobacco establishment, is working into the business finely. From the cut of his jib we have no doubt he will sustain the popularity of the old resort, and prosper.

— It must puzzle a Republican considerably to give a single sound reason for voting for Butler and Morse instead of Bishop and Bowman. If there is one in Woburn who thinks that way we would like to have him tell us why he proposes to vote so.

— The Democrats are making rafts of votes from Woburn material. About all they have to do is to pass the material in at one door of the courthouse and out at the other as the boy "went through college," and they are all ready to vote the Democratic ticket.

— About 1.30 yesterday morning the fire department was called out to give their attention to a fire on Middle street, which proved to be Charles Wendell's slaughter house, which was consumed with eleven hogs and other property, the whole amounting to about $600. Small insurance.

— The second entertainment in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course was capital. Mr. Pierce's promise to give us something first class was made good to the letter, and all were highly pleased. The Park Concert Company is as good as there is "on the road" and give a very fine entertainment.

— Last Wednesday evening Howard F. Rowe, District Deputy G. H. P., and suite made the annual visit to the Woburn Royal Arch Chapter and were handsomely received and treated. An exceedingly pleasant evening was spent by the brethren all of whom relished and were satisfied with the good fare furnished.

— Mrs. Joseph Ducette, whose home was on Everett street, was found dead under her bed there last Friday afternoon. She had been ill, but under Dr. S. W. Kelley's treatment was improving, so much so that she was able to sit up in bed, and it is supposed that while so sitting she became faint and fell beneath the bed where she was soon found by persons living in the other part of the house in a dying condition. Dr. Kelley was called but failed to find any cause of her death. She was about forty years old.

— On Sunday last Mr. Isaac D. Stearns was stricken with a second attack of paralysis and now lies in a critical condition at his home on Sturgis street. His left side is entirely paralyzed, and he is conscious only at intervals, and then but partially so. Some months had elapsed since the first attack and it was hoped he would become comparitively sound again, but the stroke on Sunday was a very severe one, and his end is a question of only a few days. Mr. G. R. Gage has been by the bedside of Mr. Stearns nearly all the time since he was stricken down, and other kind friends are almost constantly in attendance. It is the earnest wish of his hosts of friends that he will recover, but they have but little hope.

— There was a genuine surprise party at the residence of Thomas H. Hill, Esq., on Canal street, Wednesday evening, and no discount. Mr. Hill and family hadn't a suspicion of what was going on until they were struck at about 9 o'clock. At that hour the Board of Selectmen and business men on Main street to the number of about thirty invaded his peaceful home. They brought with them a rich and elegant parlor set of furniture and presented the same in due form. It was a very valuable present, and gracefully accepted by Mr. Hill for himself and family. A very nice lunch was partaken of by the party, after which the hours until 2 o'clock were spent in pleasant intercourse and jolly goings-on. Such invasions must be very comfortable things.

MISS MERTENA L. BANCROFT,

AFTER SEPTEMBER 20.

— Mr. Calvin Dexter died yesterday.

— The long, dark, dismal spell of weather came to an end on Tuesday night, and Wednesday was beautiful.

— If the Selectmen have no objections we would like to have Pleasant street paved from Market Square to Warren street. We should like it done right away.

— A register ought to be provided for the Public Library for visitors to record their names in. It is the practice of a good many libraries and would work well in ours.

— A very important meeting is called for tomorrow evening at Republican Headquarters. It is hoped that the rooms will be filled and an "overflow" become necessary.

— Chief of Police Conn has got into his new house on Scott street and feels about as well as they make them this year. He has a very pleasant home, and ought to be proud of it.

— Charles M. Munroe is selling clothing furnishing goods, hats, caps, etc., very cheap this fall. He has a full stock of prime goods, and everything sold is warranted not to rip, rag or ravel.

— Qualey Court, M. C. O. F., will give a grand ball in Lyceum Hall on the evening of November 3, prox. The National Orchestra will furnish the music. Full evening dress will prevail.

— George H. Ellison, a JOURNAL boy, who has had a pretty tough four-weeks' pull with fevers, has recovered sufficiently to make his appearance on the streets again. He is not entirely well however.

— It does one's eyes good to look into Hammond's show windows and examine the great stock of fall hats in the same. We are glad to know that Hammond is doing a fine business this season in clothing, hats and furnishing goods.

— By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Mr. William B. Harris offers several places for sale on easy terms. They are all first rate and very desirable pieces of property, and can be bought at good bargains.

— This evening will be a good time for those Republicans who have not already done so to visit the rooms of the Selectmen and register their names. No Republican worthy of the title or a place in the party will neglect this important duty.

— We would say to those readers who may receive sample copies of the JOURNAL this week, by way of apology, that we don't always have a political campaign on our hands, and therefore usually give more local and general news and less political than this issue contains.

— Just for the fun of the thing we should like to know how many Democrats will vote on their "first papers" of naturalization—certificates of the filing of their intentions to become citizens—on the 7th of next month. They have done it here a good many times, and will do it again if the Republicans don't keep the sharpest kind of an eye on them.

— A public hearing was given by the Selectmen on Tuesday evening in relation to cutting down the trees in front of Mr. Trull's place on Main street. It was quite largely attended and the question was thoroughly discussed pro and con by John I. Munroe, Elbridge Trull, E. N. Blake, John Johnson, Col. H. B. Hayes, G. R. Gage, Lawyer Norris and others. The decision of the Board was to set the trees back from the curbstone, with which Mr. Trull will be entirely satisfied.

— The next entertainment in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course will be given Wednesday evening, Nov. 8th by the Germania Quartette and Miss Rose Stewart, soprano. This will be one of the finest concerts in the course and will be on a par with the Schubert Club Concert. The members of the Quartette are the leading soloists of the Germania Band and all the principal orchestras of Boston. Mr. Bagley, the cornetist, is considered by musicians to be the best cornet player in the country not excepting Levy or Arbuckle. Miss Stewart is known to many of the masonic fraternity of Woburn who heard her at Melrose last season. The balance of this course will be excellent and full houses should be in order. Course tickets for the remaining five entertainments have been scaled down to $1.00 $1.40 and $1.75. If there are any people in Woburn outside of those who have already bought course tickets to this series who want to enjoy a good concert, and everybody can enjoy this, let them turn out Nov. 8th and pack Lyceum Hall.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, if the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all declare that it is a medicine possessing WILL and even more than it is meeting all and we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and realize yourself how this medicine hits the right spot, and puts CONVINCE all the machinery of your body into working order.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that hit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,

J. F. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

— We are glad Mr. Trull is going to save his handsome trees after all.

— A few evenings since a party of Woburn ladies and gentlemen gave Mrs. Wellington a surprise party at her home in Lexington. It was a very pleasant social meeting, and greatly enjoyed by all. Mrs. Wellington is a sister of Mr. Josiah Parker 2d and has many warm friends here.

— Our churches were well attended last Sunday, and in each good sermons were preached. It is not only pleasant but encouraging to see the meetinghouses well filled on the Sabbath day. Nor are we one of those who think, or pretend to think, that the ladies go at this season of the year to see what the prevailing styles in bonnets and cloaks are.

— Republicans should bear in mind that the Board is in session for registration of voters on October 26, 27, 31, November 2, 3, from 7 to 9 p. m.; and on November 4 from 7 to 10 p. m. The Democracy will not forget this you may be sure, and any Republican who fails to have his name put on will be to blame for not attending to an important duty. Register!

— The Sunday Globe prints a cock-and-bull story from the pen of its Woburn reporter all about a conversation that took place between a gentleman from Everett and one of our leading Republicans, which would do well to tell to the marines, but which old heads only laugh at. Even a Democratic campaign yarn should have some little sense in it.

— Rev. Frank H. Allen, son of Houghton Allen of this place, was installed pastor of the Congregational Church in Shrewsbury on last Wednesday. Rev. Dr. March and Mr. Houghton Allen were the delegates sent by the First Congregational Church of Woburn to the installation. Rev. Frank H. Allen is a very promising young man, a true Christian gentleman, and will make his mark in the profession.

— Henry A. Henshaw has reversed the true order of things, in non-polite language, got the cart before the horse. For after graduating at the JOURNAL office and taking his degree what should he do but enter Harvard college. This he did in September. Now, according to our ideas, he should have first graduated at Harvard, and then taken a finishing course at the JOURNAL office. But good luck to him all the same.

— We are not posted as to what the Republican Town Committee have in store for us, but they are gentlemen who understand their business and therefore it is fair to presume that the campaign will be conducted intelligently and successfully. They are making no great blow, but there are reasons for the belief that work is being done by them, and that by reason of their judicious management the Republicans of Woburn will cast a larger vote than ever before.

— J. Ed. Buchanan of Silverton, Colorado, formerly of Woburn, arrived home on Monday evening last on a short vacation after an absence from town of four and a half years. He is in love with the wild regions of the West to which he will soon return. During his residence there he has located and now owns four valuable claims in which the ore is already in sight. A railroad is built to within ten miles of his claims, and surveys made to within two miles for their extension.

— We are very glad to see the Woburn reporter of the Globe nudging up our men of means on the matter of tenements. Generally, Hill & Grammer have from 25 to 30 tenements to let on their books, and now they have only one. They say, and nobody knows better, that there hasn't been such a large demand for tenements here for years as at the present time, and the great want is a material increase of places to live in. We are satisfied that a great increase of our population would be the immediate result of additional houses.

— About two weeks ago a couple of artists were sketching at a distance of half a mile from the Chemical Works in this town and not far from the Reading line, when one of them in moving about was suddenly swallowed up by the earth. Emerging from the hole with the help of brother artist, an investigation was instituted, the disclosures of which were curious to say the least. A cave, or den, more than a dozen feet square and eight feet deep, boarded up on all sides, with floor and roof of boards, was found, which, judging from the loot in it, must at some former period have been the den of thieves. A report of the discovery was made and on the next Sunday Reading parties with an officer visited it. An amount of silverware was found, with several pounds of tobacco, box of cigars, pail of lard, three overcoats, which had remained so long under ground that they were too rotten to handle except with care. Subsequently some Woburn men visited the place, by whom it was found as described, the cave having a fire-place, shelves, and other conveniences. The roof had been covered over even with the surface of the ground and strewn with earth, leaves, pine cones, etc. A trap-door was discovered which was used for egress and exit of the inmates. There is no doubt but that this was the hiding-place of a gang of thieves that infested Woburn and neighboring towns some years ago. Its discovery created quite an excitement, and if we had time we would pen a romance about it.

Bowman or Morse.

The only opportunity presented of opposing Mr. Bowman is in supporting Mr. Morse, and how any Republican can turn his back on the grand old party and vote for a Democrat is impossible to conceive. Upon the question of Civil Service, the record of Mr. Bowman is at least as favorable as that of Mr. Morse. Whatever reasons have existed in the past for supporting Republican men and measures remain in full force to-day. There is no call at present for Republicans to hand the Country over to the tender mercies of the opposing party, who are always loud in their professions but faithless in the performance of accomplishing needed reforms in the State and Nation. Republicans should support Mr. Bowman because he represents them better and more fully than Mr. Morse does or can in Congress. He is influential as a speaker, active as a worker in Committees, respected by all his associates, prompt, willing and efficient in attending to the wants of his constituents, giving early attention to all letters or other demands upon his time; especially earnest and successful in his work for the soldiers as many a deserving one, or his widow or children, can testify, and in all things a prompt, courteous Member of Congress.

CITIZEN.

For the Journal.

Are you a Republican, and do you propose to vote the Republican ticket? Then bear in mind that election occurs this year on the 7th of November. Also see that your name is on the voting list. Let every Republican see for himself; do not put it off till too late. If any of your neighbors or friends have been left off notify them at once and induce them to register. A full vote means a sweeping Republican majority.

Regular meetings of O'Connell Court, M. C. O. F., are held on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month.

Two weeks ago it was thought that several Winchester Republicans would vote for Butler. None can be found now.

Will the Star be so obliging as to continue its narrative and inform an anxious and waiting public who Mr. Charles S. Childs "is the uncle of"?

A meeting of the Village Improvement Association was held in Harmony Hall on the evening of the 25th instant. More interest in the society is needed.

Considerable dissatisfaction is expressed with the condition of the thoroughfares leading in and out of this village. This ought not to be thus where wealth so abundantly abounds.

At the Town Meeting to be held on the 7th proximo it is said that an appropriation will be asked for with which to purchase a stone-crusher, an implement very much needed by the town. NOTE: This is written before the publication of the Town Warrant.

The Star of the 20th contained a 3-line notice of Mrs. Wells's essay on "Domestic Economy" delivered before the Fortnightly Club on the 9th—nearly two weeks before. This can't really be considered reportorial enterprise, but it does very well for the Star.

The handful of Greenbackers hereabouts have an able champion in the person of Mr. Sumner Richardson, as well as the temperance cause. To be sure the Greenback party is a very feeble one and rapidly growing more so, still Mr. Richardson hangs on, and is a member of the Congressional Committee.

The wedding of one of Winchester's fairest daughters, Miss Alice H. Fletcher, daughter of Parker Fletcher, Esq., and Mr. D. Webster Pratt, on Wednesday of last week, was a brilliant society event which I beg your pardon for not sending an account of in season for your last issue. It was a very delightful affair, participated in by a large party from Boston besides numerous Winchester people, and highly enjoyed by everybody present. The parties have your reporter's best wishes.

I am inclined to the belief that the present amusement season is to be a lively one here in Winchester. We have the material and the disposition for a big round of gaities between Thanksgiving and Lent, and if I am not very much mistakened there will be no lack of "good times" here during those meteorologically inhospitable months. The upper social circle here contains a great many young people who have the time, talents, and means for a gay season, and whisperings have reached my ears that the most is to be made of all of them.

The old tomb located near the Myopia Club House, whose owner is Mr. Buckman of Arlington, is attracting considerable attention in the newspapers. It is off High street, and although the contents are exposed, it is impossible for the passer-by to see them unless he goes out of the way. The tomb is on the Andrews estate, and the owner has been notified time and again, by the Winchester authorities, to take proper steps in the matter, but nothing has ever been done. Prompt measures are now being taken by our authorities, and the cause of complaint will be remedied.—Star.

The meeting of the Reform Club held Sunday evening and addressed by Mrs. Livermore was a rouser. The audience room of the Baptist church was filled and it was found necessary to carry in settees to accommodate the large number of people which the pews would not contain. Rev. Mr. Fielden, pastor of the Baptist church, presided over the meeting; Rev. Mr. Seymour, pastor of the Congregational Church, read the scriptures; and Rev. Mr. Leonard, pastor of the M. E. Church, offered prayer, etc. Mrs. Livermore gave a very able lecture which was listened to with great attention. Visitors were present from neighboring towns.

Your Winchester itemizer appears to give the itinerant "local" of the Star considerable trouble one way and another without intending it. Though I think ye "local" aforesaid too often looks through a glass darkly at my humble efforts to furnish our citizens with the local news through your widely circulated columns, I am not to blame if I do more and better work in this way than he does, and ought not to be taken to task for it so frequently and spiritedly. When it is remembered that he has the local news of two papers to attend to, besides soliciting subscribers and advertising, and only spends one day in a week in this place, it ought not to be expected of him to do as well as a person always on the spot; but at the same time it is not quite the square thing in him to try to belittle my work, or to rob me of the credit due for it.

On this, Friday evening, the Republicans of Winchester, will hold their caucus for the purpose of putting in nomination a candidate for Representative to the General Court, it being our turn this year. Last week the JOURNAL announced that the contest had narrowed down to Messrs. S. W. Twombly and James F. Dwinell, but since then several other names have sprung up, among them Henry C. Miller, C. H. Dunham and Salem Wilder on the Republican side; and George G. Stratton, George R. Brine and others on the Democratic. I am of the opinion, however, that the nomination lies between the gentlemen named last week, unless the fight becomes so hot that it will be thought best to trot out the "dark horse," in which event it would be hard to say where the lightning may strike, though I am of the opinion that it would hit close in the vicinity of Mr. S. C. Small, Judge Littlefield, or Postmaster Brown. I trust there will be no unseemly proceedings at the caucus, but that everything will be done with a friendly feeling.

The meeting of the Fortnightly Club, held last Monday afternoon, was a very interesting one indeed. At 7 o'clock the members with their invited guests of the sterner sex gathered around tables in Harmony Hall laden with the fat of the land provided by the ladies, and partook of the feast. The President, Mrs. Annie Winsor, gracefully presided. Rev. George Cook asked the blessing. Mrs. C. W. Gray, who had been chosen Toast Master, gave as the first sentiment, "Our Gentlemen Guests," which was happily responded to by Mr. Robert C. Metcalf; Mr. S. W. Twombly spoke handsomely to "The Village Improvement Association," and Mr. William Webb said some humorous things anent the toast complimentary to the spread. These were sandwitched with piano pieces by Misses Madge Mosely, Annie Wells and Mrs. Bailey. There was very fine singing by Mrs. W. H. Bailey, Mrs. William Twombly, Mrs. Leonard and Mr. Witherell, recitations by Dr. Flag and pleasant social converse by all of the one hundred and fifty present. The Club is flourishing.

For the Journal,

As the medals of Butler are conspicuous in all the bar-rooms, brothels and houses of ill-repute in the cities and large towns it only shows "the eternal fitness of things," as these places are the nurseries of Butlerites.

WOBURN.

Bishop or Butler.

Mr. Bishop's record is of the very highest character for honest and economical administration, and he deserves, not merely the cordial and earnest support of his party, but the vote of every truly independent man who candidly compares him with the candidate opposed to him. As between Butler and Bishop there is no reason why Butler should get the vote of any man capable of thinking for himself. Every intelligent person knows that Butler's campaign is a sham, that he does not mean what he says, that he talks for the purpose of humbugging his hearers, and that he only seeks the governorship to gratify his desire, in his own words, "to get atop of the men who have been atop of me." Now we do not elect Governors in Massachusetts for that purpose. We elect them to serve the state, honestly, faithfully and modestly, and we do not expect them to suspend the laws of nature or the laws of the commonwealth. The only possible danger of the election of such a man as Gen. Butler, who represents all the political evils he denounces, lies in the popular disgust with the general hollowness of party cries, the apathy attending the belief that old issues are decided, and the curiosity of the unthinking as to "what the old fellow would do" should he be elected. But, in electing a Governor of the commonwealth higher motives should rule. Let us think what we may of the old parties and their pretensions, here we are asked to choose between two men whose records are well known to us. The record of one is clean, honest and conservative. The record of the other abounds in all those political errors and evils which even he himself condemns, and no man attempts to justify.—Herald.

The emigrant, tourist, or traveler bound for the productive mines and fertile prairies of the Great Southwest is maninous in selecting the route via Coicago. Implicit confidence is placed in the Kansas City pioneer line, composed of the C. B. & Q. and Old Reliable Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroads. Through fast trains are run by this Line and the equipment is unsurpassed.

Caught Him Again.

The Advertiser trips up Gen. Butler in his explanation of his defeat for Congress in 1874, when he was a Republican candidate. Gen. Butler said, in Music Hall, the other night:

I came home from the war and was elected to Congress as a Republican candidate for several terms, and in 1874, at the request of the Republican state committee and the order of the national committee, I left Massachusetts and stumped Indiana and Ohio for the Republican party, with an entirely different result from what happened there the other day. I came home only the night before election, and while I was away the district was stolen from the Republican party by the fault of the Republican committee while I was doing its bidding elsewhere.

The facts were that Ohio and Indiana both went Democratic that year. But I came home and was at the convention which nominated him, and made a speech there, on the 12th of October. He canvassed the district thoroughly until the election day, on the 3d of November, and he was defeated, the majority against him being nearly 1000, while Gov. Talbot's majority over Gaston in the same district was 2246. Cannot Gen. Butler tell a straight story?—Herald.

"Do boldly what you do at all." Boldly do we affirm that Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for liver, bowels and kidney diseases rheumatism and piles vanish before it. The tonic effect of Kidney-Wort is produced by its cleansing and purifying action on the blood. Where there is a gravelly deposit in the urine, or milky, ropy urine from disordered kidneys, it always cures.

If bilious, or suffering from impurity of blood, or weak lungs and fear consumption (scrofulous disease of the lungs), take Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and it will cure you.

The purity and elegant perfume of Parker's Hair Balsam explain the popularity of this reliable restorative.

Gen. Butler's Memory.

Gen. Butler should be more cautious in his conundrums, as well as more careful in his historical statements. In referring to the star route frauds in his Springfield speech he asked why, when Brady came before Congress and "showed his hand" in calling for an extravagant appropriation, "some Republican didn't try to stop that performance." What was then so controlling upon Congress, he inquired, "that, without an investigation, which would have shown all that has been disclosed in the papers since then, it gave the money to be squandered in that way?" And he found the answer in the fact that "a presidential election was just coming on," and money was needed by the Republicans to enable Dorsey to buy up Indiana. Gen. Butler really needs a smart prompter if he is to continue on the stump. Dosen't he know that the Democrats were in control of the House and the committees during the administration of Brady, and voted the appropriations, and that the failure to investigate the star route stealings was a scandal in which the Democrats in the 46th Congress were quite as deeply implicated as were the Republicans? The question he should ask, as a leader of the opposition, is: "Why didn't some Democrat try to stop that performance?"—Herald

A Few of General Butler's Misstatements.

Time would fail any one who should attempt to go through with the speeches of Gen. Butler delivered thus far in the campaign, with a view of pointing out one after another the misstatements, misrepresentations and distortions which they contain. We shall not undertake the work, but will call attention to a few of them, which are most glaring.

In Music Hall he said that seven thousand men were killed or wounded in the capture of Fort Fisher. The official report of General Terry gives the number 647. General Butler was, therefore, within 6353 of the correct number.

The same night he said that the price of bunting was $36 per piece when he began its manufacture. The price current shows that the price in gold was less than $12.

On another occasion he declared that the Hoosac Tunnel has cost the people of Massachusetts $40,000,000. Official statistics give the cost of the Tunnel and about fifty miles of road, with the interest to the time of making the last calculations, as $21,000,000 in round numbers.

In his letter of acceptance he declared that the State took from the tax-payers $7,500,000 annually. The official reports show that for all purposes the expenditures of the State were $4,625,000 last year, the balance of the taxes collected being paid back to the towns.

At Springfield Saturday night he declared that there were 100,000 office holders in the United States having salaries ranging from $1000 to $17,000. Accurate computation made in Washington since that statement was made shows that there are in the civil service of the United States at the present time 98,000 officers and employes, of whom 25,433 have salaries of $1000 per annum and upward. At least 40,000 have salaries of less than $500, and 25,000 do not receive $100 a year.

We might continue this sort of thing through several columns, but the above is sufficient to show General Butler's habit of inacuracy. No wonder that the cooler heads in the party councils are anxious to keep him from making further speeches. Such gross inaccuracies would ruin the strongest candidate ever nominated by the Democratic party, which is saying a good deal.—Boston Journal.

Political.

Representative Robinson exposes General Butler's inconsistency when he quotes from his speech in the Forty-fifth Congress: "I would build every possible public building if I had the power to do so; it is false economy not to do so." In his letter of acceptance and speeches Gen. Butler denounced appropriations for public buildings.—Boston Journal.

A Herald dispatch announces that on Friday Gen. Butler arrived at Greenfield and went into consultation with the Democratic County Committee and the liquor dealers, laying plans for the Franklin county campaign. It does not seem possible that such a campaign can be successful in Franklin or any other county except Suffolk. How can any man be a reformer who invites into his councils that interest which causes 80 per cent of all violence and crime?—Fitchburg Sentinel.

It is probable that if Mr. Leopold Morse had dreamed last June that he would assume the role of an Independent candidate for Congress he would not have made himself conspicuous by voting to sustain the unblushing frauds in the Mackey-O'Connor election case of South Carolina. He voted to sustain the frauds, while the mass of his party associates did not vote on the question. Mr. Morse cuts a sorry figure as an Independent.—Boston Journal.

Mr. Leopold Morse posing as the champion of the civil service reformers to the Fifth District is a rich spectacle. He has been the most inveterate spoils hunter who ever crowded the navy yard with inefficient political bummers for selfish purposes, and the fact is so notorious that his friends attempt to turn it in his favor. The Boston Herald for instance, in advocating his cause, says, "he has shown his ability to get his share of the spoils" and is a "handy man" to "get things done." Truly the sore-heads of the Fifth District, who have attempted to disguise themselves as civil service reformers, present a sorry spectacle as they chant praises for "Morse and Reform."—Charlestown News.

In a speech at Ayer, in October, 1878, Gen. Butler dilated with his usual enthusiam upon abuses which he represented as existing in the State institutions, and especially upon the practise of nepotism, as illustrated in filling subordinate places with the relatives of those in charge. Then he said: "They have got their friends into office, and very naturally, too. Don't blame them, for we would do it if we were they." This unguarded admission shows the worthlessness of Gen. Butler's pretended purpose to give the State a better government. He cites the worst instances of mismanagement which he can discover or invent, and then admits that he and his followers would do as badly if they were only given a chance. This impudent proclamation of a readiness to use State offices for private purposes shows what kind of a reformer Gen. Butler really is.—Boston Journal.

DR. CHARLES CRAIG:—Dear Sir: Suffering as I have been for a long time with a fearful cold, that finally settled into what is termed a quick consumption, and so pronounced by the attending physician, I heard of your Consumption Cure, and while having little faith in anything benefiting me, procured some of it, used it, and to-day am to the wonder of myself and friends apparently a well man. I write this as I feel in duty bound to do for the benefit of suffering humanity, and can but hope that the thousands who are now suffering with that supposed incurable disease Consumption will try your Consumption Remedy. They will receive speedy relief and a permanent cure. You can send any one to me who cares to be advised as to the manner in which your medicines cured me.

Preaching vs. Practice.

BROTHER GARDNER'S VIEWS ON CHURCHES AND CHURCH PEOPLE.

"In our church de odder Sunday", said the old man, as the hall grew quiet, "our pastor warned young men agin de awful effecks of drink. Dat war k'rect, and yet two of de elders of dat same church own buildings which dey rent to saloon keepers.

"De pastor shed tears bekase de heathen of India war gwine down de wrong path, and I had only to look frew de window to see de boys playin' base ball in a vacant lot, an' a dozen of men standin' aroun' a saloon door.

"De pastor spoke of de prevalence of evil in high places, an' yet I stood beside him when he woted last year, an' he put in a straight ticket. On dat ticket war' candidates who deserved State prison wus dan office, but he swallowed de hull bizness at a gulp.

"De pastor said dat de love of dress was bringin' dis kentry to ruin, an' yet his wife sot dar wid a bonnet on which cost eighteen dollars.

"De pastor said it war' a sin to strive for riches, and den he turned about and wolloped de congregashun fur not havin' more money to drap in de contribushun box.

"De pastor said a Christian must let his own consence be his guide, an' den he turned about an' warned 'em to keep away from theaters an' circuses an' sich.

De pastor spoke of the sin of greed, an yet if we hadn't raised his salary of $200 last Jinuary, he was gwine to leave us for anoder field.

"My frens, do not misunderstand my posishun.

"I believe in all dat a true Christian believes in, but I have to wonder at de inconsistencies of our religion. When a pastor preaches one fing an' practices, anoder, what's an elder gwine to do? When an elder prays that the world may better, and den turns aroud an' cheats de eye-teef out of a man on a hoss trade what's a trustee gwine to fink? An' when a trustee gets up in prayer meetin' an' says dat greed an' avarice mus' be driben from de heart, an' den walks home an' raises de rent on all his ole tenement shanties, what's a poo' humble an' ebery day Christian gwine to hang to?

"An', lastly, when three outer five of our poo' an' humble ebery day Cristians stan' up ebery week an' confess dat dey hab sinned, what show has a sinner really got?

"I tell you dat goin' to church am only outward show. Jinin' de church doan take two feet off the distance to Heaben. Prayin' an' singin' an' talkin' may mean much or noffin at all. Call no man a sinner bekase he doan rent a church pew. Gin no man credit for religion bekase he prays in a loud voice."

A Voice from the Press.

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your Hop Bitters. Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whisky, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Connor, friends, have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now. S. GILLILAND,
July 25, '78. People's Advocate, Pittsburg Pa.

While John Brown was on his way to the scaffold he wanted to stop and kiss a negro baby, and they let him. They were not disposed to deny the old many any reasonable luxury.

Edward Barnes of Lynn, Mass., states that for over two years he was troubled with frequent spitting of blood, severe cold and cough, night sweats, and general debility, so that I was given up by my friends and my doctor to die. Finally I was advised to try your remedies, which I did for three months, the Swedish Lung Balsam for my lungs, the Swedish Botanic Compound to build up my constitution and restore my appetite, and the Swedish Pepsin Pills to regulate the bowels. The result is that today I am entirely cured, and feel as well as ever in life.

LYNN, March 8, 1882.

Dr. F. W. A. BERGENGREN: Dear Sir—I have been using your Swedish Botanic Compound for kidney complaint and Scrofulous Humor, and have derived great benefit from it. This is saying a good deal, as before I commenced to use the Compound I was the greatest part of the time unable to work, and I have tried medical advice and all kinds of medicine, but without avail until I used your Remedy. Since taking it I have been feeling like a new man, and been able to attend to my work. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.

All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.

THE CRUMPS.

The Crumps were, or considered themselves the very best people in Potsville, and Josiah Crump, the present head of the family, was very proud of his ancestors. He was about the meanest man in money matters ever known. He had driven his boys from home by his niggardness; and now that his wife was dead his daughter Pamela was all that he had left. She was a handsome, strong, well-made girl, with a good mind, although he had given her the poorest education and no accomplishments whatever. She worked in his house without help, or thanks, or reward of any kind; her only consolation being that she was Miss Crump.

"Much good that does me," she used to say, as she toiled away to save her rich father a few dollars more.

Girls who had no grandfathers to boast about had accomplishments and good clothes, and comforts and pleasures of all sorts which she never knew, and which her father could well afford. At last, on her nineteenth birthday, after she had longed in silence for many days, Pamela, grew bold. Long, fur-lined cloaks were just coming into fashion, and how she wanted one, only a girl can know.

It was while her father sat counting over a great roll of bills, which he had just received as the rent of certain property, that she went up softly behind him and said meekly:

"Pa, can I have one of those large black silk cloaks, such as Betsey Burroughs wears—one with a fur lining? I'll make it myself. It will wear for years. Oh, pa, I do so want it!" and she paused with hands unconsciously clasped together.

Mr. Crump looked at her horror-stricken. "A silk cloak with a fur lining?" he repeated slowly. "No, you can't Pamela; its too expensive. Get your poor ma's gray blanket shawl. I'm sure she'd be willing,"

"Poor ma's shawl had moths in it two years before she died," sighed Pamela. "She wouldn't wear it, and you never pa, you don't know how badly off I am. I've outgrown my sacque, and look like a fool in it. I have boy's shoes, and a hat—oh, dear, such a hat! I cannot really go out anywhere."

"Women should be keepers at home," said Mr. Crump.

"Certainly I ought to go to church," said Pamela.

"Not to show fine clothes," said Mr. Crump.

"But I ought to dress like a lady," sighed the poor girl. "I should think you'd admit that, pa."

"Ladies are not always most dressed," said Mr. Crump. "Far from it. You are Miss Crump. Remember that the Crumps are the oldest family in Pottsville."

"Oh, I know all that, pa," interrupted Pamela; "but it does no good if I must go about looking like a beggar."

Mr. Crump brought his cane down on the floor, and thundered out, "hold your tongue, Pamela," buttoned his pocket-book into his bosom, and trotted away to deposit his money, while Pamela, scarlet from brow to chin, remained where he had left her.

"Oh, what shall I do?" she exclaimed at last. "Is this a women's fate, to beg all the days of her life? I have no education. I cannot teach. I can do nothing but housework. I am the best washer in the village, but—There!" cried Pamela, bringing her foot down on the floor suddenly. "There! I've got it. A girl who can wash and iron as I can, doesn't need to beg for her clothes.

Brushing her tears away, she ran into the entry, took from a peg her shabby sacque and hat, put them on, locked up the house, and hurried down the village street as fast as her young, strong limbs could carry her, until she stopped at a little white house at the lower window of which she tapped. A little girl opened the door, and Pamela followed her into the sitting-room, where a thin woman sat amid cushions in a big Boston rocking chair, with a bran new baby across her knee, two older ones on the floor near her, and two little boys building a block house on the table, while the little girl that opened the door made the sixth of the youthful group.

"Why Miss Pamela," said the mother, "how pleased I am to see you! Excuse my getting up. I ain't well yet. I was thinking when you came in whether or no I should be able to darn that place in the carpet, but I don't feel as if I shall. Nurse has gone away and sister can't come, because her husband is down with malaria, and I'm awfully unsettled."

"You must be," said Pamela, dandling the baby. "Why what a little beauty it is, Mrs. Pease. I suppose you've got a washerwoman this week."

"No, I haven't. It's my worst trouble" said Mrs. Pease. "I had Kitty bring the things in, and they are all mended and sorted out; but black Barbara is engaged up on the hill, and I don't know what I'll do."

"Hire me," said Pamela.

"My!" laughed Mrs. Pease. "Why Miss Crump!"

"I mean it," said Pamela. "I wash better than black Barbara, and I want to earn some money. You can pay me what you gave her, Mrs. Pease."

"I mean it from my heart, said Pamela. Pa thinks more of his money than he does of me. I'm going to earn clothes for myself. I need them I'm sure."

"Men are so peculiar sometimes," sighed Mrs. Pease. "If you really mean it, it will be a great comfort to me."

Pamela instantly took off her bonnet and sacque, tucked up her skirt, and took Kitty out into the kitchen with her.

Before night the washing white as snow, was piled in a great clothes-basket, Mrs. Pease had had a great bowl of soup, and all was tidy in the little sitting-room, where Pamela sat mending the bit of carpet.

"I knew it would bother you until it was done," she said, "and now I'll go home and get Pa's tea."

"Oh, Miss Pamela I am so much obliged," said Mrs. Pease. "And I believe you've only done it to oblige me."

"No," said Pamela, "I did it to earn money. May I come next Monday?"

"Why, gracious me! if you will," said Mrs. Pease.

"Been to see Mrs. Pease?" asked curious Mrs. Chalker, peeping out of her kitchen door as Pamela passed.

"I've been washing for her," said Pamela.

"Why, how christian kind of you, to be sure," said Mrs. Chalker.

"Nothing of the sort," said Pamela. "I took my dollar for it. Have you any washerwoman, Mrs. Chalker?"

"No, I haven't and ain't able to wash,', said Mrs. Chalker.

Pamela instantly offered her services.

"I am going to do washings," she said. "I am going to do it just as other washerwomen do, for money, I shan't explain why. But here I am a splendid laundress, ready to be hired six days in the week, from 7 to 6, if anyone wants me."

So it began. Before long Pamela had many employers, and the village was rife with suspicion as to the why and wherefore; but never was a girl prouder of herself than was Pamela when she laid down on the counter of a dry goods store the money for the silk and fur of the coveted cloak; hard-earned money, but all her very own, not a cent of it coaxed out of any unwilling man alive.

She wore the cloak and a pretty plush bonnet and new kid gloves to church on Christmas day. She looked well. The squire stared at he solemnly, but he knew she had no money.

"I reckon," he thought, "she's cut up her poor ma's old black silk. I won't ask any questions," and he held his peace.

Pamela, as she looked at him, wondered what he would say if he knew all. That week she had some cards printed—professional cards.

The printer brought them home the next morning. They read thus:

The cards were circulated through the village by a boy hired for the purpose, and on her return at night from her day's work, Pamela found a postal card awaiting her:

MISS CRUMP, Laundress—Please call at Mr. Bothwell's early to-morrow.

G. BOTHWELL."

Now Mr. Bothwell was the new minister, a widower with two children. He knew nothing of the Crumps or of the village as yet. He had preached there once and been "called" in consequence, on the demise of the excellent Mr. Delorous, who had departed this life at a ripe old age. Pamela laughed a little as she determined to to call and see what was desired. At seven o'clock she rang the bell of the pastor's very small house and was answered by the gentleman himself. He was in evident distress of mind and his dressing gown needed mending sadly.

He looked at Miss Crump for a moment and then requested her to walk into the study. It was a dusty place with a good deal of manuscript lying about; and the shrieks of weeping children were heard in the distance.

"May I ask what I can do for you, madam?" inquired the gentleman, motioning to a seat.

"You wrote to me," said Pamela. "Miss Crump, laundress."

"Oh, dear me, yes," replied Mr. Bothwell, with wide open eyes— "I wrote to you. Thanks for your promptness. The fact of the matter is, my housekeeper—an aged colored person—I thought her most estimable—is lying terribly intoxicated on the kitchen floor, and has been for two days and things are—are—"

And Mr. Bothwell, running short of words, spread his hands abroad in a pantomime descriptive of chaos.

"I understand," said Pamela, calmly. "Where is your kitchen?"

Two hours afterwards the master was calmly writing in his study, and the children, washed and dressed, were listening to the stories Pamela told them as she rubbed away at the wash-board.

The housekeeper had been dumped upon a bed in a small bed-room on the lower floor to sleep off her intoxication, and potatoes were boiling and a couple of chickens roasting for the family dinner.

Meanwhile Mr. Crump, having some important documents to inspect, had come home unexpectedly, and entering the house, had found it empty, and entering the sitting-room came upon a sight which petrified him with horror.

A little portable desk, which his daughter had appropriated for her own, lying on the table and in it the cards we have described, and her account book.

He read the card first:

Then he ran his eye over the account book.

Washed—Monday, for Mrs. Pease; Tuesday, for Mrs. Chalker; Wednesday, for Mrs. Mott; ironed Thursday afternoon; house-cleaning for Mrs. Downs on Saturday.

December 5th—Bought the silk and fur for cloak.

December 10th—Made cloak. It fits well.

December 25th—Wore cloak to church, and thanked heaven I hadn't got to beg it from father.

Then Mr. Crump closed the book, and with a queer disposition to cry, sat down beside his solitary hearth and looked at the fire for several hours without stirring.

When Pamela opened the door and came in, she saw her father and knew that he knew all.

"Pamela, come here," he said. "How long has this been going on?"

"Since October, pa," the girl answered.

"Then you've been disgracing me and yourself for three months," said the old man. "You, a Crump! and all to spite your poor old father for being careful of his money."

Pamela was not afraid of her father now. She came over and sat beside him.

"Pa," she said, "it was not for spite; it was for need; I suffered so much mortification, not only from being shabby, but having to beg. If there is anything in good blood, as you think there is, perhaps that made it hard for me to beg from even you. I was happier earning what I needed. Would you like to be a beggar, pa?"

"You've done very wrong Pamela," said her father. Then he paused and added: "You shall tell me what allowance you need for your clothes, and I will let you have it monthly. Now give me those cards."

He burnt them in the fire when she had handed them to him, and hurried away to his tea, and no more was said. The Crumps are not great talkers.

But Pamela is not sorry for what she did to this day. As for Mr. Bothwell, he rejoices; for otherwise perhaps, he might, being a shy man, never have met Pamela Crump, who is to marry him before long. Other people may blame her for her "escapade," or call her "odd" or spiteful; he understands her, and admires her all the more for he independence.

"Though, Pamela," he often says, "I should have offered myself all the same had you actually been a laundress."

GRAND

Republican Rally!

GEN. MYERS of Ohio.

GEN. SWIFT of Boston.

On Saturday Evening, Nov. 4.

The Republicans of Woburn will hold a GRAND RALLY in LYCEUM HALL, at which speeches will be made by Gen. Myers of Ohio, and Gen. Swift of Boston, and other distinguished gentlemen.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

The Democrats are anxious lest the Republicans should again nominate Mr. Hayden for the General Court. He is the only Republican they fear. For three years running with a conceded Democratic majority in the town of not less than two hundred he has been elected to represent it, and the other side have every reason to believe that if nominated he will be elected for the fourth time. Of course this success has been brought about by Democratic help. The Republicans unaided could not have elected Mr. Hayden, and they cannot this year, if he stands, without assistance from the same source. But if nominated we have no doubt but that he will occupy his old seat in the House this winter. Many intelligent Democrats who would not vote for him concede this. Hence their anxiety as to what the Republicans will do in the matter.

Perhaps it would be nearer the mark to say that Mr. Hayden elects himself, or rather, his past success has been due to his high political, business and social character and standing. He is no politician, much less a partisan. In representing the town in the General Court he knows no party, but devotes his time and talents to the common weal. In the last three years the Democrats of Woburn have taken as much pride in their Representative as the Republicans have. There is a large element in the local Democratic party who like to have their town take an honorable place in the Legislature—who want it represented by a gentleman—a man of ability, sterling worth, of high business and social standing and therefore of influence. Mr. Hayden is that man: they knew it: hence they vote for him.

Whether Mr. Hayden would accept of a nomination or not we are unable to say, or whether the Republicans will nominate him even if he is willing to stand. But in our judgment they ought to nominate him, and if they do he ought to consent to carry the party's banner again this fall.

THE RALLY.

The fact probably is that every Republican in Woburn has made up his mind to be at the grand Republican rally in Lyceum Hall to-morrow evening, so urging on our part is unnecessary. Our only object in mentioning the subject is to keep the date of the meeting fresh in the public mind. Also, to suggest that it will be necessary to go to the hall early if a seat would be secured.

The speakers of the evening are the most eminent on the stump. It is worth a great deal to hear them. Gen. Myers is the best there is anywhere. His eloquence makes his services in demand in all the States where elections are to be held. The Republicans were very fortunate in getting him here. The Democrats ought to come out if only to hear something fresh and good and vigorous. He carries all before him, and because he does so the Democratic leaders will not allow the rank and file to hear him, and to hear the truth.

Gen. Swift is no stranger to Republican audiences in Woburn. He has been here. He always draws great crowds. He is called the "silver tongued," and rightly, for his speeches are the quintescence of eloquence concentrated and boiled down. Everybody will crowd into the hall to hear Gen. Swift.

The Woburn Brass Band will discourse its very best music. That means the best that can be furnished.

"A CHANGE."

Once in a while a Republican of easy political virtue will be heard to say: "no, I care nothing for Butler, but it would be well enough to have a change." Of course such people do not realize the full meaning of such a remark, nor the effect that a general sentiment of the kind would have on the well-being of the State. There are uneasy, dissatisfied souls in all parties, communities, and everywhere who are never really happy unless things are changing. Matters stable, fixed, orderly are not of the pattern that suits their restless, wavering spirits. Change has charms for them, but what change, or how, or from what to what they are the last persons in the world to shed any light on. They are brave and skillful at pulling down, but as architects and builders are failures.

Massachusetts has, fortunately for her, been in the hands of Republicans a great many years. Their administration of affairs has been wise and profitable for the people: they have prospered under it: everything has been properly done and for the best: there have been no charges of mal-administration except by Gen. Butler: the Commonwealth has increased in influence, position and wealth under Republican control. Still a few Republicans of the stripe specified pretend to think a change this year would be a good thing. We have no patience with such irrational, uneasy, and never-satisfied people.

A REACTION.

It was true most likely that when Gen. Butler was first nominated quite a number of Republicans were heard to say, thoughtlessly of course, that they should vote for him. There was a hurrah about the announcement that tended to excite the public mind, and as we are all more or less influenced by the political atmosphere surrounding us, it would have been strange if now and then a good Republican had not been thrown from his base and said things without properly considering them.

The sober second thought has, however, changed all this. Reflection has done its perfect work. The excitement has died out, and no more is heard about Republicans voting for Gen. Butler. That is the way it always works. There is a sort of dare-devil dash about the Democratic candidate that "takes" with people of mercurial temperament. But after all when they sit down and consider the matter calmly these same people prefer something more reliable and substantial in the administration of State affairs than dare-devil dash. So it is safe to affirm that whatever might have been said three weeks ago very few, if any, Woburn Republicans will vote for Gen. Butler.

GO AND VOTE.

Good Republicans ought not to be urged to vote—there shouldn't be any necessity for it. Good Republicans should, of their own free will and accord, go to the ballot-box. Men ought to take interest enough in the success of their party and principles to make some sacrifice for it. Great interests are at stake in next Tuesday's election. Candid, thinking men understand this without being told. They know what the election means, appreciate its importance, would have it go right; then why shouldn't they put their shoulders to the wheel and make it go right?

If every Republican in Woburn will do his whole duty next Tuesday the usual Democratic majority may and will be greatly reduced. To the stay-at-homes is due in a large measure this Democratic majority. That side of the house always go to the polls, rain or shine, and vote to a man. Their full strength is felt at every election. Why shouldn't Republicans be as smart and active in support of their party and principles as their opponents are? They should be, and and more so, because they have a better party, better principles, better candidates, and a better cause than the other side have.

AT HOME.

From all accounts Mr. Bowman will receive on Tuesday next a rousing vote in Somerville. The Republicans are solid for him and scores and scores of Democrats will go to the polls and cast their ballots for Bowman. A big and real genuine wave of Bowman enthusiasm has struck the city strong, which tells a better story for our candidate than anything else could. When a man's neighbors and townsmen all come up and support him for office it is the surest sign in the world that he is worthy—that there is something of him. Bowman's neighbors and townsmen, party or no party, will vote for him solid.

All of which means that Mr. Bowman will be re-elected by the full Republican majority, for not only will Somerville do the handsome thing by him, but the tide has turned all over the District, and it is Bowman now where it was Morse a week ago. We congratulate our excellent and worthy M. C. on his very flattering prospects.

BOWMAN IN CAMBRIDGE.

It has been iterated, reiterated, insisted upon and stuck to that there would be a large shortage in the Bowman vote in Cambridge on the 7th. So persistant have been his few enemies in circulating such yarns that some good Republicans have questioned whether Bowman had any strength or friends in, around, or anywhere near the "academic groves," etc., etc. Now, the fact is right the other way. Bowman is strong in Cambridge as the vote next Tuesday will show. He will get votes equal to the entire Republican strength in that city. Please stick a pin in right there. "College Ward" and the two "independent" newspapers there will wake up next Wednesday morning and wonder whether they had been kicked by a mule or a political earthquake had been loitering around in their neighborhood, the night before. There is a big surprise party in store for those fellows on the Bowman vote in Cambridge.

☞ A word of advice to Woburn Republicans who have not yet registered: Do so at the earliest opportunity, which according to the notice will be on this evening, November 3, at 7 o.clock: go early and report to some of the Police who will assign you a position in line. Be sure and have your paper: if you have not yet gotten your final paper take along your declaration of intention, or first paper, sometimes that answers as well. Be sure to remember your reading lesson: Keep constantly in mind that "All men are born free and equal." Should you forget, become embarassed and hesitate call on the Police to protect you; they will be there in force, and having been engaged most of the time for the past few years in making and registering voters you will find them active, vigilant, and brave; do not hesitate to call upon them for they are paid by the Town about sixty dollars a month for just this service, and you as a (to be) citizen of the town have rights which they are bound to respect. Should they fail to respond to your call for assistance immediately, inform them that you are a man of influence! Should the legibility of your hand-writing be questioned do not get offended at the Supervisors, for they are bound by their oaths as Town Officers to perform their duties according to statute law, and should any one attempt to register without complying fully with the letter and spirit of the law in relation to qualifications of voters, they will be quick to detect and prompt to punish every such offender.—

☞ Mr. Montague, a prominent citizen of Cambridge, and a candidate in the Congressional convention, has been relied on to make a fight against Mr. Bowman. He wrote a letter last week in which he says Mr. Bowman will receive his active and hearty support.

☞ We are informed that a large number of the Irish voters of this District will vote against Mr. Morse on account of his treatment of the gallant Irish soldier, Gen. Shields. Gen. Shields, who served honorably in the Mexican war and the war of the Rebellion, and had been sent as a United States Senator from two States, in his old age and poverty, applied for the office of Door-Keeper in the House, and was supported by the best elements in that body; but Morse voted against him and in favor of a Rebel Brig. General, who got the place. For this Irishmen will vote against him.

☞ We recommend to all Republicans, if there are any, who pretend to think that "a change would be a good thing" to carefully read Gen. Butler's speech delivered at Barnstable Tuesday night. If they can stand that and vote for Butler they must have stomachs like ostriches.

☞ Hayden vs Hall is the talked-of Legislative ticket in Woburn this year—with the prospects in favor of Mr. Thomas H. Hill.—Stoneham Independent. —Guess not, if don't make any difference to our "esteemed," etc. of Stoneham.

☞ Mr. Morse ought to be elected by a large majority:—Herald. He won't be all the same: the Herald's candidates seldom are.

— The Republican Town Committee are not obliged to hire school masters to stand at the polls to read Republican ballots to those who want to throw them. Republican voters can read for themselves.

— An early vote is the surest and best. Putting off an important duty to the eleventh hour isn't the right way. There is many a slip between cup and lip, so let us say to our Republican friends, kindly but earnestly, vote early, but do not follow Democratic practices and vote often.

— On last Friday night a window in the lower part of Mr. George A. Holland's residenee on Green street was smashed and made a wreck of. It was the work doubtless of burglars who for some reason or other did not stop to finish their work. There are a great many bad characters in town who should be looked after.

— The Herald man who paid this burg a visit the other day said in his paper that Mr. Amos Cummings is a prohibitionist who believes in fighting for temperance inside the Republican party. We don't quite see how this can be true, especially as Mr. Cummings is the prohibitionist candidate for Congress in this District.

— At the Phalanx rifle practice at their Range on last Saturday afternoon, Fowle of East Woburn made the best shot, 18 out of a possible 25, and received ithe marksman's badge as prize. Darmody made the second best shot, 17 out of 25, and also won a badge prize. It will be perceived that the marksmanship was good. Darkness prevented further trials.

The club now numbers twenty-five members, and considering its youth is in a very flourishing condition. It is about to move its headquarters into the hall in the Kelley building. And may its shadow never grow less.

— Mr. George Parkhurst, who for the last eleven months has been employed in putting in the celebrated Blake pumps at St. Petersburg, Russia, was in town the other day. He had just returned from Russia. The commission on which he was sent by Mr. Blake was executed to the entire satisfaction of all parties concerned, and the Blake pump has gained a foothold in Europe which will prove of great pecuniary advantage to its owner in the near future.

MISS MERTENA L. BANCROFT,

TEACHER OF

Piano-forte and Harmony.

Residence,—Franklin Street, Woburn. 37-tf

— We wish to mercy the Advertiser hadn't been issued until after the Democratic caucus last night. We should have enjoyed hearing it howl and making Rome do so too.

— If Mr. Hayden is nominated, as we trust he will be, the Democratic candidate might as well stand from under with all possible haste, for Mr. Hayden will be elected by a larger majority than ever before.

— The disappearance of Col. Richardson's horse from in front of the laundry on Tuesday evening created quite a stir. He was found in Mr. Dow's yard, where he was probably left by the rogues who run him off.

— Mr. Nathan Wyman has held the office of postmaster in this village for twenty-one years, and will not seek a reappointment at the close of his present term in December. Col. W. T. Grammer will doubtless receive the appointment.

— The Phalanx have put up a capital target at their rifle range and propose to use it. It is superior to the targets of the Massachusetts Association at Walnut Hill, and the boys are not to be blamed for feeling just a little proud of it.

— Mr. Boyle the Overseer of Highways, is having a rare and peculiar kind of gravel carted from Reading to this village with which to mend and make better our sidewalks. It is said to be the best material known for that purpose, and Mr. Boyle is using it plentifully.

— Wonder what has become of those scores of Republicans who three weeks ago were, according to Democratic authority, going to vote for Gen. Butler? A recent thorough search failed to show up any of them. The simple fact is, there are no Butler Republicans to speak of in town.

— Last Tuesday evening was Halloween, and the boys indulged in the usual amount of innocent, or semi-innocent, deviltry. Boys do love fun; they like to raise Cain and things when the opportunity presents itself. Halloween afforded the opportunity, and the boys improved it for all there was out.

— There was Democratic button-holing to kill on our streets from Sunday night to yesterday afternoon, all in behalf of the several candidates for Representative. But a Democratic nomination for that office will come to naught next Tuesday, for Mr. Hayden, if a candidate, will win the prize just as sure as fate.

— Mr. David Adams was in town last Monday, the first time for a year. One year ago last month he was terribly injured on the Eastern Railroad since which time he has been confined to his home in Malden and a considerable time to his couch. A suit for damages is pending in the Suffolk Courts, which may be tried at the present term. Hon. Stillman B. Allen, one of the ablest lawyers in Boston, is Mr. Adams's counsel, who is confident that heavy damages will be awarded for the great injury done the plaintiff.

— Particular attention is called to the advertisements of THE CENTURY and ST. NICHOLAS magazines in this paper, and to the liberal terms offered by the publishers to subscribers to them. It need not be said that THE CENTURY is the leading magazine in this country for adults, and ST. NICHOLAS, as a youths publication, has no real rival, for the fact is universally conceded. Though enjoying an immense circulation in this country and England both are still growing in popular esteem more rapidly probably than any other magazines published. Please read announcements.

— A late issue of the Boston Transcript contains the following notice of the Hudson family, one member of which, Mr. E. W. Hudson, mentioned as financial editor of the N. Y. Herald for the long term of seventeen years, now enjoys life in his beautiful home overlooking Horn Pond on Canal street this town: "Mr. Robert E. Hudson, who fifty years ago (1832) was an attache of the Boston Transcript, who subsequently, in 1826, in company with James Brooks, established the New York Express, and still later was connected with the News Exchange in New York and Boston, now resides in retirement at Chelsea, in perfect health, though he has been totally blind six years. He still retains his old-time genialty, but since his relinquishment of active labor he has shrunk from publicity. It will be remembered that Mr. Fred Hudson, formerly manager of the New York Herald, a brother of Robert, was killed at Concord a few years ago. Another brother, Edward, who was financial editor of the same paper seventeen years, now lives at Horn Pond, Woburn.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend, if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case where our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that we might get before the people a fractional part of the confidence that is expressed to us every day in this medicine by those who have carefully noted (without prejudice) its effects upon the blood and through that upon the whole system, stimulating all the functions of the body to perform the duties nature requires of them. Try a bottle and satisfy yourself.

Cold Hands and Feet.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she had very little appetite; could take no long walks, and her face was badly broken out with a humor. She was low-spirited; troubled with cold hands and feet; her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve; and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits, is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

— Dr. Church of Winchester has a card in this paper to which attention is called. He is too well known to need anything from our pencil.

— The Mishawum Club propose to give an entertainment something similar to the very successful and pleasant one given by them two years ago. It will be something unique and worth patronizing.

— An interesting letter from E. A. Pierce was received to late for publication. His next entertainment will be given next Wednesday, and will be the best ever given in Woburn. Everybody should go.

— The Ladies' Industrial Society of the Woburn Baptist Church voted at their last meeting, October 12th, to hold their Annual Sale and Supper about the first of December. Full particulars will be given hereafter.

— About two weeks ago Miss Nellie Bulfinch, daughter of Mr. Henry F. Bulfinch of this place, fell down an outside flight of ten steps at her home in San Francisco and badly shattered her collar bone. She is now rapidly recovering.

— Gentle reader bear with us. This ends the JOURNAL'S campaign. Our normal condition will be found after this number. Hereafter the JOURNAL shall richly merit its reputation of being the best family paper in Middlesex County.

— Mr. Franksford Trull, Chairman of the Woburn Democratic Town Committee, was invited to attend the dinner given by Hon. Leopold Morse to the Chairmen of the several Town Committees in this District and the District Committee at Young's Hotel last Wednesday, but was prevented from attending by other engagements.

— The regular meeting of the School Board was held on Tuesday evening.—The resignation of A. R. Lenscott, Principle of Hudson school, and Vanie B. Robinson, teacher in the High School, were accepted. —Miss S. Jessie Waters was admitted as trainer.—Ordered that scholars be allowed to remain in their respective school buildings during the noon intermission, and that, when scholars do so, the outside doors of the building be left unlocked, or if locked, some scholar be entrusted with the keys.—Montvale, Johnson and Rumford schools allowed to begin at 1.30 and close at 3.30 p. m. —Superintendent's monthly report accepted, and bills approved.

— The Suburban Telephone Company are rushing things. In a very short time the entire suburbs of Boston will be covered and criss-crossed all over with a network of wires, and every city, town, village and hamlet become an exchange. Six new public exchanges have been added to this district within a few days, namely, Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, Malden, Medford and Melrose. The putting up of a trunk line from Woburn to Lexington to accommodate the northern country was commenced last Tuesday morning, on which a large gang men are at work. Woburn has two trunks lines to Boston and will soon need several more. The business is growing wonderfully here in the suburbs.

— An esteemed citizen gravely and rather sadly remarks: "The old elm on Market Square must go." We should hope not. That venerable tree contributes more than aught else to make Market Square dear, aye, almost sacred, to every patriotic heart in Woburn, and to even suggest its downfall sends a pang through every well regulated viscera, or ought to. Though the tree is not the growth of a small riding-stick which our great-grandfather stuck in the ground where it stands one day in the long years ago when he halted in his journey through town to give his horse four quarts of oats; and though our personal acquaintance with it dates back to only a couple of years ago; still we confess to a strong regard for it and its grateful shade in summer, and therefore enter a solemn protest against its destruction.

— Business at Mr. P. E. Bancroft's shoe factory on Franklin street is good this fall, and a large amount of first class work is turned out every week for which there is a ready market at paying prices. About twenty-five hands are employed by the proprietor in the different departments, all of whom are skilled in the business. The sale of the products is confined chiefly to New England, although Mr. Bancroft has a very nice trade in New York, Pennsylvania and other States. He manufactures only the very best character of work—the highest priced shoes and slippers—a quality which is chiefly demanded in New England, and to which sales are principally confined. More establishments of this kind with increased capacity and larger products are the present need of this pleasant and growing town. We hope to see his and others enlarged, and more added thereto.

— Up to last Tuesday afternoon we had always been quite vain of our expertness at literary composition as applied to local items. On that day our self-confidence received a shock fatal to vanity. It was in this wise: A representative of a gravestone factory in a neighboring city was searching the files of the JOURNAL for late obituary notices of eminent citizens. Slowly turning the leaves his eye rested on quite a lengthy "local," and after reading it carefully he looked up with a shade of melancholly resting on his countenance and inquired of us, "when did this lamented Mr. E. C. die?" He had taken our handsome account of Mr. C's last Queen's day celebration at the Central House for a somewhat racy "send-off" on that estimable gentleman's demise. We were too utterly disgusted to tell him that Mr. C. is alive, vigorously kicking, and reported to be on the eve of committing matrimony.

— Mrs. Mary A. Livermore will speak Sunday evening next at 8 o'clock in the Methodist church, on Constitutional Prohibition.

— At the Democratic caucus last night, J. G. Maguire was nominated a candidate for the Legislature by 23 plurality. This suits the Republicans.

— Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Maddock of West Philadelphia, have been visiting friends in Woburn the past week on their wedding tour. Mrs. Maddock was one of the Garrett sisters who kept what came be known during the Centennial of 1876 as the "Woburn Home," on N. 39th street.

— An intelligent attache of the Boston Herald has been out here and surveyed the political field. The result of his observations were given in Monday evening's Herald. He seems to have caught on to the situation pretty fairly, and stated the facts without bias or prejudice. He gives Woburn the credit of being the liveliest political field visited by him in this campaign, and is particularly complimentary to the Republicans, their excellent organization, and earnest work. The fact is our Committee have done and are doing nobly this fall. Better work or more of it was never put into a campaign in Woburn. The Chairman lets no grass grow under his feet and he is handsomely seconded and sustained by the balance of the Committee. It is a noiseless campaign that they are prosecuting, but the vote will show that it is a thorough and effectual one. The Herald man got things here much nearer straight than Herald men commonly do.

— At about 10.30 o'clock on last Tuesday Mr. Isaac D. Stearns died at his residence on Sturgis street in this village of disease of the brain and consequent general paralysis of the system. His age was sixty-one years. He was as well known and highly respected as any man in Woburn. No one had more or better friends. His business life had been full of trials, troubles and bitter reverses, and yet he was patient, cheerful, and hopeful through it all. He had a good, true heart—warm, kind and charitable towards all mankind, and was a consistant Christian. Mr. Stearns was born in the neighboring town of Bedford, but became a resident of Woburn some fifty years ago. For a long time he was engaged in business here, but retired some years since. His death will be deeply lamented by a large number of people besides his immediate family, who have the heartfelt sympathy of this community in their sore bereavement. The kindest of friends attended and watched over him in his last illness. The funeral took pla ce at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, conducted at the residence by Dr. March.

— Mr. Amos Cummings, who is as uneasy as a fish out of water unless he is "improving," enlarging, stretching out and progressing in his business, is now excavating in the rear of Myer & Co's market and getting ready to erect a large store on the site next season, which will be occupied by him in connection with his present spacious rooms. Mr. Cummings has a long lease of the property, and as his large business, which is constantly increasing, demands more room he has wisely concluded to double up by the addition of a new store on the site mentioned. Within two or three years his business has grown very rapidly, and as present situated the work of his establishment is done to great disadvantage. To the millinery trade, which for some years was the only one engaged in, he has added a large dress-making department, a carpet department, and several other branches which has necessitated a considerable increase of help, room, etc. The difficulties under which he now labors will all be obviated by erecting the new store, unless he should take into his head to "branch out" into something else, in which case he will be obliged to secure more land. Mr. Cummings has had great success in business. He is a very intelligent business man—active, smart, not afraid to work, and always looking out for the main chance. His trade this fall so far has been much larger than ever before at the same season of the year. He, his wife, sales-people and all connected with the establishment are affable, kind, courteous, and please customers. Then he has the goods which the public want, and sells cheap.

For the present there is to be preaching regularly at the Congregational Church on Sunday evening.

Mr. J. F. Dwinell, the candidate for Representative, is understood to be in favor of submitting the vote on the Constitutional Amendment to the people.

Stephen T. Andrews, Superintendent of the Industrial Home, Boston, an able temperance advocate, will address the Reform Club meeting Sunday afternoon next.

Rev. Daniel Dorchester, the Presiding Elder, will preach in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Winchester Sunday evening next November 5. Services will begin at 6.30 o'clock.

Mr. S. J. Elder of this place read an essay at the Woburn Conference at Wakefield last Tuesday on a true sense of the value of the church. It was praised as an able production.

There is considerable hunting done by the Nimrods of this town—considerable more hunting than finding game to shoot. Squirrels are quite plenty in the woods, but of anything larger there is but little.

Remember the Town Meeting on election day. The citizens will be called upon to say whether the town shall have a stone-crusher or not, and to transact other important business. Be on hand everybody, and look after the interests of the town.

Last Saturday the versatile editor of the Star was coursing through the streets of Woburn with a 2-40 nag tackled to a nobby top buggy, bow whip in the socket, dog under the cart, with the air of a prince. What we want to know is: Where does the money come from?—ED. JOURNAL.

Our well-to-do people with plethoric purses and pairs of prancing pacers made the most of the late delightful autumn weather. Which reminds me of that beautiful couplet, or triplet if you prefer to cut the last line in two:

"The rich they ride in chaises,
The poor go afoot, by ——es."

Election day comes next Tuesday. I hope the Republicans will visit the polls on that day en masse and vote for the Republican ticket without a scratch. Generally, I don't care much about politics, but I don't like the idea of electing Butler this year, hence I hope there will be no apathy or staying at home by Republicans.

Some pretend to say that Mr. Dwinell will lose a few Republican votes on the score of his action on water matters here. I don't believe a word of it. Mr. Dwinell is a gentleman that Republicans can't afford to vote against. He is square, white, intelligent, and will look out for the interests of his town if sent to the Legislature, as he will be.

Tomorrow evening will be the last chance for voters to have their names registered. The Board of Registry will be at their rooms from 7 to 10 p. m. Republicans should make it a point to be on hand and get their names on the list, that is to say, if there are any who have not already registered. This is a duty that no freeman should neglect. And don't you forget it!

Democratic advertisements have been out all the week for a caucus of the unterrified to be held on Thursday evening, which is too late to get the result of it to you. It will not make much difference however who they nominate for the Republican candidate will be elected by a handsome majority. He is a good man and will take the voters right along with him.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening a bold burglary was committed in this village. At that hour, while the family were at tea, the residence of Mr. J. H. Tyler Esq., Register of Probate, situated on Main street, was entered through a window by some daring thieves who found and carried off a large amount of jewelry and other property. I hear that other places were entered besides Mr. Tyler's. The thieves made a good haul. No clue.

A number of the Republicans of Winchester met in Livingston Hall on Monday evening last to "count noses." Many prominent members of the party declared their intention of voting for the widow—this year.—Star. Guess you are off the eggs slightly, Mr. Star. Who were your "prominent members" who declared their intention of voting for Butler? Wouldn't it puzzle you a little to name them—one even? Winchester Republicans can't see how the election of Gen. Butler is going to better things in this State any, and it isn't at all likely that any of them will vote for him. Fools if they do, anyhow.

The Republican caucus last Friday evening was a good one. The very best feeling prevailed and thoroughly good work was done. All were satisfied with the result. The Republicans of Winchester are sensible people, and always yield gracefully to the inevitable, as everybody ought to do. Mr. James F. Dwinell was nominated for the General Court, as was foreshadowed in my last report from here. He is a leading citizen of Winchester, and a gentleman every way worthy of the suffrage of our people. He has had legislative experience, is talented, honest, with more than an ordinary amount of good, sound, practical sense, and will prove a credit to himself in the House and an honor to his constituents. In fact, Mr. Dwinell is as good a man for the place or any other of responsibility as we have in town.

The Star says that Mr. Sumner Richardson's practical ideas in relation to stone-crushers, and the correctness of his views respecting that useful implement as demonstrated by "the logic of events," will cause his absence from Town Meeting next Tuesday to be deeply regreted. Impliedly the Star itself, which makes no boast of its knowledge of stone crushers, earnestly shares in the general and wide-spread regret. The effect of Mr. Richardson's absence or presence on stone-crushers in general, or any particular stone-crusher, the Star leaves to blind conjecture, but it is fair to infer that it would be something uncommon, if "the logic of events" count this year. A sombre atmosphere seemed to pervade the whole item in which the information respecting the "correctness" of Mr. Richardson's "views" respecting stone-crushers was given to the public, and but for the few cheering words about his "temperate life," and the important announcement that "his broken limb is rapidly healing," your correspondent would have begged the privilege of dropping a silent tear over the sprightly editor's rather lachrymose production. But your correspondent sincerely hopes that Mr. Richardson will be able to attend Town Meeting next Tuesday and submit to the citizens of Winchester "the correctness of his views" on the all-absorbing theme of stone-crushers.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 26, 1882.
DR. CRAIG:—Dear Sir:—I take great pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received in using your Cough and Consumption Cure, and French Crown Plasters. I was completely prostrated. Had three hemorrhages in four days. Physicians' prescriptions did me no good, and they told me I had better go to the hospital. I heard of your remedy, procured some, and in three days' time was able to go to work. They operated on me like magic, and I write this that others troubled as I have been may be made well. I will cheerfully write all who may correspond with me, and tell them the good done me through the instrumentality of your remedies, and will answer all who call upon me to same effect.
WM. T. LEPINE, 85 Scio St.

DR. CHAS. CRAIG:—I hereby return my sincere thanks for the wonderful cure your Crown Plaster has perfected on me. For many years I have been a sufferer with chronic pains in the stomach, and Rheumatism, and could never receive any benefit from medical treatment. Hearing of so many cures by this invaluable remedy, I sent for two of them. I hope the whole world will reach this invaluable remedy.

THE CENTURY

The twelfth year of this magazine—the first under the new name, and the most successful in its history, closed with the October number. The circulation has shown a large gain over that of the preceding season, and THE CENTURY begins its thirteenth year with an edition of

A NEW NOVEL, BY W. D. HOWELLS, to succeed this author's "Modern Instance." It will be an international story, entitled "A Sea Change."
LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES, BY EDWARD EGGLESTON,—the leading historical feature of the year; to consist of a number of papers on such topics as "The Beginning of a Nation," "Social Life in the Colonies," etc., the whole forming a complete history of early life in the United States. Especial attention will be paid to accuracy of illustrations.
A NOVELETTE OF MINING LIFE, BY MARY HALLOCK FOOTE, entitled "The Led-Horse Claim," to be illustrated by the author.
THE POINT OF VIEW, BY HENRY JAMES, Jr., a series of eight letters from imaginary persons of various nationalities, criticising America, its people, society, manners, railroads, etc.
THE CHRISTIAN LEAGUE OF CONNECTICUT, by Rev. Washington Gladden. An account of practical co operation in Christian work, showing how a league was formed in a small town in Connecticut, what kinds of work it attempted, and how it spread throughout the whole State.
THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN HOUSE-BUILDING, a series of four papers, fully illustrated, devoted to (1) City Houses, (2) Country Houses, (3) Churches, and (4) Public Buildings.
ILLUSTRATED PAPERS ON THE NATIONAL CAPITAL, including "The Capitol," "The Supreme Court," "The White House," etc.

Miscellaneous.

Further work is expected from E. C. Stedman' Thomas Hughes, Joel Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus"), Charles Dudley Warner, John Burroughs, E. V. Smalley, H. H. Boyesen, and a long list of others. Entertaining short stories and novelettes will be among the leading features of THE CENTURY, as heretofore. And the magazine will continue its advance in general excellence.

LITERARY NOTICES.

ST. NICHOLAS for November begins the new volume in splendid style with a colored frontispiece, entitled Indian Summer. This is an entirely new departure that will be heartily welcomed. Another prominent feature is the first installment of J. T. Trowbridge's new serial The Tinkham Brothers' Tide-Mill, which is a live American story about live American boys and girls. Then there is the beginning of another serial by Frank R. Stockton. He writes of boy and girl life in the thirteenth century. But the November number is also the Thanksgiving number, and so Miss Sophie Swett has contributed a jolly story called All the Plums, which any one can see must have some connection with the Thanksgiving pudding. Old Mordecai's Cockerel is another amusing Thanksgiving tale, and there is Grace for a Child from Herrick. Miss Eva L. Ogden has written, and Mr. Alfred Brennan has illustrated a beautiful poem, entitled The Quest. The pranks and doings of Tad Lincoln, the late President's youngest son, are very entertainingly treated by Noah Brooks. The False Sir Santa Claus, a beautiful and novel form of Christmas entertainment, is printed in this number, with music and complete stage-directions. But we must stop here, not because there is nothing more in the number to write about, but because there is so much,—so many beautiful pictures, so many clever poems and bright stories and sketches that, if people wish to know about them, they must look for themselves.

As the first number of a new volume, the November CENTURY gives promise of even increased excellence for the magazine during its second year under the new name. Pictorially, the November number shows that the CENTURY is as ambitious as ever for the reputation of American wood-engraving, as witness the frontispiece portrait of Florence Nightingale and the full-page portrait of Henry James, Jr., both by Cole; Elbridge Kingsley's beautiful full-page engraving, direct from nature, of a view in New England woods (accompanying which is a description by the engraver, of his manner of working); the full-page reproduction, by Kruell, of an ideal bronze head which is one of the costly art-treasures of the British Museum; Mary Hallock Foote's refined and charming illustrations, engraved by Miss Powell and by Cole; and the many other pictures by well-known artists, some of which have a special interest as the exponents of a new process of art reproduction. Though the art side of the November CENTURY is so conspicuous, the contents offer striking proof of a tendency to make the literary side of the magazine paramount and of the greatest possible excellence and importance, in travel, biography, fiction, poetry, criticism, and in the discussion of the foremost public questions. The fiction of the number comprises the first chapters of The Led Horse Claim, a humorous short story entitled The Lady and the Tiger, and the continuation of Though one Administration. The poems of the number are by Thomas Wentworth Higginson, H. H., James T. Mckay, George Edgar Montgommery, Edward N. Pomeroy, and Richard Watson Gilder, not to forget some hitherto unpublisned verses by Robert Browning and Henry W. Longfellow, which are reproduced in autograph from a child's album, in Bric-a-Brac, which contains, also a clever satire on Mr. Walt Whitman and Mr. Oscar Wilde, by Helen Gray Cone. The more serious editorial departments treat a great variety of topics. In the publisher's department is an account of the CENTURY'S New Home, with drawings of the comfortable and spacious rooms in which the magazines are housed.

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your Hop Bitters. Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whisky, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Connor, friends, have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now. S. GILLILAND, July 25, '78. People's Advocate, Pittsburg, Pa.

Cuticura

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER

Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frigh ful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribe the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

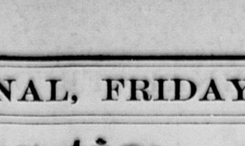

LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.

The Cuticura treatment for the cures of Skin, Scalp and Blood diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new blood purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the great skin cures. Price of Cuticura, small boxes, 50c; large boxes, $1.00. Cuticura Resolvent, $1 per bottle. Cuticura Soap, 25c; Cuticura Shaving Soap, 15c. Depot

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is designed to meet the wants of those who need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Hood's Sarsaparilla. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy. $1 a bottle; six for $5.

Don't Die in the House.

Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, bed-bugs, roaches, vermin, flies, ants, insects. 15c. per box.

 "Many silly people despise the precious, not understanding it." But no one despises Kidney-Wort after having given it a trial. Those that have used it agree that it is by far the pest medicine known. Its action is prompt, thorough and lasting. Don't take pills, and other mercurials that poison the system, but by using Kidney-Wort restore the natural action of all the organs.

"Tired Nature's Sweet Restorer, Balmy Sleep." But there are times when this "Renewer of Strength" is denied us; times when our minds and bodies have been so over-worked and are so worn out that we "woo the drowsey god in vain." The PERUVIAN SYRUP (an Iron Tonic) renews our strength and makes our rest sweet and refreshing.

A gentleman from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected a number of cures. P. F. HYATT, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

Terrible itching and scaly humors, ulcers, sores and scrofulons swellings cured by the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures) externally, and Cuticura Resolvent (blood purifier) internally. Ask about them at your druggists.

Clear head and voice, easy breathing, sweet breath, perfect smell, taste and hearing, no cough, no distress. These are conditions brought about in catarrh by the use of Sanford's Radical Cure. Complete treatment for $1.

If cleanliness indeed be next to Godliness, we know of no one that is doing more to promote this virtue than James Pyle, through the introduction of his Pearline.

Are you Billious? Try the remedy that cured Mrs. Clement of Franklin, N. H.—Hood's Sarsaparilla, made in Lowell, Mass.

F. W. A. BERGENGREN, M. D., Proprietor. Lynn, Mass.

Edward Barnes of Lynn, Mass., states that for over two years he was troubled with frequent spitting of blood, severe cold and cough, night sweats, and general debility, so that I was given up by my friends and my doctor to die. Finally I was advised to try your remedies, which I did for three months, the Swedish Lung Balsam for my lungs, the Swedish Botanic Compound to build up my constitution and restore my appetite, and the Swedish Pepsin Pills to regulate the bowels. The result is that today I am entirely cured, and feel as well as ever in life.

LYNN, March 8, 1882.

Dr. F. W. A. BERGENGREN: Dear Sir—I have been using your Swedish Botanic Compound for kidney complaint and Scrofulous Humor, and have derived great benefit from it. This is saying a good deal, as before I commenced to use the Compound I was the greatest part of the time unable to work, and I have tried medical advice and all kinds of medicine, but without avail until I used your Remedy. Since taking it I have been feeling like a new man, and been able to attend to my work. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter.

WM. E. KIMBALL, Conductor L. & B. R. R.

THE STORY OF A LIFE.

"I heard a voice from Heaven, saying unto me, 'Write, from henceforth blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; even so, saith the spirit; for they rest from their labors." As the solemn words fell upon the sorrowful, hushed throng around the open grave, I looked up at the cold, winter sky and around upon the brown, desolate hills and bare meadows. A few somber pines near by moaned drearily, and the wintry winds came sweeping down upon us from the purple mountains.

This was the end, then, of this fair woman's life. To be laid in the dark, cold lonely grave on this bleak winter's day.—The end? In one sense, yes; in another, no. Her beautiful life could not end in that horrible tomb. For three score years it had shed its sweet perfume upon the hearts and lives around her. Such lives do not end here. She had gone home, where her sad heart would be joy of her youth, her tired hands cease from their labors.

I knew something of her story, but I long to hear it all—the story of that lovely old face, with its sweet dark eyes and snowy hair. She was laid away for her long rest, with the heavy earth upon her heart. The last sad word had died away over her lowly grave, and we slowly and sadly retraced our steps to the places which should know our dear old friend no more forever.

That evening, as we sat together around the glowing wood fire, I asked the dear grandmother to tell us the story of Miss Margaret's life. She took off her spectacles and polished them slowly with her handkerchief, looking, meanwhile, thoughtfully and very sadly into the fire. Then, turning round to us, she said:

"You all loved Miss Margaret, children, but you could not appreciate her loveliness as one who knew her in her youth, and through all the years of her beautiful pathetic life. We were nearly the same age, she a few weeks younger than I. From our babyhood we have been constantly together. I cannot remember the time Margaret was not my other self. Our homes always stood where they do to-day—mine here, hers just over the way. Our mothers were dear friends, and the friendship ended to-day in the grave, began with our first prattle and tottering footsteps."

The dear old voice was very tremulous, and the glistening tears fell upon her folded hands. She was sadly shaken by the death of her-long friend and companion.

"When we were six years old we commenced our childish school-life together.—Side by side we plodded through the first stages of our new career, and play-time and study-time we were inseparable. So the years went on till we were great girls ready for the academy in the adjoiuing town of Alden. No, there none there now. This was forty years ago, my child. Our parents were very anxious that we should benefit by all the advantages offered in such a promising institution. We began this chapter in our lives together.

"How wonderfully pretty Margaret was growing! She was always very slender and peculiarly graceful. You know how handsome she was, even in her old age. She had beautiful, dark brown, wavy hair; her grey eyes were very lovely; her small, pale face, with its delicate nose, fresh, dewy lips and firm little chin, was delightful to look upon. Sweet-tempered, modest, dignified, she was the idol of her parents and admired by all who knew her.

"In our seventeenth year we left the academy. Margaret was to return at the autumn term as teacher. How we enjoyed that bright summer. We took long walks in the woods, rowed on the shining river, and spent happy hours in the saddle, covering miles of beautiful country, during the long summer days. All beautiful things are soon over. The autumn came, and it was our first separation. She went to Alden Monday morning, and Friday evening always returned her to us again.

"The weeks passed on, and Margaret was very happy in her new life. Another interest had arisen in my young life, but it could not eclipse the beauty of my Venus. I was your grandfather's promised wife, and in the spring time we were to commence our new life to-gether.

"It was about this time that I first noticed a change in my Margaret. I could not define it. In her sweet eyes there shown a solemn, holy light. A tremulous sort of beauty seemed to rest on brow and lip. She grew more beautiful each day. Her sweet reserve was never broken even to me.

"It was a beautiful day in the latter part of the winter when Margaret came to me with a new look upon her pure face—a look which a woman never wears but once in life—when she loves as Margaret did.

"Kate, I have something to tell you," she said; and when she was cosily seated with me in my own room, she told me the story of her betrothal.

"Mr. Edmonds was the principal of the academy at Alden. He had taken charge of the institution when Margaret went there in the autumn. He was the son of widow, who was poor, and lived in a distant college town, where her younger son was a student. Mr. Edmonds was her sole support. His brother was in college at his expense, and, with this double responsibility, he had hesitated about speaking of his love to Margaret. He finally decided to tell her of it and explain to her his situation. He said that he had not the presumption, even if she could return his love, to ask her to wait for him during the years which must necessarily intervene before he could have a wife and home of his own.

"I told him," said Margaret, "that I would wait for him forever—for I love him."

"So they were engaged. Margaret wore his modest little ring, and I do not think the sun shone upon a happier pair of lovers. He was worthy even of her.

"The spring came, and with the first song of the birds and the perfume of the flowers I was married. It needed but the fruition of my Margaret's love to complete my happiness. We went to housekeeping in a part of this old house, and thus, you see, Margaret and I were still together. She came and went from her school in the sweet springtime, full of deep, quiet happiness. When the summer came she went home with Mr. Edmonds to visit his mother, who had written constantly to her since the engagement. She returned to us in season for the re-opening of the academy, where she was still to teach. She and Mr. Edmonds taught and studied together. He was a fine scholar, and she was fast following in his footsteps. Their love and happiness increased with every passing day.

"The winters followed the summers and found them still working together. They were making plans for their new home together in the near future. The brother, for whom he was sacrificing so much, would soon be enabled to relieve him of much responsibility. She spent many happy hours with me and the little ones, for she was very fond of my babies. She was not a girl to talk—as I often hear girls talking now days—of love as a trivial thing, and her hopes were too sacred for common conversation. Not even to me did she often refer to it; but I knew how her loving heart looked forward to the consummation of her bright hopes.

"I never saw a man so entirely devoted to any woman as Mr. Edmonds was to her. He seemed to look upon her as a treasure too precious and beautiful for him.

"Margaret's years of waiting were finally at an end, and in a few weeks she would enter upon her new life. A house was ready for them at Alden, where after a few weeks' trip they intended to locate. How I should miss her! But that was a thought I tried to keep in the background, and enjoy the present to the utmost.

"It was a lovely day in October, a week before the wedding day, that Mr. Edmonds came into Margaret's parlor looking fearfully ill. He stoutly insisted that it was nothing but a slight cold, and laughingly refused 'to be doctored,' as he expressed it. The next morning he was unable to rise, and the doctor pronounced his malady diphtheria of the most malignant type. As the long day wore away he continued to grow worse and at nightfall was delirious and suffering terribly. Margaret followed the physician into the hall and told him if there was any danger she wished to send for his mother and brother. Kind old Doctor Seaton, who had known Margaret from her birth, laid his hand gently upon her shoulder, and only said:

"Send at once, my child."

"For two days he suffered terribly. Margaret never left him. Pale, tearless, strong and tender, she was by his side him day and night. His mother, too, was with him on the third dav, when the end came.

"The sunlight stole into the room as he opened his eyes upon Margaret and smiled. A sunbeam fell aslant upon the pillow and lit up the face with angelic beauty. Margaret knelt down and laid her head beside his, and when, a few minutes after, we raised her, he was dead. The beautiful young life had ended.

"Margaret stood looking down upon the dead face of her love without a sound.—She bent down and kissed him, then turned and left the room, waving aside any assistance, and no one saw her that day. When night came a pale-faced, hollow eyed woman issued from the room, and spent the long, dark hours alone with her dead.

"This was the end of her beautiful dream, my sweet Margaret! The next morning she came to breakfast looking as if years had passed over her head. Her eyes had great dark shadows beneath them, her lips were drawn with suffering. But from this morning of her sorrowful life no one ever heard of a moan over her bereavement. To her loving father and mother she was the spirit of devotion. Well as I knew Margaret I did not dream of the strength which lay behind that frail exterior. To Mrs. Edmonds she was the dutiful, loving daughter, and together they took their dead to his childhood's home and laid him beside his father.

"I never, in all the years, heard her gay, strong laugh again. Patient, sweet, strong of soul, unselfish, her life henceforth was spent for others. And thus seasons came and went, and found her ever at her post of duty, among the sorrowful, the sick, and the afflicted. A more beautiful life I never knew, the waiting is over, and she has joined the lover of her youth up yonder."

The dear old grandmother leaned her head against her chair, and with closed eyes and trembling lips closed the story of her friend's life by repeating, softly:

The ways they are many and wide,
And seldom are two ways the same. Side by side
May we stand at the same little door, when all's done!

That's Just Me.

Years ago, into a wholesale grocery store, walked a tall, muscular man, evidently a fresh-comer from some backwoods town in Maine or New Hampshire. Accosting the first person he met, who happened to be the merchant himself, he asked:

"You dou'twant to hire a man in your store, do you?"

"Well," said the merchant, "I don't know. What can you do?"

"Do?" said the man, "I rather guess I can turn my hand to almost anything. What do you want done?"

"Well, if I was to hire a man it would be one that could lift, well, a strong wiry fellow; one, for instance, that could litt a sack of coffee like that yonder and carry it across the store and never lay it down."

"There now, Cap'n," said the countryman, "that's just me. I can lift anything I can hitch to. You can't suit me better. What will you give a man that suits you?"

"I'll tell you," said the merchant, "if you will shoulder that sack of coffee and carry it across the store twice, and never lay it down, I will hire you for one year at one hundred dollars per month.

"Done," said the stranger.

By this time every clerk in the store had gathered around and was waiting to join the laugh against the man, who threw the sack across his shoulder with perfect ease, and carrying it across the floor twice, went to a large hook which was fastened to the wall, and hung it up, then turned to the merchant and said:

"There now, it may hang there till doomsday, I shall never lay it down. What shall I go about? just give me plenty to do, and one hundred dollars a month, and it's all right."

The clerks broke into a laugh and the merchant, discomfited, yet satisfied, kept his agreement," and today the green countryman is the senior partner of the firm, and worth a million dollars.—[The South.

During a conference of clergymen, the following dialogue was overheard between two newsboys:—"I say, Jim, what's the meaning of so many ministers being together?" "Why," answers Jim, scornfully, "they always meet once a year to exchange sermons with each other."

Father is Getting Well.

My daughters say, "How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters. He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable, and we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A Lady of Rochester, N. Y.

"Dearest," said a sick wife fondly to her husband, "if I should die I wonder if you would marry again." "No, indeed," was the prompt reply. "I have tried it once, and that's enough for me." She was so angry that she recovered almost immediately.

THE ELECTION.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The election in this State last Tuesday did not go just as the Republicans hoped it might, and rather expected it would. Indeed, it was a great surprise to many of them, and a disagreeable one besides. To be sure it was not nearly as bad as it might have been, though worse than we wish it was. Gen. Butler was elected by a large majority, but the Republicans elected their Lieutenant Governor and every other candidate on the State ticket. The Legislature too will be largely Republican in both branches, and the Republican county tickets have been generally successful. In the matter of Congressmen the Republicans were struck pretty hard. We grieve to say that good Dea. Converse was beaten by Lovering in the Sixth District, which is a blow: Morse with his well stuffed money-bags won a victory over Bowman in the Fifth: Candler, the stalwart, was defeated by the rich and genteel Palmer in the Ninth.

The Republicans beat themselves on Governor and in the three Congressional Districts where they lost their candidates. The real Democratic vote as measured by Bowerman's, their Lieutenant Governor, was nothing to boast of, or anything to pin future hopes on. The Democratic party is in a discouraging minority in the State, and will probably remain so for a good many years to come.

We safely set the number of reasons left at his office for the defeat of Bishop at fifty. Every man has a reason, and it is different from the other man's. The reason which the JOURNAL gives is, that Bishop didn't get votes enough to carry him safely through. Why he didn't get votes enough was owing to the fact that Butler took them away from him. Bishop is a good man, but not great—too good for ordinary political purposes. Somehow you can't get the masses to enthuse much over these very, very good men, and almost always the rollicking, reckless, jolly, but not very good sort of fellows, like Butler, throw them every clinch. But the Republicans elected Butler, and defeated Dea. Converse, Bowman and Candler.

The State will not sink under it, or be destroyed. As the Herald said a few days since, "Butler won't run away with the State House, nor swallow Bunker Hill Monument." These are safe, for if he was the kind of a man to pocket the Commonwealth and clear out with it he couldn't do it with all his Republican official surroundings. But he will not try it. There is one thing about it all, if those nice Republicans who are answerable for his election can stand him the rest of us can.

NEW YORK.

We mention the New York election with sorrow. President Arthur was beaten last Tuesday by about 150,000 majority. The Democrats there are triumphant, and it is said Blaine is happy. It was a great and sore defeat which the Republicans experienced in the Empire State on Tuesday. But so long as it clearly means a Republican victory in 1884 we will not mourn as one without hope.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Keystone State was carried by the Democrats by an overwhelming majority for Governor. They made a gain of several Congressmen, and have a fair show for the Legislature. Last Tuesday was a very cold day for the Camerons, and showed what family quarrels are able to do for parties.

ILLINOIS.

The Republicans carried the Sucker State by 20,000 majority,

THE SOUTH.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

OTHER STATES.

Colorado, Democratic. Connecticut, Democratic majority nearly 3000. Cleveland's majority in New York is 175,000. Robeson was defeated in New Jersey—Legislature Democratic. California, the Democrats swept the board, have 5000 majority, and elect all their Congressmen but one. A Democratic Governor and six Democratic Congressmen elected in Michigan. Iowa, Republican. Nevada, Democratic. Nebraska, mixed. Minnesota, Republican. Indiana, 10,000 Democratic majority. Wisconsin, about half-and-half. Virginia, very much mixed. Delaware, Democratic. Kansas, St. John defeated, other Republicans elected.

This is as far as we have any heart to go.

WHAT MONEY WILL DO.

The effect of Leopold Morse's money is plainly seen in the returns. That he used a good deal of it improperly there is the very best reason for believing. His hard cash flowed into the towns of the Fifth District without stint, and his large majority is due entirely to its use—not for legitimate expenses, but for improper purposes. Woburn is a fair sample of the effect of Mr. Morse's money. Several of his salesmen spent Tuesday in the saloons of this town, boasting of the amount of cash they were supplied with and paying it out with generous and lavish hand for Morse. One of his strikers offered a Republican ballot-distributor fifty dollars to have withdrawn a certain ticket from the field. These men had any quantity of money and they bought here and elsewhere Morse's election with it. If the Republicans who voted for him doubt these statements let them investigate the subject and their doubts will be removed.

IT IS OVER.

Nobody, we suspect, who took an active part in the political campaign just closed, or any interest in the result of it, regrets that the contest is ended. Defeated candidates perhaps do not enjoy it, but the people at large are glad to get through with the job and return to their private pursuits. Political campaigns throw individuals and communities out of gear and produce a condition of things in no way conducive to mental and spiritual repose. There is no real enjoyment in excitement though some people mistake it for "solid comfort," while the anxiety which we feel for our favorite candidates subjects the mind and body to a wear and tear that is not pleasant or profitable to the individual.

The campaign which closed on Tuesday night was not a particularly exciting one, and yet there was enough of it to keep parties, and especially the leaders of parties, in a state of unrest, and very few if any, were so indifferent to the result as not to share that feeling to some extent. So, our conclusion is, that both parties and everybody, which we suppose includes the "independents," rejoice that the battle has been fought, and that the sum total of casualties is no larger.

MR. HAYDEN.

The wisdom of the Republicans in nominating E. D. Hayden, Esq., for a fourth consecutive term in the General Court was fully demonstrated by the vote on Tuesday. It is our opinion that no other member of the party would have pulled so strong as he did. Taking the general average Mr. Hayden ran largely ahead of his ticket, showing that there must have been in the neighborhood of a hundred Democrats who voted for him. This was not due to any popularity on the part of Mr. Maguire, for there is no Democrat in Woburn more popular than he is, but to the strong hold Mr. Hayden has on the public esteem. The out-come was very honorable to him and a flattering endorsement of his valuable services and general bearing in the last three sessions of the General Court.

☞ Were it not for the evil practices of Democratic politicians our Irish voters would not all be found on the Democratic side. They are made tools of by political schemers, and because the Democratic party favor license they foolishly think that is the party of liberty and equality. This won't always be so. A great many of the more intelligent and better educated Irishmen are Republicans now, and their number is bound to increase and multiply.

☞ The December number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW is to contain two symposiums, one on the Health of American Women, by Dr, James R. Chadwick, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Dr. Dio Lewis; and the other on Success on the Stage, by John McCullough, Madame Modjeska, Joseph Jefferson, Lawrence Barrett, Maggie Mitchell and William Warren.

☞ If Mr. Bowman was rich and mean enough to resort to the Morse kind of tactics, he might have been elected. But then, it is good enough for him—he has no business to be a poor man.

In Woburn.

The JOURNAL has no poultry to exhibit over the election in this town. Its roosters are not in a suitable condition to be exposed to inclement autumnal weather. The fact is, they are not very well this week, and their owner himself is not in such a lively, bouyant, hilarious frame of mind as to force his fowls to make spectacles of themselves for the benefit of an unsympathizing public. To be honest, the whole JOURNAL establishment is rather under the weather, and the view through our open door into the Republican Head-quarters is not of a nature to cheer up drooping and melancholy spirits. The scene is not comforting.

Woburn went "hell bent" for Butler! There is no getting round that: the figures below prove it. We were willing to give the Democrats three hundred majority and no fight, but the General's bar'l was a big one, and so was Morse's, and our opponents wouldn't accept the offer. The Democrats were at the polls—every mother's son of them—and you can bet your bottom dollar they voted. A good many Republicans were at home bedding cabbages, tending babies, or studying over the great and glorious principle of Civil Service Reform. Then they were divided up into regulars, independents, kickers, scratchers, prohibitioners, leaguers, and antis, and the result was they got most beautifully whipped—fairly washed out. The true ones worked like beavers all day. In the face of great discouragements and fearful odds they stood up like men and contested the ground gallantly. But they were whipped. — Leeds's hot drinks are "taking" big this weather.

— Clothes Wringers and Carpet Sweepers repaired at Prescott Bros., 62 & 64 Cornhill, Boston. 44-4

— The JOURNAL office was a busy place from the small hours on Tuesday morning until the close of the polls.

— Mr. J. W. Hammond's large store excells in hats and fine clothing. There isn't a better place to buy in Middlesex county.

— The Ladies' Industrial Society of the Baptist Church will give their annual sale and supper about the first of December. Please bear the date in mind.

— H. L. Frampton, formerly in Mr. Leonard Thompson's hardware store, has gone to Portland, Maine, and engaged in Major Richardson's laundry there.

— The regular gospel temperance meeting by the Y. M. C. A. will not be held next Sunday but has been postponed on account of the Week of Prayer by the Association.

— The former proprietor of the JOURNAL, John L. Parker, now editor of the Lynn Item, was elected to represent that city in the General Court last Tuesday. We congratulate our predecessor.

— The Woburn Democrats celebrated their victory for all there was of it. They were fairly wild. But there was a power of head-aching on Wednesday morning, and many eyes trimmed in pink.

— It is about time for the local agent of the P. O. C. T. A. S. to be putting more bird-houses in the trees of the village and making other preparations for the comfort of his feathered friends this winter.

— Our esteemed neighbor, the Advertiser, the organ of the Woburn Democracy, was around on Tuesday night like a picked-up dinner. Brother Allen was supremely happy. Well, we like to see people feel well.

— Men from Charlestown and Somerville worked nobly at the polls here in Wobnrn on election day. The Democrats were determined to carry the day even if outside places had to be called on for help, and the "Macedonian cry" fetched them.

— The autopsy of the wife of Mr. Joseph Green which was made on Tuesday, showed that the desease of which she died was located in the heart. It had been thought that the brain was the organ deseased. She had been sick and a great sufferer for more than two years.

— The Democratic meeting in Lyceum Hall on Monday evening was a very large one, the hall being filled full of voters. Several speeches were made by Democratic orators, chief of which was by Mr. Leopold Morse, and all of them, good, bad and indifferent, were applauded to the echo.

— On last Monday evening B. E. Bond, Esq., returned from a hunting and pleasure trip to and among the Green Mountains of four weeks, hale and hearty. He had a very pleasant vacation, enjoyed himself every day, returned satisfied, and will now settle down to his legal business and delve at it until another vacation season comes.

— After a long and painful illness the wife of Mr. Joseph R. Green, Cashier of the First National Bank, died last Sunday at her home. She was the daughter of Mr. L. Houghton Allen, an estimable lady, whose death will be deeply regretted, though she was a great sufferer during her protracted illness and her restoration to health nearly hopeless.

— We never want to see or hear about a happier set of mortals than the Democrats of Woburn were on election night. They just wanted to scream, they were so happy. The news that night from all around the lot, especially from Hull, just suited them and it was only by the exercise of the stoutest kind of restraint that they kept from going up and down the street singing hallelujah.

— Mr. Maguire, the Representative elect from Woburn to the General Court, did about the square thing by nearly thirty of his best workers at the closing of the polls on Tuesday evening. The Central House was the scene of the nice little jubilation, in the parlors of which the whistle-moistening was done. Mr. Maguire was perfectly happy, and he ought to have been, for he fairly forced the Woburn Democracy to vote for him. He is the biggest boss among them, and carries the party in his trowsers pocket.

— It is due to Mr. Hayden to say that he was strongly averse to having his name used as a candidate for Representative to the General Court, and it was only a lively appreciation of the obligations he was under to his party that he finally consented to stand. He is not an office-seeker and prefers the peaceful pursuits of private life to the labor and anxiety of public posts, and fortunately for him he is not dependent on an office for a livelihood. And he is just as good a man beaten at the polls as if successful.

— Charlie Strout is "at home" in the best sales and work rooms in the village. And he is busy.

— It is Wyer & Co's Market that Mr. Cummings is excavating in the rear of, instead of Myers.

— Fred. and George Soles were thrown from their runaway team on Main street last Saturday and considerably bruised.

— Dr. Lang has been quite sick for a week or two, but is now rapidly recovering. We couldn't get along without Dr. Lang.

— Some of our saloon men would like to have an election every day if Morse would be as generous as he was at the last one.

— Mr. Amos Cummings has an important announcement in this paper, to which the particular attention of the ladies is called.

— The Democratic caucus which nominated Mr. Maguire was not a very large one, but it made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers.

— If Mr. Morse's salesmen are as efficient behind the counter of his Boston store as they were in Woburn last Tuesday they deserve big salaries.

— Sunday was a late autumn, or wintry, day, and people were glad to hover around their fires. It's coming, though we look for some warm weather yet.

— If it was to be that Mr. Bowman must be defeated we had rather have seen Mr. Cummings elected to Congress than Morse. But Morse had the most money.

— There were plenty of election lies in circulation for several days prior to last Tuesday evening. But men were not influenced greatly by them, we ween.

— The Democrats squandered considerable powder over their victories, on Wednesday evening. The guns boomed for an hour lively. We can't blame them.

— There was a good turnout to the Republican rally last Saturday evening, and excellent speeches were made. But why keep it up? Let by-gones be by-gones.

— Mr. A. C. Floyd of the Treasury Department will please accept our thanks for a handsome copy of "National Loans of the United States," a very valuable document.

— The happiest man in Woburn by at least a hundred per cent is our genial and big-hearted friend, Mr. G. F. Jones. Gen. Butler's election filled him brimful of joy unspeakable.

— The Irish Republicans who undertook to distribute ballots last Tuesday had rather a hard row to hoe. They were bulldozed fearfully. But the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church.

— Last week Davis, who committed an assault on Rufus C. Pickering with a revolver some time since, was sentenced by Superior Court at Lowell to five months in the House of Correction.

— Mr. Jerome Kidder of Boston, lately deceased, left in his will an annuity of $450 to Capt. Coney of this place, which we are very glad to hear. He could not have left money to a more deserving man.

— Instead of occupying a seat in the State Senate this winter our neighbor, Mr. Rufus Pickering, will cut ice. Which he will find much more profitable if he and Mr. Morrill keep up their combination on prices.

— The High School boys look military-like with their regulation caps with "W. H. S." in gilt just over the visors. A few of the Grammar School lads we note have followed suit, and have regulation caps too.

— No man in Woburn put in more or better work for Gen. Butler last Tuesday than Mr. G. F. Jones. Time, talk, money and horseflesh were no object to him, and the General has reasons to be grateful to his old friend Jones.

— Leopold Morse spent a part of last Sunday in Woburn "mending his fences." He cut a pretty wide swath driving through our streets with his handsome carriage and span, but it was not near so wide as the one he cut on Tuesday.

— The old soldiers and citizens, headed by the Woburn Brass Band, made a very creditable appearance last Saturday evening as they marched from Col. Grammer's residence to the hall as an escort to the Honorable Orators of the evening.

— It was reported on Tuesday that the flyers with an extract from last week's JOURNAL which was made to do service for Gen. Butler, were printed and scattered from this office. Our friend and neighbor, Mr. Jones, could tell a different story about it.

— The stove men and plumbers are up to their ears, figuratively speaking, with work. The cold weather in all its vigor will soon be here and men are preparing for it as fast as possible. So stove men and plumbers are having a harvest, so to speak. And the worst of it is, it lasts all winter.

— While Edward Q. Brackett, son of Mr. J. Q. A. Brackett of this place, was gunning last Saturday at Carlisle, he accidentally shot himself through the left hand, making an ugly wound. He was climbing over a stonewall at the time and failed to handle his fouling-piece as carefully as he should.

— The Woburn Republicans took their defeat calmly and like men. The majority here was a little larger than looked for, but they were not greatly surprised for things have had a "mixed" look all through the canvass. They were prepared for a pretty severe whipping, but not quite so severe as they got.

— We are told that there are quite a number of applicants for the postoffice in this village and that petitions in their behalf are freely circulating about the streets. Col. Grammer, having started out early and being a popular man as well as a prominent party man, is said to stand a good deal the best chance of getting it.

— Those desiring to make the household bright and cheery during the long winter evenings which are about coming on, should visit Jones, McDuffee & Stratton, Boston, and purchase a Duplex or Moderateur lamp from their fine stock, which has been gleaned from the potteries of Japan, China, England, France, &c. For bridal gifts Duplex lamps are in the list of correct things.

TEACHER OF

Piano-forte and Harmony.

Residence,—Franklin Street, Woburn. 37-tf

— Mr. Henry Fadan, who formerly was employed in Frank Dodge's jewelry store, is spending a few days in town. He is a guest of Mr. Dodge.

— Particular attention is called to the illustrated card of Mr. C. R. Rosenquist in this paper. He makes first class pictures, charges only reasonable prices, is an honest dealer, and worthy of patronage.

— A petition is in circulation among the druggists praying the General Court for a law prohibiting persons not properly qualified from engaging in the business as apothecaries. There ought to be such a law.

— The annual shoot and supper of the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx will take place on next Monday afternoon and evening. The former at the Range, and the latter at the Central House. Fine Members must appear in full dress uniforms with overcoats.

— For one week more Mr. Frank Pierce will offer extra bargains in boots and shoes in order to make room for a large stock of winter goods. Now is the golden opportunity to buy boots and shoes cheap—away down. Don't forget that Mr. Pierce limits his offers to one week longer.

— It is not always safe to give advice. Last week we urged Republicans, with a good deal of fervor, not to stay at home but come out and vote. They did just as we asked them to—they all came out—but all of them, or nearly so, voted for Butler. Reckon we'll let people do as they have a mind to next time.

— The most particular and fastidious had no cause for fault-finding on the score of a scarcity of tickets in the field last Tuesday. It would have taken a pretty smart boy to shake a stick at all the splits which were offered to innocent and unsuspecting freemen, for their name, if they had any, was Legion. It was a nice pretty job for the Board to pick them all out and count them in the evening.

— The Boston papers were wrong in reporting a loss by Mr. Oliver Green at the fire at 576 Washington street, Boston, last week. On their statement we announced in our last that Mr. Green sustained considerable loss there, which was an error—he was not damaged a cent's worth by the fire, as we are glad to know. His rooms are on the second floor while the fire was on the fifth or sixth.

— We have received from A. Vogeler & Co., the well-known and very extensive advertising agents in Baltimore, Vennor's Weather Almanac for 1883, which we regard in the light of a boon. We shall be able to inform our readers a week before hand, during next year, just what the weather is going to be, and they can lay their plans accordingly. Messrs. Vogeler & Co. will please accept thanks.

— Programme to be rendered by the Mozart Male Quartette at the Unitarian Vespers, 7 o'clock next Sunday evening:

1. Organ Prelude. Guilmant
2. Gloria from Farmers Mass.
3. The Heavens Proclaim Him. Beethoven
4. Solo. Selected

H. A. DAVIS.

5. Quartette. Evening Repose. Abt
6. Prayer. Weber
7. Organ Solo. Selected
8. Quartette. Go when the morning shineth. Seiforth
9. Duet.

Messrs. DICKERMAN and DAVIS.

10. Quartette. Palm Branches. Faure
11. Organ Postlude.

— At an early hour last Wednesday morning, or some time during the night, the street door of the JOURNAL office was beautifully draped in crape with which the proprietor, on arriving in the morning was greatly pleased. We suspect that roguish imp, Democrat did it, for he seemed mighty tickled over our confusion on discovering the crape; but whether it was our neighbor or other sympathizing friends, we feel very grateful for their kindness and hope to be able to return the favor at an early day.

— The particular attention of our readers is called to the fact that the New England Manufactures and Mechanics Institute, on Huntington Avenue, Boston, on the urgent solicitations of a large number of people, will continue open until the night of the 18th of this month. The plan was to close it with October, but its great success, and the earnest request of its patrons have induced the managers to keep it running three weeks over the time. Exhibitors have consented to remain at heavy daily expense in order the public may have further opportunity to visit and examine the wonderful display of everything which the immense building contains.

PURE BLOOD IS THE ABSOLUTE NECESSITY OF HEALTH.

THE marvellous results of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures effected) proves it the best BLOOD MEDICINE. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA purifies the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA cures dyspepsia. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA cures biliousness. A peculiar point in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

147 MAIN STREET, - - - - - WOBURN.

— Yesterday was just as lovely an autumn day as anything could be.

— Don't fail to attend the next entertainment in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course, on next Wednesday evening, for it is going to be the boss. No mistake.

— Some time Monday night last Mr. Eli Cooper's news and cigar room at the depot was burglariously entered and robbed of $25 to $30 in money. No goods were taken. The peculiar circumstances attending the robbery, which need not be stated, make it quite certain that the person was well acquainted. Chief Conn has the affair in hand.

— The Boston Clothing Company, of which Mr. John C. Buck is manager—and a most excellent and successful manager too—has an announcement in this paper for the benefit of the public. When the goods in their store are examined and prices scanned it will be seen at once that the announcement which they make is really for the public good. Mr. Buck, with his increased storeroom, is able to show one of the largest and best stocks of clothing, furnishing goods, hats, etc., in the county, while on prices he takes a back seat for nobody. We advise all who are in pursuit of overcoats, suits, underwear, or anything else in the same line to first go to the Boston Clothing Co's store, and see what can be done.

— There was nothing unpleasant, boisterous, or worthy of condemnation, except voting the Democratic ticket, at and around the polls on election day. All hands conducted themselves very well indeed, nor was there a single fight to vary the monotony of the important and very interesting occasion. Considering that we are still a town and not a city, with only one voting place, and the size of the vote, it is very creditable to all of us that we were not knocking down and dragging out all day Tuesday. Pretty peaceable and well-behaved people we are, on the whole. But it becomes more and more apparent that we must emerge from our chrysalis state and get a city charter just as soon the Legislature will give us one.

— Fall trade has opened brisk and promising here in Woburn. The tanneries are all busy and other manufactories full of orders and work, which makes the eyes of the merchants and marketmen glisten with pleasure. The people too are getting more into the most excellent habit of trading at home instead of spending their money in Boston. This is the way to promote the growth and prosperity of a town, and it is encouraging to note that our population of both sexes are seeing it in that light. We have as good and prosperous a town as there is in the suburbs of Boston. It is a good one to live in too. It grows rapidly from year to year, and if the rule of patronize home business, encourage home industries, is generally adopted wealth and population will come to us still more rapidly.

— If when Rev. Mr. Young alluded to the reputation of Woburn for inebriety and consequent immoralities at Mrs. Livermore's meeting last Sunday evening, he would have his hearers infer that that reputation is more dishonorable than that of other towns as large as ours, we think he erred. We have a population in which there is a large foreign element, but in this respect we differ but slightly from all considerably manufacturing places, and if our brother will devote a little time to an investigation of the subject we think he will find that they are all very much alike. The cause which gives Woburn her unsavory reputation exists in all communities, and as men are about the same everywhere it is fair to conclude that the cause produces like effects wherever it it found. Possibly our officers are more lax in the performance of their duties than officers generally are; but the criminal records show that men sell rum, men get drunk, and courts find work to do all over our fair Commonwealth every day, year in and year out. We do not believe Woburn is any worse than other towns of its size. It is bad enough, the good Lord knows, but so are all towns where men can buy all the rum they want, and there are very few towns or cities in this State where they cannot do so. Let us "give the devil his due," brother Young, but give him no peace until he flees our fair town.

— The Methodist Church was filled to its utmost seating capacity on last Sunday evening with people who assembled to listen to a temperance lecture by the gifted advocate of the good cause, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore. It was a surprise that so many should have repaired to the church for such a purpose, even to hear so famous a lecturer, and we think the members of the W. C. T. U. and other friends of temperance were agreeably disappointed by the number present. But it was encouraging to witness such an assembly on a cold, inclement evening, for where so many people will sacrifice comfort for the good of a cause there must be found a deep interest in its success. Rev. Mr. Young, pastor of the Unitarian Church, presided at the meeting, which was opened by him with appropriate readings from the Scripture. An excellent choir furnished the very best of music which contributed largely to the pleasure of the very interesting occasion. V. M. Simons made an earnest, hearty prayer, after which Rev. Mr. Young introduced Mrs. Livermore, the able, earnest, and cultivated speaker of the evening. The introduction was prefaced by some very plain talk by Mr. Young, more of which would do good in Woburn. Mrs. Livermore's lecture was excellent. A powerful appeal was made to the friends of the cause for strong, vigorous, united action. The address was eloquent. The terrible effects of indulgence in intoxicating drinks, what it has done to individuals and families, the ruin it has accomplished, the wrecks it has wrought, the hearts it has broken, the home circles it has destroyed, the misery it has entailed—all were vividly portrayed by the speaker and brought home to the hearts and consciences of the audience. It was a powerful lecture illustrated by many cases of sorrow and woe that the lecturer has met in her work and been appealed to for sympathy and aid. We ought to have more of such lecturers here. With good music and the benediction the excellent meeting closed.

Walbridge Brothers,

he popular and accomodating furniture dealers at 23 Washington street, have just made their second annual mark-down of 10 per cent on their entire stock in order to close this season's purchase by January 1, 1883. This liberal reduction does not imply that they have goods of an inferior quality, for their stock is all new and stylish and consists of the latest productions from the best manufacturers. Carpets, in velvets, brussels, wool ingrain, woodstock, together with oil carpets from the best manufacturers are found in their carpet department. Also a full line of stoves, ranges and housekeeping goods of every description will be furnished at the lowest prices for cash or on their special and liberal system of partial payment.

WINCHESTER.

After so long a time the town receiving-tomb is nearly done.

I notice that our village paper has something nice to say of Woburn merchants every week.

There was a small smashup on the Railroad here on Tuesday evening which delayed the trains somewhat.

It is a good sign for Winchester that there are no empty houses in the village. Shows it is a desirable place to live in.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Unitarian Society was held last evening. The report of the Treasurer was made.

Mr. P. Holland is about to change the old "Black Horse Tavern" into tenements. It was lately owned and occupied by the Stone family.

A large number of foreigners were naturalized before election. The Yankees will soon have to take back seats in this community.

A large number of Free Masons visited Mt. Hermon Lodge at Medford last week Thursday, and had a very pleasant and profitable time.

At this writing, Wednesday afternoon, there is no doubt but that Mr. Dwinell is elected Representative from this District, for which I feel very thankful.

Mr. Sanderson has built an addition to his store which gives him room enough to sling forty cats by the tail if he should take a notion to sling that many at once.

Mr. Henry W. Plummer, employed by Kendall & Roberts, Cambridgeport, had his arm caught in the gearing of a planer and barely escaped a serious if not fatal injury.

The pay-roll of the teachers and janitors to the amount of $1179.33 were allowed by the School Board at their meeting last Saturday evening, also bills to the amount of $399.38.

It is suspected that there are a good many burglars, thieves, and other rogues hereabouts at times, and the general opinion is that they come from Boston to ply their unlawful vocation among our people.

On Wednesday evening, November 29, the Independents will give their annual assembly in Lyceum Hall, after a concert by the Union Band of Boston. This band furnishes first rate music, and J. Holmes can't be surpassed as a prompter. Tickets have been placed on sale.

I take it all back and give the Star credit for seeing further into a millstone than I can. As it said there would be, there were a good many Butler Republicans in Winchester last Tuesday. I regret to be compelled to own it, but the Republicans here were exceedingly loony on election day.

Though the number of guests was limited the wedding of Mr. Fred A. Sanborn and Miss Olive S. Blanchard, which was celebrated November 8, was a brilliant affair. The gifts, mostly from parties who could not be present, were numerous and costly. The occasion was a pleasant one and highly enjoyed.

The Selectmen have offered $100 reward for information that will lead to the detection and conviction of the persons who entered the houses of George F. Parker, Joseph H. Tyler, and George H. Chapman, on the evening of November 1st instant and stole therefrom money watches and jewelry. Also $100 reward is offered for the recovery of the property.

If "Alderman" in the Star is reliable authority there are bold highwaymen on the road between here and our principal suburb, Woburn. Their field of operations lies near the great forests between Highland Station and Cross Street, in the neighborhood of which rough-riders and strange footmen have been seen, and stories of their daring exploits heard. George Blaisdell has seen one of them with a pistol, but he "whipped up his horse and left the would-be Dick Turpin in the dark," which was bad for the would-be Dick Turpin.

At 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the Town Meeting was called to order to act on the articles in the Warrant. Mr. J. T. Wilson was chosen Moderator, and the business was proceeded with. It was Voted, To instruct the town to purchase a stone-crusher at a cost not to exceed $1800.

Voted, To accept the Report of the Selectmen on widening and straightening Wildwood street.

After which the meeting adjourned.

With due diffence to the clear-sightedness of the Star I contend that the coincident which it here narrates is remarkable, and anybody else would say the same. That two towns should be talking about buying a stone-crusher the same fall, those towns in the same county, and that county in the great and glorious Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is something out of the common run, and I'll never give in to the Star on the point. Here is what it modestly says:

By a co-incidence, not remarkable, the Selectmen of Stoneham and Winchester are asking their voters for appropriations for the purchase of stone-crushers. These powerful machines will cost the towns from $2,000 or $3,000 each, and the cost of running. Is it not possible for both towns to unite, and share ownership and expense? The question is, at least, worthy of consideration.

There was a wonderful political turnover here last Tuesday. Something in the nature of a cyclone struck us amidships and knocked things, so to speak. Our town has heretofore been Republican two to one, but the figures tell a different tale for Tuesday. Nobody pretends to account for this change, but the prevailing idea is that it was "all for fun"—just to give Old Ben a chance to show himself for once. But I must say that Tuesday was rather a cold day for the Republicans. The following is the record of the vote:

Chicago's First Citizen.

The Chicago Tribune, in closing an elaborate article on Hon. Carter H. Harrison, Mayor of that city, gives the following as Mr. Harrison's opinion of St. Jacobs Oil: "When I first found myself suffering from the rheumatism, my leading thought naturally was to call a physician, but my neighbors all advised me to try Sr. Jacobs Oil, the Great German Remedy. I procured some immediately, and found it excellent for that ailment.

The Longfellow Calender for 1883.

The selections from Mr. Longfellow's writings for each day of the year are carefully chosen, and form a series of passages of great beauty and excellence.

The Calender is printed in twenty colors, so blended and distributed as to produce a very rich and tasteful effect.

The multitude of Mr. Longfellow's readers will value this Calender as a daily reminder of one whom they prize so highly, and of whom this is so beautiful a souvenir. The price is one dollar, and it is published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Be Convinced by What Others Say.

Rochester, N. Y., April 26, 1882.

Dr. Craig;—Dear Sir:—I take great pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received in using your Cough and Consumption Cure, and French Crown Plasters. I was completely prostrated. Had three hemorrhages in four days. Physicians' prescriptions did me no good, and they told me I had better go to the hospital. I heard of your remedy, procured some, and in three days' time was able to go to work. They operated on me like magic, and I write this that others troubled as I have been may be made well. I will cheerfully write all who may correspond with me, and tell them the good done me through the instrumentality of your remedies, and will answer all who call upon me to same effect.
WM. T. LEPINE, 85 Scio St.

Dr. Chas. Craig:—I hereby return my sincere thanks for the wonderful cure your Crown Plaster has perfected on me. For many years I have been a sufferer with chronic pains in the stomach, and Rheumatism, and could never receive any benefit from medical treatment. Hearing of so many cures by this invaluable remedy, I sent for two of them. I hope the whole world will reach this invaluable remedy.
Yours sincerely,

LITERARY NOTICES.

OUR LITTLE ONES for November is as bright and sparkling as ever, and as beautiful as it is possible to make a small folks magazine. It is brimful and running over with charming pictures drawn and engraved by the very best artists, while its stories, poetry, etc., are of the highest order of merit. In our judgment no household made lovely and pleasant by the presence of children should be deprived of the monthly visits of OUR LITTLE ONES, the brightest and best of all juvenile publications. It is published by the Russell Publishing Co., Boston.

The November number of WIDE AWAKE is noticable for many pleasing features; among them a spirited frontispiece for Rev. I. L. Beman's frontier story of Levi's Bed-spread, by Walter Shirlaw, sent over from his London studio, and two fine illustrated poems, Mistress Mary, and The Little Queen. Next, one notes that both Serials, The Trojan War, and Lost among Savages, concluded. Every boy, at least, will pronounce these closing chapters capital. There are two gay reminders of Thanksgiving month: Rosa Graham telling of Tom Wee, and M. E. Wilkins relating the merry myth of The Pumpkin Giant. A Suit of Homespun deals with flax wheels and "blue 'n copperas check," with fourteen illustrations by Bodfish. Margaret Bertha Wright sends Charlie's First Doughnut; Rev. Wm. E. Baker tells of Another Ghost he once saw; Miss Harris furnishes a very interesting and romantic art paper relative to an American Boy Sculptor who is studying and working in France—young Paul Bartlett, the son of Truman Bartlett the Boston Sculptor. The article is illustrated with portrait of the young sculptor and pictures of his bronzes. Rev. E. E. Hale writes about his recent visit to the Honse of Lords, and Arthur Gilman has as usual a capital Dictionary paper. Charming poems, Tangles, a song from Lord Houghton set to music by Fred' K Archer, and the Chautauqua Young Folks' Reading Union Course complete a first-rate number; Anna Maria's Housekeeping, Prof. Sargent's Health and Strength Paper, and the article on Mary Russell Mitford, of the C. Y. F. R. U. Course, deserve thoughtful perusal. Only $2.50 a year. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston Mass.

The Diamond Luster

as advertised in onr columns, is having large sales, and is becoming increasingly popular. It is comparatively a new article, and well dsserves the name of "The Acme Polisher." It is packed in solid paste, free from powder or dust when applied. It cleanses and polishes gold, silver, plated-ware, nickel and glass, and is a substance that will almost instantly restore the original luster without the usual labor or any injury to even the thinnest-coated electro gold or silver surfaces. It has no equal when applied to mirrors, or plate glass. It is warranted entirely free from ammonia, acid, cyanide, or any injurious substances. It is manufactured by the Diamond Luster Co., office 186 Washington street, Boston, where samples will be cheerfully supplied, and the working of the same exhibited. This Co. have a large exhibition at the fair, and its counters are among the most attractive, as thousands of visitors avail themselves of the opportunity of a gratuitous cleansing of their watches and jewelry. Our readers should send for a circular. This is an excellent article for some of our enterprising young men and ladies to secure the agency of, and establish regular and permanent patrons for.

A Rochester girl gets out of bed at midnight, and goes to work sawing wood in the back yard. It is needless to add that she is insane, but a good many men round those parts sort of hanker to marry her.

This is to let the people know that I, Anna Maria Krider, wife of Tobias Krider, am now past seventy-four years of age. My health has been very bad for some years past; I was troubled with weakness, bad cough, dyspepsia, great debility and constipation of the bowels. I was so miserable I could hardly eat anything. I heard of Hop Bitters and was resolved to try them. I have only used three bottles, and I feel wonderfully good, well and strong again. My bowels are regular, my appetite good, and cough all gone. I feel so well that I think it my duty to let the people know, as so many knew how bad I was, and what the medicine has done for me, so they can cure themselves with it.

ANNA M. KRIDER, wife of Tobias Krider.

The new veiling, which is dotted with very small spangles of gold, jet or silver, is called dewdrop. It is a little more trying to the eyes than that which has large polka dots, but what are eyes?

CATARRH.—Without assuming to write out a thesis of this universal ailment, facts warrant our saying that it seems to us there never was a season when it was so prevalent as the present.

The above is preliminary to the following, viz.: That Messrs. Hood & Co., of Lowell, believe that the best way to treat Catarrh, and the only way to get permanent relief, is through the blood. A constitutional disease requires a constitutional remedy. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier and constitutional medicine that can be relied upon, and has cured numerous cases of Catarrh in its various forms. We think this claim a reasonable one and gladly give it room in our columns.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits, and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from "torpid liver," or "biliousness." In many cases of "liver complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has no equal, as it effe cts perfect and radical cures. At all drug stores.

☞No family Dyes were ever so popular as the Diamond Dyes. They never fail. The Black is far superior to logwood. The other colors are brilliant.

A Reformer.

He had blue overalls over his pants, a linen dress coat, a soldier's blue overcoat minus the cape, hair down on his shoulders, a vest held together with pins, and a voice which strongly resembled the grind of a coffee-mill. When his cell door was unlocked he stalked forth with long strides, and as he entered the court-room he said:

"He who interferes with reform is an enemy to society."

"Which is me," replied His Honor, as he laid aside his apple.

"My name," said the prisoner, in a lofty manner, "is Reuben Hiscock Haven and my mission is reform."

"Any particular kind of reform? Are you going for the Common Council or the Board of Education?"

"I am going for sin, sir—going for sin wherever and whenever I find it. I was in a saloon down here preaching against the vice of strong drink when one of your henchmen took me by the collar and caused my incarceration in this bastile."

"There was too much mustle in your efforts, Mr. Haven. You smashed bottles and tumblers, got thrown out, and was raising a row on the sidewalk when arrested."

"But I shall ever cry reform!"

"That will be bad for you. I can't have you raising rows on our quiet streets, and unless you promise to leave the city I shall shall have to take care of you."

"Fire, nor flood, nor famine shall not be allowed to interfere with my great work. I came here to reform thieves and robbers and doers of evil, and I can neither be bribed nor frightened."

"Harkee, old man," said his Honor as he leaned forward, "you are going up for sixty days. When they have obliged you to put on a clean shirt, and washed your face and combed your hair and cut your finger nails, this reform business will seem like a dream to you. Now go in and wait for the wagon."

"I won't."

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good, her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Why is it that a little country like France is in proportion to resources so much richer than America?—Exchange. Guess it must be because Frenchmen sell American women bonnets.

Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, bed-bugs, roaches, vermin, flies, ants, insects. 15c. per box.

"No," said the old toper, "I don't object to water, but I am an engineer and know that it don't do to turn the water on when the boiler is hot."

A Varied Performance.

Many wonder how Parker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ.

Catarrh of the Bladder.

"Presumption begins in ignorance and ends in ruin." On the other hand, the production of Kidney-Wort began with wise cautions and scientific research, and its use ends in restoring shattered constitutions and endowing men and women with health and happiness. "My tormented back," is the exclamation of more than one poor hard-working man and woman; do you know why it aches? It is because your kidneys are overtasked and need strengthening, and your system needs to be cleansed of bad humors. You need Kidney-Wort.

Forty Years' Experience have tested the virtues of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and it is now generally acknowledged to be the best remedy extant for pulmonary and lung diseases, embracing the whole range from a slight cold to a settled consumption. Were it not for its merits, it would long since have "died, and made no sign."

A gentleman from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected a number of cures. P. F. HYATT, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

Terrible itching and scaly humors, ulcers, sores and scrofulous swellings cured by the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap (the great skin cures) externally, and Cuticura Resolvent (blood purifier) internally. Ask about them at your druggists.

Bad temper often proceeds from those painful disorders to which women are subject. In female complaints Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure. By all druggists.

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER
Resolvent
I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frigh ful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribe the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.
Reported by F. H. BROWN, ESQ., Barnwell, South Carolina.

SCROFULA SORE.
Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.
Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.
LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.

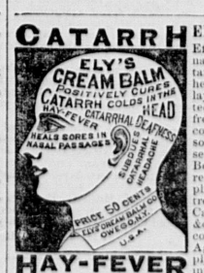

CUTICURA.

The Nobility of America.

That heredity plays as important a part in the formation of national as of individual character, there can be no doubt. Having recognized the influence of physical environment, and of those "latent silent sensations" also, "which do not come into consciousness, but still are ever thronging the nerves of sense" upon the individual, we can properly recognize their influence upon the nation. The effect of these laws has undoubtedly given the American heredity its high standard.

Huxley noticed that the American physical developement has not declned. Even the most careless observer must notice that the American moral and intellectual development has not declined. The love of freedom, the mental activity, the chivalrous courage, the devotion to a principle, the intense feeling, the keen and quick sentiment, the self-assertion and ambition, which characterized the fathers who colonized, freed and established the American nationality, have descended to their sons in measure proportionate to the demands and exigencies of the times. Soil, climate, institutions, have all made up the American, who possesses as a national characteristic the proud self-reliance which in other ages and on other soils has estblished a powerful social class, and has hedged it about with supreme rights aud privileges.

It is the advocates and promoters of education, the religious teachers, the law-givers, the press, the authors, the founders and builders of great enterprises, the active, industrious, intelligent mass, drawn from every walk in life, who constitute in any way the patrician element of American society,—the lovers of art, and science, and literature, the natural allies of all those who in any country believe in the capacity of the people to advance to the furthest verge of social and civil progress, and who believe also in mental and moral elevation.

From this mass come the "father's children," the heirs of the only nobility which cannot die out, the only titles which depend not on wealth and power. This vital force of the republic is as fixed here as are our republican institutions, and as our national inheritance.

Said Bentham to the Americans of his day, "Beware of an hereditary nobility. The patrimony of merit soon comes to be one of birth. Bestow honor, erect statues, confer titles, but let these distinctions be personal. Preserve all the force and all the purity of honors in the State, and never part with this precious capital in favor of any proud class that would quickly turn their advantages against you,"—a warning which has not been forgotten, and the observance of which has given the American republic a more permanent and powerful social organization than has ever been built up on classification and legitimacy in their proudest and most prosperous days.

No More Picnics.

"We ain't having any more picnics, that is, not church picnics, in our section now," sighed a Suffolk county farmer, as the cashier made out his bill for advertising his seed potatoes and handed him the change. "We had one, but they are not talking about any more."

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked the cashier.

"The fust one wasn't calkilated to make 'em popular," replied the old man buckling up his pocket book. "I don't think you could raise seven dollars towards another in the whole township."

"It went off, and that was chiefly the trouble," was the response. "You see, the picnic was to raise some money to pay the interest on the mortgage, the balance to go to the heathen. The wimmin turned loose and made pie, and we men got some lemons and buckets, and if we'd stopped there it would have been all right. Lemonade and pie was good enough for anybody, but some smart Alecks thought we ought to have soda water, and like a choice assortment of darned fools we all chipped in for one of them copper fountains."

"That was a pretty good idea," commented the cashier.

"Think so, eh!" replied the farmer dryly. "The idea was good enough but the fountain made trouble. The way we fixed it was to let the nozzle of the coutrivance stick up through the table and squirt during the frugal meal. Thought it would be a pleasant sight and enliven the proceedings."

"Did it?"

"It did. There are a great many factions in our county, but they agree that the fountain enlivened the proceedings. You know we all sat around the table on benches, and we men carved the pies while the wimmin dipped the lemonade. We was all to be helped before we turned the fountain loose and then we was to catch the soda in our glasses as it came out."

"Did you catch any?"

"We did. We didn't catch much in our glasses, but we got the soda; that is, a good deal of it. Some of it got away. Why, sir, just as soon as the parson turned the spigot you should have seen the picnic! Fizz! whoop! and there we was."

"Where was you?"

"Well, we was scattered. The table had been heard of twice, and some letters from Connecticut think it looked as though it was falling. Pie! You should have seen them pies. One big apple pie, with a top and bottom attachment and scolloped edge, went through the picnic like a circular saw. You ought to see the timber fall around that part. A custard ditto went clean through old aunt Betty Bigelow, and smashed against a barn with a report like a sham battle. Pie! Friend, we carry sheet iron umbrellas in our section now!"

"Any one hurt?" asked the cashier.

"Not to mention. We haven't got 'em all down out of the trees yet, but those we have saved seem to be all right, with the exception of an edge or a joint knocked off here and there. I don't know that any one was killed, though half the picnic is yet to be heard from. But the point I want to make is, that we ain't having any more of them things."

"That's where you're all wrong," suggested the cashier. "The very experience was just what you wanted."

"How?" demanded the farmer.

"You were trying to raise a church debt, as I understand it. Now, why don't you open another soda fountain right under the debt?"

That settled it, and if another tornado is ever reported from down Suffolk county way that cashier will have something to answer for.—[Brooklyn Eagle.]

Good Words From Druggists.

"Malt Bitters are the best 'bitters.'"
"They promote sleep and allay nervousness."
"Best Liver and Kidney medicine we sell."
"They knock the 'Chills' every time."
"Consumptive people gain flesh on them."
"Best thing for nursing mothers we have."
"We like to recommend Malt Bitters."

Kentucky has produced a mule with eight legs. If the Irish skirmishers want to ship something more terrible than an infernal machine to England, let them buy that critter, before the United States Army secures it as a Gatling gun.

Father is Getting Well.

My daughters say, "How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters. He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable, and we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A Lady of Rochester, N. Y.

As To Ancestors.

NOT MUCH DEPENDENCE TO BE PLACED IN FAMILY LINEAGE.

Look me in the eye, Telemachus, would you feel proud if you could prove that you were a lineal descendant of the four Georges? Certainly you would not. If you should have said yes, I should have advised you to stuff yourself and sell yourself for a cigar-store sign. If you assert yourself, my boy, that is all the world asks of you. If the world has work for you to do, if it wants you and needs you, it isn't going to bark up your family tree. Who asked about Lincoln's ancestors? Who stopped in 1863 to ascertain if Grant's family came over in the Mayflower? What "old family" did the American people elect President in 1880? What great-great-grandfather invented the telephone? Who knows Brigham Young's mother-in-law? God bless your grandfather, my boy. Love his memory, honor his name, revere his teachings, but don't try to wear his shoes today. You can't run and you can't climb in them. I tell you, your neighbor will question more closely the pedigree of the blooded horses or the milch cow you want to sell him than he will your own.

When I hear a man talking too much about his ancestors, I begin to think he needs them very much. And I always feel sorry for a man who died before he was born, and lives only in the deeds and words of his great-grandfather. Don't die out two or three generations before you begin, my boy. Live your own life, if it kills you. I have known some men who were very proud of their ancestors, whose ancestors would have been most dismally ashamed of them.—Burdette in the Hawkeye.

Some Welcome Information.

A patent medicine advertisement reads as follows: "When a lethargic feeling pervades your system: when you have a disinclination to move about; when you have abhorrence to exercise, your liver is inactive." This will be glad tidings to many people who have always thought they were lazy when they felt that way. Now they will know it was only their liver that was lazy. Middletown Transcript,

Rev. C. F. Brooks

says that his little girl is troubled with malaria very severely and that since he gave her Sulphur Bitters, he never thinks of leaving New York for his summer resort without a few bottles, for they always cure his family and are far superior to Quinine.

A Catch in Insurance.

An insurance agent applied to a woman in Austin to induce her to get her husband's life insured. "Will I be sure to get the money if he dies right off?" "Certainly, madame." But will you give me any assurance that he will die right off?" "No, madame, we cannot do that." "Well then, what good will it be to me to get his life insured, if he don't die? I knew there was some catch about this insurance business." —Texas Siftings.

The Brave Drummer-Boy.

In the war with France, previous to the Revolution, an English drummer-boy, not more than fifteen years of age, having wandered from his camp to near the enemy's lines, was seized and brought before the French Commander. On being asked who he was by the General he answered:

"A drummer in the English service."

This not gaining credit, a drum was sent for and he was desired to beat a couple of marches, which he accordingly did. The Frenchman's suspicions being, however, not quite removed, he desired the drummer to beat a retreat.

"A retreat, sir," said the youthful Britton, "I don't know what that is."

This answer so pleased the French officer that he dismissed the drummer and wrote to his General commending his spirited behavior.

I was troubled with Chronic Catarrh and gathering in my head, was very deaf at times and had discharges from my ears, besides being unable to breathe through my nose. Before the second bottle of Elys' Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health. C. J. CORBIN, 953 Chestnut st., Field Manager Philadelphia Pub. House, Pa.

The Woburn Journal

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ Last Saturday afternoon the Prohibitory State Central Committee, Mr. Amos Cummings, chairman, held a meeting in the City to gather up and save the pieces left by the late tornado. Their ardor was not cooled in the least by the little set-back on election day, and the business would be carried on in the future as in the past. It was agreed to submit this petition to the next Legislature:—

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court Assembled: We, the undersigned, citizens of Massachusetts, respectfully petition your honorable body to legislate for measures whereby the trafic in intoxicating liquors for drinking purposes may be prohibited, and, for the purpose of determining the will of the people, respectfully beg that the following questions be submitted to the whole people male and female, above the age of 21 years, otherwise qualified to vote, on the first Monday in April 1883: Shall the present liquor license law be repealed? Yes or no. Shall a prohibitory law be enacted? Yes or no.

☞ There was a singular sort of a meeting at the home of Hon. Oliver Ames, Lieutenant Governor-elect, at North Easton last Tuesday evening. About three hundred guests were present, representing the Republican, Democratic, Greenback and Temperance parties, by several of whom speeches were made. Gov. Long opened the ball with a capital one: he was followed by Gen. Butler, Governor-elect, in a stirring address: Leopold Morse had something to say in which he promised Gov. Long Democratic votes to elevate him to the United States Senate. Henry Faxon wanted the State House moved to North Easton—and a great many others indulged in remarks appropriate to such a love feast. All of which taken in connection with some other things looks as though the course is being cleared to make Gov. Long's race for the Senatorship easy and sure.

☞ We doubt very much if the Morse organs in Cambridge, taking it all in all, were as pleased with the results of the late election as they might have been. If there is the least spark of Republicanism left in their composition—and they profess to be Republicans—the choice of Gen. Butler for Governor must have lessened their joy over the defeat of Mr. Bowman. Of course we do not know positively how they feel about it. Possibly they supported the General on the score of his Civil Service principles. But if they shared the sentiments of a very large majority of the Republicans of the State the election of Mr. Morse cost them a good deal more than it was worth.

☞ It is not expected that there will be any serious opposition to the election of George A. Marden, Esq., of Lowell, to the Speaker's Chair in the next House. Certainly no man elected to the next General Court would fill the position better. He is talented, a bright parliamentarian, and has knowledge of the duties of the office which eminently fits him for their honorable discharge. And besides, Mr. Marden is one of the ablest and best editors in the State. For which reasons, and others, the JOURNAL favors his election to the Speakership.

☞ Capt. George B. Rodney, U. S. A., detailed to visit the camps of the Massachusetts militia, in his report to the Adjutant General of the Army, speaks as follows of the Fifth Regiment:

"The 5th regiment (Col. Bancroft) appeared to improve more in drill and soldierly bearing while in camp than any other, which was unquestionably due to the energy and care of its Commander. This regiment and the 1st regiment (Col. Wellington) surpass the others in batalion evolutions.

☞ Watson's Illuminator for December is on hand "like Day & Martin's blacking," and there's no discount about it, it is just shaking all over with mirth and merriment. The Illuminator gives more solid fun, of better quality, and faster colors, for the money than any other publication in America. Will Watson publishes it at Biddeford, Maine. Send for sample copies, and laugh.

☞ This is the latest: Mr. Blaine will not be a presidential candidate in 1884: he didn't try to beat Folger for Governor, and young Belmont for Congress, in New York: he isn't "figuring" with Cornell, fighting Arthur, or "down" on the Camerons, and harmony and brotherly love prevail all along the Republican lines.

☞ If the Republicans who voted for Morse will keep a sharp eye on that gentleman through the next Congress, it may be that they will wish they hadn't done so.

☞ A recount gives Mr. John L. Parker the seat to which he was elected, by the Lynn Republicans, in the General Court which is just as it should be.

— The Unitarians made a snug sum of money out of their Harvest Supper last week. It is to be used in defraying the expenses of fitting up the handsome parlor of the church.

— Some kind friend in Boston has sent us some interesting "copy" which will appear in due season. The name of the sender would have been very agreeable reading to us.

— Charles Day is about opening a barber's shop along side of the Advertiser office. And we don't believe that even this will fetch our brother quill-driver to a realizing sense of his lost condition.

— While Gallagher and Hawkins were "fooling" the other day in Blake's tannery, the latter accidently received a pretty bad cut on his left hand from a knife held by the former. So much for "foolin'."

— The Kendall mansion on Cambridge street has been rented to Mr. Noble of the Beacon Park course. The Kendall family having been absent on the Pacific coast the mansion has been unoccupied for several years.

— In this issue of the JOURNAL is printed Gov. Long's proclamation for Thanksgiving. It is very instructive and valuable as a historical document, but has less poetical gingle than last year's proclamation from the same gifted pen.

— Three strange lads about a dozen years old were taken up by our police on Monday and detained. They had run away from their homes in Lowell from whence came telegraphic enquires soon after being picked up here. The young adventurers were re-to Lowell on Tuesday.

— The recently elected officers of the St. Charles C. T. A. are:—President, Rev. M. D. Murphy; Vice Pres., James Burke; Treasurer, John H. Murray; Financial Secretary. Thomas C. Quinn; Recording Secretary, Patrick Bellew; Auditors, Thomas D. Hevey, Peter P. Meehan, Peter J. Foley.

— Particular attention is called to the advertisement of Smith & Son. As is well known these gentlemen keep full and complete lines in dry goods, dress goods, underwear, carpets—indeed, everything kept in a first class dry goods establishment, and they have a reputation of dealing fairly and selling very cheap.

— The Northern Lights seen at a late hour on Saturday evening were very brilliant indeed. For half an hour the light was as bright as at full moon nearly. We have never seen a stronger display, though frequently one more beautiful, for there were no changing, shootings, dartings and wavings as is generally the case.

— President Buckham of the Vermont University at Burlington, visited our Public Library last Tuesday for ideas. His University has recently fallen heir to the valuable library of the late Hon. George P. Marsh, and is about to erect a building in which to place it. President Buckham spoke in very high praise of our beautiful library building.

— On Wednesday evening, December 6th the Burbank Relief Corps will give an entertainment and hold a sale at G. A. R. Hall for which due preparations are being made. There will be a supper, an apron sale, a fine entertainment, and other attractive features which will probably secure a hall full of people. The price of admission and supper will be 25 cents.

— In conformity with the published programme for a Week of Prayer religious meetings have been held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. every evening this week, except Wednesday evening, when the different churches held services. On Tuesday afternoon the perfectionists, or holinesss people, held a meeting in the rooms, and all of them, we believe, have been well attended.

— Mr. S. Horton has bloomed out strong on the question of bulletin board. He has erected one in front of his news store so conspicuous that he who runs can read if he wants to, and a man though a fool—but we haven't our copy of Shakespeare handy by, and will not undertake to quote from memory. But it is evident that Mr. Horton means that people shall know where he hangs out.

— Mr. Huntington Porter is about to apply to the Collector for a position in the Boston Custom House, and we hope, as many others do, that he will secure it. Mr. Porter is one of our best citizens, a worthy man in every respect, and well esteemed by everybody. He was a good soldier; lost a leg in the service; is intelligent, and well posted in business affairs, and we really hope that a good place in the Custom House will be given him by Collector Worthington.

— Mr. Pierce has postponed three of the entertainments in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course, namely the Opera, Lecture, and Evening with Longfellow, until later in the season. The next one to be given will be on December 14 by the Schubert Club of Boston, which, everybody knows, is a good thing in the musical line. The Course has not been patronized so well as it deserved to be, but Mr. Pierce will come square up to his part of the contract with the public, let what will happen.

— Hammond's Clothing store has an illustrated card on the first page of this paper.

— Mr. Charles M. Strout lost a good horse last Sunday. Just in the rush of the season it was quite a pull-back for Charlie.

— The great explosion at Chelsea on last Sunday evening was heard and seen by people in this village. It was nearly a dozen miles away.

— Selectman Ferguson was all knocked up with rheumatism and neuralgia last Monday morning. Probably sat in a draft at church on Sunday.

— The G. A. R. gave their second entertainment last evening. The programme was a good one, and its execution was enjoyed by a large audience.

— The Kettledrum by the Young People's Union of the Unitarian church came off in in the church last evening in good shape. It was very much enjoyed.

— The fore part of this week was as delightfully warm as the balmiest September days. Fires, except for house-keeping purposes, were not needed.

— We are informed that the amount left to Capt. Coney by a Boston gentleman was $150 a year instead of $450. Wish it might have been $1000 and upwards.

— Walter B. Randall had the forefinger of his right hand cut square off by a machine in Russell's stiffening factory last Saturday. He was insured in the Hartford Accident Insurance Company.

— We expect a large number of the Centre folks will attend the fair and entertainment to be given by the No. Woburn Unitarian society on the evening of the 23d. It will be real good, and pay well to attend.

— Heaps of civilians and newspaper reporters attended the annual shooting match of the Phalanx at their Rifle Range last Monday afternoon. They probably had in their mind's eye the feed at the Central House in the evening.

— Major H. C. Hall was in town last week, and hosts of good friends were glad to meet and greet him again. About Christmas the Major will break camp in York State and return to his old home in Woburn, where he will spend the winter. Glad of it.

— Mr. Charlie A. Jones's new residence on Warren street will not be moved into for some time yet. He proposes to have it thoroughly finished and seasoned before occupying it. The grounds are being walled in and put into fine shape. When completed Mr. Jones will have one of the best homes in Woburn.

— The Y. M. C. A. Orchestra furnished the accompaniment to the unusually excellent singing at Dr. March's last Sunday evening lecture. They acquitted themselves finely. The Doctor's lecture, devoted to the moral and spiritual well-being of young men more particularly, was one of his best, which means that it was able, sound and practical.

— On Wednesday morning an inquest was held on the remains of Gillispee who was run over by a railroad train and killed, the verdict of which was in accordance with the facts stated elsewhere. "And the Justice further finds that said Gillispie was much intoxicated at the time of receiving said wounds,and his death was entirely the result of his intoxicated condition."

— Mr. Eli Cooper, whose news rooms and cigar store was broken into one night last week and robbed of all the money it contained, was kindly remembered by some of his hosts of friends and patrons on Monday in the shape of a purse containing about $20, as a balm for his wounded spirits. It was very good indeed in these generous people thus to remember and show their good will toward Mr. Cooper, and it was satisfying to know that their money was worthily bestowed.

— Last Saturday morning the dead body of William J. Gillespie of this place was found on the track near the Green street crossing. He was probably run over and killed by one of the late trains on Friday night as his left foot was cut off at the ankle and several bruises were dicovered on his head and shoulders. As a part of one foot with the shoe was found in a frog the supposition is that he was caught in the frog and being unable to extract himself at once was struck by a train going out, run over and killed. Gillespie was a currier, single, a native of Woburn, and about 45 years old. The Medical Examiner held an inquest.

— Smith, the Woburn Globe reporter, gives Mr. Maguire, our Representative to the General Court, considerable taffy in the Sunday issue of that paper. An abreviated biography of the gentleman is printed from which it appears he is "self-made," 33 years old, of Waltham birth, good lawyer, growing and worthy. This is all well enough. Nobody disputes Mr. Maguire's talents, qualifications for a Representative, his merits as a lawyer, or social worth, but taffy is palatable only when presented in homeopathic doses. We all expect Mr. Maguire to represent the town in a creditable manner, because he has the ability to do it, and will take pride in a faithful discharge of the duties of his office. He is a man of good, common sense and a limber tongue, and with these we will risk him in the Legislature, or anywhere else—certainly, where we would not risk ourselves.

— The Boston Clothing Company, Mr. John C. Buck, Manager, have an announcement on the first page of this paper which the menfolks of Woburn and neighboring towns will do well to study and heed. In an especial manner would we advise our numerous readers in Winchester, Burlington, Stoneham, Wakefield, Reading, Wilmington, and other towns to scan carefully what the Company have to say, and then test the accuracy of their statements by a personal inspection of their great and varied stock, and the remarkable low prices at which their goods are sold. Our word for it, the statements will be found to tally with the facts to a dot. The Company,we are glad to know, are doing a very large business: selling great bills not only to Woburn people but to others, and the beauty of it all is, they give perfect satisfaction. Satisfaction to purchasers is what tells the story. Please read the announcement.

— Read what Frank Pierce has to say about shoes and things.

— The ground skimmed over a very little on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

— An old settler promises the JOURNAL some interesting reminescences of old Woburn shortly. They will be good.

— One of Mr. John Cummings's teamsters had both feet run over by a loaded wagon the other day and one toe dislocated.

— "By-Ways" makes some excellent and seasonable suggestions in a properly penned communication to this paper, which will go into print next week.

— Mr. Everett P. Fox and Miss Elona L. Dennis will enter the blissful state of matrimony on the 29th instant. A wedding reception will be given at the residence of the brides parents, 52 Chandler street.

— The fair, supper and entertainment, contemplated by the ladies of the Methodist society, will be given in the third week in December. It is expected that everybody will bear this date in mind, and make preparations accordingly.

— Next Sunday the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church in this village will be held, and in the evening an address will be made by Mrs. C. L. Eastman, the wife of a former pastor of that church. A general and cordial invitation is extended to all.

— At Dodge's jewelry store, which by the way is as bang-up as any that can be found outside of the Hub (meaning Boston), can be seen a great stock and variety of art work after the style of "Rogers's Groups"—equally as handsome, quite as ornamental, as pleasing to the eye, and gratifying to a cultured taste—but sold at much lower prices, which our people should see. The sets need only to be seen to be admired, and we suspect Mr. Dodge will have a great sale of the handsome pieces.

— County Attorney Stevens is a public officer who knows his duty and has the courage to do it. He don't fear anybody or thing when on the right track. The four Woburn liquor sellers who were convicted here and appealed, were fined heavily in the Superior Court the other day, after which a petition was forwarded to Attorney Stevens to have their cases "placed on file" by paying costs. He didn't see it in that light, and the noses of the convicted men were brought to the grindstone. Better still, Mr. Stevens positively declares that no guilty men in his court shall escape punishment.

— About forty of the young friends of Mr. George H. Ellison assembled in the parlors of his home, corner of Mt. Pleasant and Fowle street, and there tendered him a genuine surprise party, last Wednesday evening, it being the 21st anniversary of his birthday. A good time was had by all present and as they were about to partake of a spread prepared for the occasion, Mr. Fred Bryant, in a neat and pleasant speech, presented him in behalf of the company with an erect, black-walnut writing-desk fully equipped with paper, ink and postage stamps. Mr. Ellison, though not fully recovered from the first surprise, managed to utter a few grateful remarks. The company remained quite late, being engaged all the while in games, etc.

— If our good friend, Rev. Mr. Young, flatters himself that that he has made a point on the JOURNAL a closer reading of our statements and a comparison of them with the declarations in his letter published elsewhere in this paper may serve to dispel the illusion from his mind. We have nowhere nor at any time stated or intimated that the reputation of Woburn for selling and drinking rum is not bad. We know it is bad. We have said so in substance many times. But that is not the point in issue: the question is, has Woburn, in respect of rum and inebriety, a worse reputation than other towns in the Commonwealth of the same size? Mr. Young, in his Sunday evening speech, claimed that it has: we say nay; and our criticism was on that single point only. It will be seen that his letter in this paper is entirely silent on this question, while it takes us to task for sins we have not committed. Does our good clerical friend see the point?

— Now that the season for reading has come, our young friends will find on the tables of the Reading Room in the Public Library a list of books selected from the different classes of history, travels, and biography with special reference to them. These books are written to a considerable extent in a narrative form, and while they will interest, by incident and adventure, will at the same time it is hoped instruct and help in right reading. Let our young people begin the winter with such a course of reading and they will receive that "instruction and improvement" for which the history was established and is maintained. During the last four weeks the juvenile department has received much attention, the worn books have been replaced by new ones where it was thought expedient. A goodly number of new publications have been placed upon the shelves, making the whole number over eight hundred in that department, a little library in itself and one in which our youngest readers can find much to interest and delight.

— This particular part of the Old Bay State is very remiss—almost criminally so—in one important thing, and that is raising punkins. Why this delicious fruit is not raised now-a-days, when only a few years ago it was a staple product of this soil, is beyond our ken. How a body—we mean a New England body—can be expected to duly, devoutly and patriotically keep Thanksgiving Day without punkin pie would be difficult of satisfactory explanation. We know the thing can't be done, and yet nobody hardly hereabouts raises punkins! There is evidently a screw loose somewhere. Punkin pie is as much an essential in keeping Thanksgiving as the Turkey, or the Goose at Christmas,or the "Minister's Face" at New Years. But strangely enough other vegetables of supposed greater value have been suffered to crowd out the dear old golden-skinned punkins, and Thanksgiving Day is not on that account what it was when we were a boy. Who will be the first to step bravely forth next spring and plant punkin seeds? Don't all answer at once.

TEACHER OF

— The item which appeared in last week's JOURNAL relative to the autopsy of Mrs. J. R. Green did an unintentional injustice to the physicians who have attended Mrs. G. through her long sickness. The facts are these: The autopsy showed, (1st) the existence of valvular disease of the heart; (2nd) what is termed anæmia of the brain, the latter being a functional trouble dependent upon the heart disease. The existence of the heart disease was accurately diagnosed by most of the attending physicians and at an early stage of the sickness. Two at least have always maintained that the heart disease was the original cause of the sickness. From the great violence of the head symptoms it was supposed that there existed a lesion at the base of the brain in the form of an obstruction in a blood vessel, but resulting from the heart disease. These symptoms however, were proved by the autopsy to be dependent upon the anæmia rather than on organic changes. In a word there was a functional, and not an organic, disease of the brain. No case of sickness has ever received more careful and painstaking effort on the part of the several physicians attendant upon it, and it is manifestly unjust that the carelessly worded item before referred to should be allowed to mislead the many who have been interested in this somewhat remarkable and distressing sickness. Throughout the whole case there has been no professional difference or unpleasant feelings on the part of the various physicians who have succeeded each other in the case. Everything was done that skill and loving care could accomplish and now the autopsy proves, what was believed by all for 18 months, that the case was incurable and hopeless from the first.

— Last Monday was the Woburn Mechanic Phalanx's holiday. In the afternoon they held their annnal target shoot at the Range, and in the evening ate their annual supper at the Central House. The Fine Members were out in force, uniformed, and participated in the Range and table exercises, at both of which they acquitted themselves handsomely. About one o'clock, led by the Woburn Drum Corps, the company marched to the Range on the L. A. Fowle place a mile west of town, and prepared for work. The weather was fairly favorable for the sport, at least as much so as could be expected at this season of the year. The boys were in good spirits, and the Fine Members made an appearance of which Woburn had a perfect right to be somewhat vain. Targets were placed at 200 yards range for the active members, and 150 yards for the Fine Members. Shooting for the prizes soon began in good earnest, the interest in which was fully shared by the large number of spectators who went out to witness the sport. Major Ambrose Bancroft made a score of 19 out of a possible 25, and won the first prize, a handsome French clock. Mr. Marcellus Littlefield, the Herald reporter, took the second prize, a beautiful silver fruit dish, by a shot of 18 out of 25. A pair of plaster rabbits was the prize offered for the poorest shot, which was won by Thomas H. Hill, Esq., the gentlemanly Clerk of the Board. His numerous friends present claimed that if a movable target had been used instead of a fixed one, and it had been properly placed at each shot he would have hit the bull's eye every time. We have no doubt of it. This closed the shooting by the Fine Members, and now the active members sailed in. A silver medal was the first prize and was won by James Darmody by a score of 17 in 25. The second prize, a gold pen and pencil, was won by W. Frank Fowle, by a score of 10 out of 15. J. E. Boutwell took the third prize, a smokers set, by a score of 7 in 10. The shooting all the way up and down the line was very creditable to the marksmanship of the boys. The result was satisfactory all round. Early in the evening the company and Fine Members, with invited guests, assembled at the Central House where an elegant supper awaited them, prepared by host Hammond. The bill of fare included all the best things that the best markets had in store; the tables were handsomely set out and decorated, the surroundings pleasant, and the service prompt and courteous. The supper was heartily enjoyed. After the eating and drinking of course speeches were made. The gentlemen who made them were: Col. William A. Bancroft of the Fifth Regiment, of which the Phalanx is Co. G.; Col. William T. Grammer, of the old Fifth; Thomas H. Hill, Esq., of the Board of Selectmen; Major Ambrose Bancroft, John G. Maguire, Esq. Representative-elect to the General Court, and Mark Allen. They were all good and appropriate to the occasion. A little after 8 o'clock the exercises were brought to a close, the Phalanx repaired to Armory, and the day —a very pleasant one—was ended.

C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen— * * * * I have had ringworm humor and salt-rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had any number of doctors in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying to cures from the use of your Sarsaparilla and Olive Ointment. I felt forced to try it, although I had seen many things advertised that never did me any good. I have now taken two small bottles and one large one of Sarsaparilla, and used three boxes of Ointment. I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete.

I am gratefully yours,

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gents—Please send me by express two bottles HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and a few Cook Books for distribution. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with sick headache and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from those severe headaches. She has not taken any of any account since last spring, and what little she had is lent to do some others some good, and we must have it in the house.

Yours truly,
HOMER B. NASH.

JOURNAL COURT RECORD.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT OF EASTERN MIDDLESEX.

Parker L. Converse, Judge.

Cases of all kinds and descriptions came up for adjudication by His Honor. Chiefly, however, they are for minor offences, small things, insignificant, and hardly worthy to be meddled with by the "minions of the law." This week has been about on a par with other weeks—but little variety in the cases, and none of them of much interest. A poor fellow of Winchester was sent down for taking his chum's overcoat to come to Woburn with without consent. It was a hard case for the young man who, with his accuser, has but lately come to this country, because there was no criminal intent in taking the garment, and he was returning it when arrested. He was fined $20. The business has not been heavy this week, and we wish it might be less.

Patrick Shay and John Maguire, of Boston, were arrainged before His Honor, Thursday morning on a charge of burglariously entering and robbing the dwellings of Mr. Joseph Tyler and Mr. George Parker in Winchester on Nov. 1st. The case was continued until tomorrow, and the accused were sent down.

EDITOR OF WOBURN JOURNAL: — Your strictures on my remarks in presiding at Mrs. Livermore's lecture indicate a tendency to lose sight of facts. I spoke by the card in alluding to Woburn's justly unsavory reputation regarding intemperance. Although in one article you take exception to what I said, still in another you indicate your faith that more talk of the same sort "would do good in Woburn;" so I shall believe that this last reflects your sober judgment.

I have been a faithful reader of the WOBURN JOURNAL, and I recall that no longer ago than Aug. 4 a long and able leader appeared in your columns, declaring that "nothing is being done in this town that we are aware of toward the suppression of the illegal sale of intoxicating drinks, or to regulate it under the licenses granted." "Inebriety is on the increase here." "More intoxicated persons are seen on the streets than formerly." We have "no support or moral backing for the police." I find it difficult to harmonize that sort of statement with your criticism of what I chose to say at Mrs. Livermore's lecture and I reaffirm what I then said: We do have an unsavory repute abroad as well as among our best people at home, and justly so. Our wisest and best men will tell you that at no time in the history of our town has there been a worse state. Your own paper reports "nothing being done to suppress illegal liquor selling, or to regulate the traffic by those who are licensed." Your observation must have made you sad concerning the intoxication that constantly disgraces our streets and brings sorrow and dread into so many homes. And more than all this; it cannot be unfamiliar to you that they are many among us who assert that our appointed police know that any efficient performance of their duty would be the occasion of their official heads being taken off.

I point you to the non-enforcement of the Screen Law and challenge you to point out a single instance of its enforcement among us. Your paper asserted (Aug. 4) that "the real sinners, the dealers themselves, escape the penalties they richly deserve," and in that same article you declare it to be "possible to get a public sentiment and feeling before which the enemy could not stand a month." But, my dear sir, don't let us forget that we cannot get this by indiscriminately bestowing taffy. Let labor to so awaken this community to a sense of its condition that the curse that is upon us may be, at least, greatly lessened.

NORTH WOBURN.

The ladies of the Unitarian Society in this village are making great preparations for their annual fair, supper and entertainment, which takes place on Thursday evening, November 23—just a week before Thanksgiving, when people are feeling at their very best in anticipation of the grand annual feast. The ladies will have everything shipship and in the highest degree attractive and pleasant. There will be an apron and confectionery table, ice cream, and a rousing good supper with which to regale the inner man. A very fine entertainment in connection with the fair will be given, the piece selected being "The Auction of slaves." This doubtless will draw a crowd, for the piece will be well "manned." The price of admission has been placed at the very low fignre of 10 cents, and the supper at 25 cents. Street cars will leave for the Center at the close of the fair.

The new Congregational Chnrch is progressing finely. The exterior already begins to take on the appearance of a house of worship, and the day is not far distant when the edifice will be finished.

Everything is very cool, calm and collected since election. We have all got round into the sober way of living again and are happy.

Mr. Ayer ran well, but unfortunately for him he was not on the winning side. He is a good citizen, and if he had got votes enough would have been elected.

The Arlington Advocate calls our Mr. S. W. Twombly "the irrepressible Twombly," and intimates that he is a political marplot, or something of the sort. This will be news to Mr. Twombly's many friends here.

If I am correctly informed Rev. Fr. O'Connor has gone on a journey to the West. I am not informed as to the probable length of his stay-away. The Father's health is not overly robustous, and he concluded that a vacation with a trip in it would build him up and make him feel better.

It is too bad, after the recent burglaries, that our police let the rascals slip through their fingers.—[Star]. This reflection on the efficiency of our police will bear an explanation. Just what the Star means by this remark is what I, and our community, would like to know. And what have our police officers to say about it, if anything?

The current term of the Winchester postmaster expires in December, when a new appointment will be made. Of course our present very popular incumbent of the office will be reappointed without a dissenting vote, for everybody is satisfied with him. He discharges the duties of the position promptly, urbanely, correctly, and were the question put to the people he would have the vote of every man, woman and child in Winchester. Under such circumstances no outside applications are looked for—there couldn't be.

When you Woburn editors come down to Winchester please don't fail to drop in and take a sip or two of Dr. George P. Brown's hot soda or other temperance drinks. It may be that your excellent Democratic neighbor, Mark Allen, of the Advertiser, would prefer something stronger than soda, but I know the JOURNAL editor would go into ecstacies over this splendid cold weather beverage. The Star editor has tried it and has found out that it is just as good for Democrats as for Republicans, though the members of his party, as a mass, prefer something a little stouter.

The Star's joy over the election of Butler was announced in startling headlines and great swinging of hats. Though the Star is professedly "independent" its happiness was in no way interfered with by the fact that Gen. Butler is a Democrat and was the candidate of the Democratic party. After its glorification over Gen. Butler, and the "Heroic Lovering," Democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth District, and "Honest Morse," Democrat candidate in the Fifth, it will be uphill work for the Star to make its Winchester readers believe that it is not a Democratic paper instead of an "independent" one. All the "independence" it shows is in opposing the Republican party, and in this it is a success.

At the annual meeting of the Unitarian Society last Thursday evening, the following business was transacted: In the absense of the clerk, Geo. S. Littlefield was elected clerk pro tem. Thomas P. Ayer, Moderator; D. N. Skillings, Clerk; William Webb, Treasurer; F. Winsor, F. H. Nourse, E. Shattuck, F. A. Patch, and R. C. Metcalf, in counection with the Clerk and Treasurer, as Standing Committee. Officers of the Sunday School:—Superintendent, Rev. Thodore C. Williams; Asst. Superintendent, Dr. Frederick Winsor; Clerk and Treasurer, E. Wadleigh. The annual reports of the Standing Committee and Treasurer were read and ordered in file. It was voted unanimously to renew the call to Theodore C. Williams to become the pastor of the society and Messrs. F. H. Nourse, E. Shattuck and F. A. Patch were appointed a coommittee to communicate the vote to Mr. Williams. The meeting then adjourned to last Monday evening when the committee introduced Mr. Williams, to the society, and he in very pleasant and appropriate remarks accepted the call to become their pastor. The ordination and installation of the pastor elect will take place some time prior to Dec. 1st, and the Standing Committee of the society in connection with the pastor elect were instructed to make all the necessary arrangements for the same.—Advertiser.

BURLINGTON.

SOCIABLE.—The Ladies' Sewing Society held a very pleasant sociable in the Town Hall, last Thursday evening. A short entertainment was given, consisting of singing by the church choir and by a chorus of children, a recitation by Miss Eva Sylvester of Arlington, a song by Miss Bertha Wood, a dialogue, "Just as our Mothers Do", by the little Misses Wood, Cutler, and Foster, songs by Mr. George W. Austin, and a duet by Mr. Austin and Mrs. Luddell of Arlington. The entertainment was very interesting and was particularly well received by the audience. The fine songs and recitation given by our friends from abroad, to whom we are so often called upon to be grateful, were especially pleasing to all. After the entertainment, supper was served and a short time spent in conversation and social recreation. This sociable was, in many respects, the best ever given by the society, and the ladies have great encouragement for similar occasions in the future.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it is a good and ancient custom to set apart after the harvest a day for Public Thanksgiving and Praise to Almighty God:

Now, therefore, I, JOHN D. LONG, Governor, by and with the advice of the Council, appoint therefor Thursday, the thirtieth day of November next.

In 1621, "our harvest being gotten in, our Governor sent four men on fowling that so we might, after a special manner, rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of labor." Thus the Pilgrim Governor Bradford instituted the harvest festival of the New England Thanksgiving. Since then successive generations of wise, devout and grateful men and women have kept it in token alike of their faith in God and thankfulness for His goodness, and of the tender memories and regathering affections of family and home. Let us still rejoice. Let us utter our thanks for a beneficient and prosperous Commonwealth and for the couniess blessings of liberty, thrift, learning, and moral and religious inspiration, which make our land and time rich beyond measure with happiness and hope, with opportunity and promise. Let us meet within our houses of worship, and under our own roofs, recognizing our obligation to Almighty God and our duty and dependence one with another. Let us rekindle the virtues of the fathers and increase our blessings by deserving them. Let us encircle the family board and fireside, loving memory filling the vacant chairs, and renew the hearty welcome and old-time cheer of Thanksgiving Day. And especially let our charities go out and carry the gladness of this ancient festival of the people to those who are in need or sorrow—the charity of our abundance and the sweeter charity of our sympathy.

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess."

Given at the Council Chamber in Boston, this twenty-eight day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty two, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventh.

JOHN D. LONG.

HENRY B. PIERCE, Secretary.

God Save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

An Age of Suspicion.

Truly, this is an age of suspicion. Nevertheless, Capt. F. M. Howes, of the steamer William Crane, Merchants' & Miners' Transportation Line between Boston and Baltimore, who suffered severely from rheumatism, caused by the exposure incident to his profession, was cured by St. Jacobs Oil. This is no suspicion.—Boston Globe.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Be Convinced by What Others Say.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 26, 1882.

DR. CRAIG;—Dear Sir:—I take great pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received in using your Cough and Consumption Cure, and French Crown Plasters. I was completely prostrated. Had three hemorrhages in four days. Physicians' prescriptions did me no good, and they told me I had better go to the hospital. I heard of your remedy, procured some, and in three days' time was able to go to work. They operated on me like magic, and I write this that others troubled as I have been may be made well. I will cheerfully write all who may correspond with me, and tell them the good done me through the instrumentality of your remedies, and will answer all who call upon me to same effect.

WM. T. LEPINE, 85 Scio St.

DR. CHAS. CRAIG:—I hereby return my sincere thanks for the wonderful cure your Crown Plaster has perfected on me. For many years I have been a sufferer with chronic pains in the stomach, and Rheumatism, and could never receive any benefit from medical treatment. Hearing of so many cures by this invaluable remedy, I sent for two of them. I hope the whole world will reach this invaluable remedy.

Yours sincerely,

Newspaper Duns.

Here is how a brother journalist put it: We presume that some people think that newspaper men are persistant duns; let a farmer place himself in a similar business position and see if he would not do the same.

Suppose that he raises one thousand bushels of wheat, and his neighbor should come and bny a bushel, and the price was only a small sum of two dollars, or less, and the neighbor says, "I will pay you the amount in a few days." As the farmer does not want to be small about the matter, he says all right.

Another comes in the same way, until the whole of the one thousand bushels of wheat are trusted out to one thousand different persons, and not one of the purchasers concerns himself about it, for it is a small amount they owe the farmer, and of course that would not help him any.

He does not realize that the farmer has fritted away his large crop of wheat and that its value is due in a thousand little driblets, and that he is seriously embarrassed in his business because his debtors treat it as a little matter. But if all would pay him promptly, which they could do as well as not, it would be a very large amount to the farmer, and enable him to carry on his business without difficulty. The above comparison is too true of the difficulties that the newspaper man has to contend with.—Exchange.

This is to let the people know that I, Anna Maria Krider, wife of Tobias Krider, am now past seventy-four years of age. My health has been very bad for some years past; I was troubled with weakness, bad cough, dyspepsia, great debility and constipation of the bowels. I was so miserable I could hardly eat anything. I heard of Hop Bitters and was resolved to try them. I have only used three bottles, and I feel wonderfully good, well and strong again. My bowels are regular, my appetite good, and cough all gone. I feel so well that I think it my duty to let the people know, as so many knew how bad I was, and what the medicine has done for me, so they can cure themselves with it.

ANNA M. KRIDER, wife of Tobias Krider.

Perils of Ridicule.

I know of no principle which it is of more importance to fix in the minds of the young people than that of the most determined resistance to the encroachment of ridicule. Give up to the word, and to the ridicule with which the world enforces its dominion, every trifling question of manner and appearance; it is to toss courage and firmness to the winds, to combat with the mass upon such subjects as these.

But learn from the earliest days to insure your principles against the perils of ridicule; you can no more exercise your reason, if you live in the constant dread of laughter, than you can enjoy your life, if you are in the constant dread of death.

If you think it right to differ from the times, and to make a stand for any valuable point of morals do it, however rustic, however antiquated, however pedantic it may appear, do it, not for insolence, but seriously and grandly—as a man who wore a soul of his own in his bosom, and did not wait until it was breathed into him by the breath of fashioned.

Let men call you mean, it you know you are just; hypocritical, if you are honestly religious; pusillanimous, if you feel that you are firm; resistance soon converts unprincipled wit into sincere respect; and no aftertime can tear from you these feelings which every man carries with him who has made a noble and successful exertion in a virtuous cause.—Sidney Smith.

 "Magnificent promises sometimes end in paltry performances." A magnificent exception to this is found in Kidney-Wort which invariably performs even more cures than it promises. Here is a single instance: "Mother has recovered," wrote an Illinois girl to her Eastern relatives. "She took bitters for a long time but without any good. So when she heard of the virtues of Kidney-Wort she got a box and it has completely cured her liver complaint."

Little Freddie was talking to his grandma, who was something of a sceptic. "Grandma, do you belong to the Presbyterian church?" "No." "To the Baptist?" "No." "To any church?" "No." Well, grandma, don't you think it's about time you got in somewhere?"

A lady wants to know why the railroads do not provide special cars for tobacco chewers as well as for smokers. Bless your innocent heart! Tobacco chewers are not so particular as that. An ordinary passenger car is good enough for them.

A Varied Performance.

Many wonder how Parker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ.

SCROFULA. A medicine that destroys the germs of Scrofula and has the power to root it out is appreciated by the afflicted. The remarkable cures of men, women and children as described by testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla a reliable medicine containing remedial agents which eradicate Scrofula from the blood. 100 doses $1.00. Sold by all dealers. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A Fatal Mistake

would be not to take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" if you are bilious, suffering from impure blood, or fearing consumption (scrofulous disease of the lungs). Sold by all druggists.

A newspaper says: "Pennsylvania Dutch girls make good preserves," but it doesn't say how much sugar you take to a pound of Dutch girl, nor how long you let 'em boil. The recipe for preserving Dutch girls should be published.—Courier Journal.

Don't Die in the House.

Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, bed-bugs, roaches, vermin, flies, ants, insects. 15c. per box.

Some men have tact. Said a bridegroom who didn't wish either to offend his bride or die of internal disturbance: "My dear, this bread looks delicious; but it is the first you have ever made. I cannot think of eating it, but will preserve it to show to our children in after years as a sample of their mother's skill and deftness."

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Thomas Schofield, aged 91 years, walked nine miles to renew his subscription to a New London paper. It is the general impression among publishers that there are a number of subscribers who are waiting until they are 91 years old to come in and pay for their paper.

Cuticura
THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER
Resolvent
I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frigh ful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribe the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.
Reported by F. H. BROWN, ESQ., Barnwell, South Carolina.
SCROFULA SORE.
Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.
ECZEMA.
Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.
LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.
CUTICURA.

LITERARY NOTICES.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for December is on our table; as usual, ahead of all others. It is one of the most elegant issues of this, the cheapest and best of the lady's books. There are two steel-engravings, of which one, Beware, is alone worth the price of the number; a superb steel, double-size, colored fashion-plate; and two colored patterns, both exquisite, in a new style of work, Arrasen Embroidery. A bright, witty story, Prue and the Professor, admirably illustrated, leads off the stories. The number contains a Supplement, with a full-size dress-pattern, and numerous patterns in embroidery. Then there are some fifty other engravings of fashions, work-table patterns, etc. The very best stories are always to be found in PETERSON. Its regular contributors are Ann S. Stephens, Jane G. Austin, Frank Lee Benedict, Rebecca Harding Davis, and that unrivaled humorist, the author of Josiah Allen's Wife; besides hosts of others. The price of the Magazine is but Two Dollars a year. To clubs, it is astonishingly low, viz: six copies for nine dollars, with an extra copy to the person getting up the club; or seven copies for ten dollars and a half, with both an extra copy and the large-size premium steel-engraving, Christ Before Pilate, or a Photograph, or Illustrated Album, gilt, to the person getting up the club. Subscribe to no magazine till you have seen a copy of this. Specimens are sent, gratis, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address CHARLET J. PETERSON, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for December is exceedingly rich in illustrations and literary attractions. The beautiful scenery of the Columbia River is finely illustrated by CLEVELAND ROCKWELL'S pictures, the artist contributing also the descriptive article.

JOSEPH HATTON contributes a very interesting article, entitled William Black at home illustrated with pictures of Black,s London lodgings, of Paston House, his Brighton residence, and of his yacht. THOMAS W. KNOX gives a charming description of HAVRE, which is attractively illustrated by REINHART and VANDERHOOF. Mr. BISHOP concludes his articles on Southern California. Two poems by Herrick are given each with a full-page illustration by Abbey.

Colonial history receives especial attention in two interesting contributions—one, illustrated by the Rev. P. D. Hay, entitled Cameos of Colonial Carolina, the other, by Professor John Fiske, entitled New England in the Colonial Period. In fiction, Miss Woolson's new novel takes naturally the first place in the reader's interest. Black's Shandon Bells has reached a very interesting stage of developement. Among the Rose-roots, by A Working-Girl, is a very pathetic sketch, full of meaning; The Singular Vote of Aut Tilbox, by the author of Cape Cod Folks, and Tom's Moniment, by Susan Hartley Swett, are very interesting.

A scientific paper, Storing Electricity, by Professor Henry Morton, treats very clearly a subject which is just now of especial interest in connection with recent novel applications of electricity as a motive power.

The Editorial Departments are well sustained.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for December commands attention no less by the eminence of its contributors than by the value and timeliness of its table of contents. First, there is symposium on The Health of American Women, regarded from three distinct points of view: Dr. Dio Lewis considers the question as it is affected by the prevailing style of femine attire, especially by the practice of tight lacing; Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton points out the many injurious influences of social environment; and Dr. James Read Chadwick sets forth the effects of education, climate and food, and finally discusses the question whether the modification produced in the European human type by transfer to America lessens the fertility of women. Gov. Buren R. Sherman, of Iowa, writes of the Constitutional Prohibition of the liquor trafic in that State, and maintains that the measure is in entire accord with the traditions of the original settlers, and approved by men of all political parties and nationalities. General Grant, in an article entitled An Undeserved Stigma, states the facts of Gen. Fitz John Porter's case, and argues that the sentence of the court martial that cashiered him was based on a misconception of the essential circumstances. Richard A. Proctor writes of The Influence of Food on Civilization, discussing with much learning and force some of the most interesting sociological problems of the present day and of the near future. Prof. Fisher of the Yale College, in defining the causes of The Decline of Clerical Authority, holds that this decline, which affects the status of church and minister only as a part or function of the secular State, is by no means to be regretted, and that the spiritual influence of the church and its ministry is to-day greater than of old. Finally, there is a symposium upon the conditions of Success on the Stage, the contributors being six of our most prominent actors—John McCullough, Joseph Jefferson, Madame Mojeska, Lawrence Barrett, Maggie Mitchell, and William Warren.

Young Folks' Annual is a purely American book, written by American authors, and illustrated by American artists. It is simply inexhaustible in its fund of amusement and instruction for the entire household. It is just what a Young Folks' Annual ought to be.

Margaret Sidney's Ballad of the Lost Hare is perhaps the most successful book of the season. Although the first edition was nearly ten thousand, a second edition is in press.

Helen Hunt, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, and Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, will each be represented by poems in the holiday WIDE AWAKE.

St. John Harper has illustrated Tennyson's Ring Out Wild Bells, for the Christmas WIDE AWAKE.

Mrs. A. M. Diaz begins in the holiday WIDE AWAKE pictorial, a series of funny articles, which she calls The John Spicer Lectures.

COSHOCTON STATION, N. Y., Dec. 28, '78.

GENTS—A number of people had been using your Bitters here, and with marked effect. In one case a lady of over seventy years had been sick for years, and for the past ten years had not been able to be around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Her old remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, I sent to Deposit, forty-five miles, and got a bottle of Hop Bitters. It improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbors, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

Oscar Wilde signs his name without capitals. If a man is rich or famous he can do such a thing as that and simply be termed eccentric. But if a man without capital writes his name without capitals, he is thought an ignorant slouch.

Satisfaction For Ten.

Lieutenant—"John, I have noticed for some time that my shirts always come from the laundry one week too late. How is this?" John—"Excuse me, lieutenant, but your shirts are always so clean that I think it is a pity to send them to the laundry, and so I wear them another week."

How Unpleasant

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases, parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette.

Subscribers of this paper will be amply repaid by reading the advertisement of Mr. J. B. Neal, manager of The Diamond Luster Co. The Woburn Journal

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ A good many papers in this Commonwealth are just at present discussing the Senatorial question, and they are not all of one accord about it. Senator Hoar's term expires on the 4th of March next, and his successor is to be chosen by the Legislature that sits the coming winter. Mr. Hoar wants a re-election, and quite a number of the journals now canvassing the matter, believing him the best representative that the State could have in the upper branch of the National Legislature, support his claims and advocate his cause. But he will not find the way back into the Senate entirely free from obstructions. There is a good deal of opposition to his re-election in the State, and some tolerably strong arguments are brought out to show that he is not fully worthy of it. Some of the Boston papers are laboring hard for him. Heavy and lengthy leaders appear daily in his behalf. On the other hand, there are equally able journals who think, or pretend to, that Mr. Hoar has "outlived his usefulness," and if he is not willing to retire voluntarily, they propose to see what can be done about it.

There is a party down at Hingham who is suspected of having his eye on Mr. Hoar's seat, and it is hinted that considerable pipe-laying is being done to compass his election. Gov. Long is that party. He is a shrewd, keen, long-headed politician, and if he has really set his heart on the place we should consider Mr. Hoar's chances rather slim. It is talked quite freely that Gov. Butler will throw his influence, and his quite numerous Democratic friends in the Legislature their votes for Gov. Long as against Mr. Hoar, and if there is considerable truth in such statement it is more than likely that our present Governor and Congressman-elect from the Second District will be chosen our next United States Senator. Gov. Butler cherishes a strong antipathy towards our excellent Senator and it would be totally unlike him if he did not use his best endeavors to bring about his defeat. He will have a good deal of plucky Democratic backing in the House and Senate and if the fight should settle down between Gov. Long and Mr. Hoar, and Gov. Butler and his friends should side with the former, it would not require any special gifts of prophecy to fortell the result.

☞ In this issue of the JOURNAL is published the advertisement of the popular and very valuable publications of Harper & Brothers, to which the attention of our readers is directed. The present is a proper time to subscribe for good magazines and literary weeklies, and we know of none more worthy of a cordial recommendation than Harper's Magazine, Weekly, Bazaar and Young People. For terms, etc., see advertisement.

☞ We are informed by Mr. Cummings, Chairman of the Prohibitory State Central Committee, that, though published in all the Boston papers, the petition printed in the JOURNAL last week was never considered in Committee at the meeting named, or any other meeting, much less agreed on to be submitted to the next Legislature. We took it from the Boston Journal and supposed it all right, but it seems that the Committee had nothing to do with such a petition.

☞ Waltham is moving for a city charter in good earnest, and will probably get incorporated this winter. Its wide-awake papers advocate the change, and the citizens are falling into line nobly. It is the right thing to do. Woburn will soon follow suit.

— Our former townsman, Walter S. Cushing, is the head of the new firm of Cushing & Hawes, hats, caps and furnishing dealers in Lynn. And may abundant success crown his efforts to make a fortune.

— On the evening of December 6th the Burbank Relief Corps, an organization composed of ladies, will give a fair, sale, supper, etc., which, we suspect, will be one of the best and most enjoyable affairs of the season. It ought to, and doubtless will, be handsomely patronized.

— Please make note, kind reader, of the great advertisement of Mr. H. B. Wilmot in this paper, and then cut it out for reference when in the city. Of course everybody knows that "Wilmot's" is the leading clothing establishment in New England, and everybody knows too that it is worthy of the immense patronage it enjoys.

— Mr. Rufus Pickering having bravely corrected the error into which he fell respecting an item in this paper, peace is restored and harmony reigns all along the line. It was nothing we cared a fathing about, but for Mr. Pickering's peace of mind we are glad he righted the very slight wrong. He is that kind of a man.

— Mr. Daniel B. Morrill is building an ice house on Horn Pond in which to store his crops of crystal for the pleasure and comfort of his Woburn costomers next summer. The building is 60x90 feet, and will hold 25,000 tons of ice. Mr. Morrill has also bought the Seaver place on Beacon street for a residence, and a good one it is.

— Last Tuesday evening Miss Bertha Norris, daughter of Lawyer G. W. Norris, was honored with a birthday surprise party by about thirty of her young friends, who presented her with a Rogers Group in token of their esteem. The party was a very pleasant one indeed. There was plenty of good music, dancing, an elegant spread, and all the fun the company could hold.

— At least one Teacher of Music has been busy this fall; Mr. F. H. Lewis has given 545 lessons since the 13th of last September. He has also arranged a very important work for the pianoforte, consisting of Scales, Arpeggios, Octaves, etc., which he expects will be the most complete work of the kind in existence. A prominent music publisher has agreed to publish it, and Mr. Lewis will undoubtedly receive a handsome royalty.

— On the 4th proximo a Town Meeting will be held to consider and act on various and sundry propositions, or articles, of considerable importance to tax-payers. The publication of the warrant at a reasonably early date affords the voters an opportunity to duly weigh the propositions aforesaid and to decide intelligently as to what their duty is in the premises. Weigh, consider, act wisely, and have no grumbling after the business is settled.

— The Celtic Society will give their tenth annual ball in Lyceum Hall on next Wednesday eveniug, the National Orchestra to furnish the music. The purpose is to eat, dance and be jolly, the managers and chief patrons taking the ground that "a short life and a merry one" is greatly to be prefered to one of chronic "blues," melancholly, hypochondria, etc., if longer. So they are going in on that idea.

— George French, who, a couple of years ago, occupied the chair in which the writer hereof grinds out a poor but honest living, seems to "come and go like the old woman's soap." The latest intellegence per clothesline telegraph places him at Clinton, this State, where he is engaged in his old occupation of running a country paper. He appears to have enough of the "tramp printer" about him to induce short stops and frequent moves.

— The next entertainment in the Woburn Popular Lyceum Course, Elmore A. Pierce, conductor, will be given on Thursday evening, December 14th, and will consist of a grand concert by the Schubert Club of Boston, which deservedly stands in the forefront of musical organizations in this country. It will be a rare and genuine musical treat such as is seldom enjoyed by a Woburn audience. Tickets for the remaining four evenings of the course have been placed at $1.25 for any part of the hall.

— The Company expect soon to put in a telephonic trunk wire between Woburn and Lawrence or Haverhill by which the service will be increased and made more valuable to the patrons and public. The trunk line from here to Lexington has been completed, which opens up fresh fields and pastures new, telephonically speaking, and makes things sort of pleasant. Our burg is getting to be pretty well wired in already, and we can't say what it will be when the company gets through, if ever, putting in new lines.

— It gives us great pleasure to learn that the noble old elm on Market Square is not to be cut down, but, instead, to have a handsome circular stone curbing built around it. We thought our Town Fathers had too much good sense and appreciation of the beautiful to ruthlessly slay that handsome shade tree whose history is closely interwoven with that of the town since away back fifty or seventy-five years ago, and which is fondly cherished by everybody whose heart is in the right place. The authorities have done well to spare the old elm and take measures to preserve it, for which future generations of Woburnites will rise up and call them blessed.

— We are pleased to note that the Advertiser has, since election, returned to its normal condition, and is now a rational and very readable family journal. It was very very crazy for a while, but has now become calm, rational, sedate, and its editor's head appears to be as clear as a bell.

— We never wish to see weather more wintry and disagreeable than that of the six or seven days last past. Since the snow, which didn't remain on the ground long, weather has had an arctic chill and discomfort anything but satisfactory. We place the most of it to the credit of the Northern Lights, comet, meteors and electric storms. Notwithstanding which we hope for a "green Christmas."

— An old citizen and warm friend of the birds requests us to ask our people to feed the little creatures this winter generously, and to print the following stanza from Burns's "A Winter Night." Which we do with pleasure:

> Ilk happing bird, wee helpless thing,
> That in the merry months of spring,
> Delighted me to hear thee sing,
> What comes o' thee?
> Where wilt thou cov'r thy chitting wing,
> And close thy e'e?

— If we have been correctly informed, and if not, please set us right, only five dollars were contributed by the large audience in attendance on Mrs. Livermore's temperance lecture a couple of weeks or so ago. Mrs. Livermore was paid twenty-five dollars, besides other expenses. Now if people think they can carry on a successful temperance work while holding on as tightly to their purse-strings as that audience evidently did, they will wake up some morning and find themselves very much and sadly disappointed.

— Thinking it over afterwards the conclusion reached was, that in making holiness people and perfectionists mean the same thing in an item respecting meetings, in our last issue, we erred. While professing scant knowledge of what is called theology, and next to nothing of denominational history, we think we do know there is a difference between the sect known as Perfectionists and that known as Holiness, and in not making the destinction in the item referred to an unintentional injustice was done to the Christian people who had been holding the holiness meetings at rooms of the Y. M. C. A. If they noted the error and thought of it, we trust this apology will not be deemed out of place by them.

— At the kettledrum given by the Young People's Union in the Unitarian parlors on last Thursday evening week forty six members were added to the Union, which was a big haul. The society is evidently flourishing and growing in strength and usefulness. The kettledrum was a very fine affair indeed. Two hundred invitations were issued, a large proportion of which were accepted. It was quite swell in style, full evening dress being one of the requirements of the managers. The Mozart Quartette dispensed the very sweetest of music during the evening, and Lawyer Callen gave some solos to the great pleasure of the company. He is a first class vocalist. Other exercises were given, which rendered the affair, altogether, pleasant and eminently successful.

— How widespread the practice is of closing business houses on Wednesday evenings we are unable to say, although we have observed it in many localities in several of the New England States, but never in the West. It ought to be general. We can conceive of no wiser provision in the economy of nature than this time-honored custom of closing up stores, shops and offices an evening in the middle of the week and taking a rest. The duties of clerks, salesmen and employes are so onerous and wearing, as a rule, and their labors and cares are such a burden, that without a breathing spell between Monday morning and Saturday night, say, about Wednesday evening, it is difficult to conceive how they could stand it. The custom originated in the belief that everybody wanted to attend the Wednesday evening meetings, but that was so long ago that very few, if any, of the present generation are aware of the fact, or can furnish off hand a reason for the rule originally. The plea for continuing the practise is very different from that which called it into being. It is no longer necessary to close business houses to allow business people to attend the Wednesday evening meetings, they would all go under any circumstances—for they are the posts, beams and rafters of the religious structure. The custom is now adhered to for the sole benefit of clerks and employes, and for their sakes we trust the time is far distant when it will be abandoned.

— For some weeks there have been frequent displays of Northern Lights. Of late they have occurred nearly every night, sometimes lasting from early evening until day break. The exhibition on Sunday night was a strange, and awe-inspiring one. It continued all night. The northern heavens were brilliantly illuminated with lights of all hues and shades which at times extended beyond the zenith well down towards the southern horizon. They were constantly in motion, and continually changing in form and hue. In some localities they were blood red. There is something singular and strange about these displays when their frequency, duration, brilliancy, colors, etc., are considered, and they probably portend, or are the manifestations of, unusual meteorological conditions and atmospheric disturbences. Last week Thursday there prevailed all over the country an electric storm so severe that in many places telegraph wires were useless and no messages could be sent, and in other localities they could be worked only at intervals and then with no certainty of result—all being affected by the storm in a greater or less degree. This is another strange atmospheric or electric condition, the cause of which no man can give or explain. The comet too is whisking about in the southwestern heavens, disturbing early morning naps, and filling many breasts with fear and trembling. Then there are the meteoric showers announced for exhibition about this time. Now, whether all these strange and unaccountable things mean an early winding up of mundane affairs, or a very cold, an open, or just a common sort of a winter, is what we would not undertake to determine, but strongly incline in belief towards the winding up, etc.

— E. Pryor and W. F. Morton were appointed auctioneers at the meeting on Tuesday evening.

— In the Superior Court at Lowell, last Wednesday, Henry Ferrin of this town, charged with causing the death of Mrs. Raymond several months ago, was acquitted.

— Drafts for 1£ and upward on the Old Country and Passage Tickets for sale at the lowest rates by Sparrow Horton. Woburn Bookstore. 47-3

— According to the Advertiser, whose accuracy no man can dispute, snow held off this year several days later than on any of the last ten. If we hadn't seen the statement in that veracious paper we should have been willing to have been qualified in court that snow fell a month earlier this year than it has before in the present century. Such is the frailty of human memory.

— On last Friday evening, by invitation of the Fire Department of that town, the the members of Gilereast Hook and Ladder Company, 26 strong, visited Watertown, and had a real jollification. The Watertown boys laid out large for their Woburn brethren, greeted them cordially, and did the handsome thing by them. Our lads were given a very fine supper with trimmings and accompaniments, and were most courteously and generously taken care of. No. 1 think the Watertown boys are the boss.

— The Woburn Mendelssohn Club have organized for the season as follows: President—B. F. Whittemore; Secretary and Treasurer—E. E. Thompson; Director—P. E. Bancroft; Pianist—Miss Mertena L. Bancroft; Board of Directors—Abijah Thompson, F. D. Merrill, James A. Brown, Joseph H. Buck, with the President, Treasurer, and Director. The Club take up for this winter the "Cantata of Joseph." Quite a large number of ladies and gentlemen have been admitted to membership. The rehearsels of the Club are held in G. A. Hall on Tuesday evenings.

— A perusal of our item on punkin pies last week touched a sympathetic chord in the bosom of Mr. David Gray, Superintendent of the Alms-house, and being a man inclined to charity and good works we were greatly benefited in basket and store therefrom. He wouldn't have the poor but honest editor pass a cheerless and thankless Thanksgiving Day for lack of the staple material of which punkin pies are composed, so tackling up the family nag last Saturday he put about a hundred weight of as yellow and handesome punkins as ever laid out doors into the vehicle and shortly after dumped them in the kitchen of No. 25 Pleasant street, to the great delight of the presiding genius of that section of the editor's domicile. We spurn the insinuation of some of our neighbors that this was done by Mr. Gray in the way of "outside relief" and to prevent more serious drafts by the editor and family on the establishment of which he is the efficient head this winter. On the other hand, we regard the gift of the punkins in the light of a generous tribute to individual worth and journalistic merit, and as such we offer Mr. Gray our heartiest thanks for his timely and very welcome gift.

— The day of cranks is not yet done. A letter was received at the United States Marshal's Office in this city on Saturday from the Secret Service Bureau at Washington, stating that the following telegram was received at the Treasury Department on Friday, and suggesting that a Deputy be directed to meet the sender. This was the message:

> WOBURN, Mass., Nov. 17, 1882.
> Secretary of Treasury, Washington, D. C.:
> Have a United Stotes Marshal meet me at United States Hotel, Boston, between 9 and 10 A. M. on Friday or Saturday. I shall wear a dark suit, celluloid collar and red necktie. MATTHEW M. BYRNES.

Deputy Marshal Galloupe visited the hotel this morning, between the hours named, and had no difficulty in finding Mr. Byrnes, who was dressed according to programme with the exception of the addition of a pair of blue worsted gloves. He readily accompanied the Deputy to the Marshal's office, and here stated that he wished to marry, today, a beautiful young lady, whose name he gave; that the English and French Governments had made a wager of several millions of dollars as to who was the best currier in the United States, an Englishman or a Frenchman; that the former had won in a competitive contest, and that the bet having been paid, it had been deposited by an agent of the English Government in the United States Treasury to the credit of the lady whom he proposed to marry, the English Government having, in some way not disclosed, taken a great interest in her. At this point it was thought best to turn Mr. Byrnes over to the Board of Directors of Public Institutions, and on being examined by the physician of the board he was pronounced insane and sent to the hospital at South Boston.—Transcript, 18th.

— If our memory serves us honestly, and we think it does, the last snow storm of this year before that of last Friday, occurred on May 18, when there was quite a wintry fall, the remnants of which followed on the 19th. Just six months to a day, lacking one, the first snow of the latter half of the year fell, namely on Friday, November 17th. The evening of the 16th was bright, clear, starry and slightly moony, giving no sign of what was so soon to follow. When people retired to their couches the very last thing they would be likely to look for in the morning would be a snow storm. And yet when they opened their eyes after a night's peaceful slumber and sweet dreams the snow was falling rapidly; the landscape was covered with a white blanket; the northeast wind shook the windows and rattled the blinds, and the prospect was gloomy enough. Winter had come in downright earnest. The front door steps and back walk were heaped up with snow. There was work for the "shovel brigade," and still it poured down. All day long the snow fell; the cold wind whistled drearily; the trees bowed their heads under the weight of the loads they bore, and men and women put on their rubber boots. The first snow of the season is always a dreary visitation. It is unwelcome and depressing to the spirits. To jump from balmy Indian summer into snow drifts and mid-winter weather is a change that nobody takes kindly to. The winds are ten times gloomier than the same winds are later on in the season; the snow is colder; shovelling paths is more repugnant to the feelings—we are never fully prepared for the first snow storm, and it is seldom or never welcome. But then, it is all right, and the JOURNAL is not disposed to grumble.

MISS MERTENA L. BANCROFT,

— We trust it will not be forgotten by the good citizens of Woburn and the Commonwealth that next Thursday has been set apart by the President of the United States and Gov. Long of this State for a day of thanksgiving and praise, and called on that account Thanksgiving Day. As loyal and law-abiding citizens and Christian people the day should be kept in mind, and duly observed when it comes. We hope too that it will be kept in spirit as well as the letter, and that the 30th may be really, honestly and faithfully a season of thanksgiving and praise to the Great Ruler and Generous Benefactor of the universe. Experience has taught us that life is, on the whole, rough and grinding; it is a pretty tough road to travel over; it is full of hard places, and lies a good deal in the shadow. Nevertheless, there are bright spots all along its course, and there are no people in the wide world who have not something to be grateful for, to thank the good Lord and to praise Him for. We all have the pure air of heaven, the cheering sunshine, friends, home of some sort, food if poor, raiment to cover us, sympathy of kind people, for all of which we are indebted to the Father, to whom we are in duty bound to render thanksgiving and praise, not alone on one day in the year, but on all days and at all times and seasons. So, we say remember next Thursday and keep it in a spirit of gratitude, thanksgiving and praise. A good sermon will be preached in some one of our churches and it would delight the minister if there were a houseful to hear it. It is a proper thing to have—a sermon is—on Thanksgiving Day, if it is appropriate, (as they always are), full of thanksgiving, juicy, like the Thanksgiving turkey on the tables of the rich, and heartfelt. Let the people tend out on the divine services of the day, give mind and heart to the sermon, join in the singing and praying, and try to be thankful all through and through and worthy of the great and manifold blessings which they are all the time—every day and every hour—receiving from a kind and generous Hand. And on the day and evening before, remember in charity and generosity the poor of town and neighborhood.

Law and Order League.

Peliminary to holding a meeting for the organization of a branch in Woburn of the "Law and Order League of Massachusetts," on Monday last, invitations of the following tenor, were issued to about one hundred of the prominent citizens and temperance men of the town:

> DEAR SIR: At the suggestion of a few gentlemen, I assume the liberty of inviting you to attend a meeting to be holden at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, 128 Main street, at 8.45, on the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 22d, to consider the advisability of forming in Woburn, a branch of the "Law and Order League of Massachusetts." The object of this League is defined in Article II. of its Constitution, as follows: "The object of this League shall be to secure, by all proper means, the enforcement of the restrictive features of the existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic." I have fixed upon this hour for meeting, to enable gentlemen who may have other engagements for this evening, to attend, after the completion of such previous engagements. Thirty or forty minutes will suffice to decide if it be policy to attempt the organization of such a League in town, and if so, to arrange for a permanent organization at a future meeting. Should you be unable to attend, but advise for formation of such a League, would you kindly inform me of that fact by Postal card, prior to the meeting. Very truly yours, J. HENRY SYMONDS.

In pursuance to this invitation a meeting was held at the time and place designated in Capt. Symonds's call.

Between fifty and sixty of the representative citizens of Woburn, men of wealth, business and social standing, assembled in the hall at the appointed hour, and proceded to consider the affair in hand. The meeting was called to order by Capt. J. H. Symonds, on whose motion John Johnson Esq., was chosen chairman, and Charles W Bryant, secretery. Capt. Symonds read and briefly explained the By-laws of the Boston Law and Order League, and at the close of his remarks moved that it was inexpedient for the meeting to organize a League. The motion was earnestly opposed in strong, able speeches by Messrs. Benjamin Hinkley, William F. Davis, E. N. Blake, O. F. Bryant, Capt. J. Henry Symonds, and others. The remarks of each gentleman were clear, to the point, and businesslike. Dea. G. R. Gage read a letter from Rev. Daniel March D. D. who was unavoidably absent, deeply sympathizing with the movements, and other excellent letters were read from Ed. F. Johnson, Rev. George H. Young, J. Warren Johnson and several more. The adoption of the motion was advocated by V. M. Simons, whose views were entirely antagonistic to the spirit of the meeting, and after some wrangling, on a polite suggestion by Capt. Symonds that those persons not in sympathy with the objects sought to be gained by organizing against the rum traffic had better leave the hall, Mr. Simons retired. The meeting then proceeded to take steps towards organizing a League and on the vote being canvassed it was found that there were only three opposed to it. A Committee on Organization was then chosen consisting of the following gentlemen: Benjamin Hinkley, Chairman, E. D. Hayden, William Bradley, J. Henry Symonds, William F. Davis. After which the meeting, made up of earnest, clean representatives of Woburn's best class of society, and determined men withal, adjourned.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, if the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all declare that it is a medicine possessing even more than WILL we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and realize yourself how this medicine hits the right spot, and puts CONVINCE all the machinery of your body into working order.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that hit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours, J. F. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

A Vexed Clergyman.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial bottles given away at Hill's Drug Store, opposite the Common.

Attractive China and Glass.

The Boston correspondent of the Hingham Journal (than whom no one knows Boston better for a generation back) gives this well-deserved notice of a leading house which our readers will do well to visit, whether they purchase or not:—

Fifty years ago the dealers in china, glass and earthen ware made but little display of their merchandise, and the stores devoted to the sale of such goods were unattractive externally and internally. Great rough crates and jagged hogsheads blocked the passages, and heaps of musty hay littered the floors. Such old houses as Otis Norcross & Co., Hay & Atkins, Mellen & Co., and later, A. T. Hall & Co., were among the largest wholesale houses, while the retail trade was largely confined to Washington and Hanover Streets. The first house in the trade to make an artistic display in its windows of the elegant productions of foreign and domestic manufacture was the firm of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton, successors to the old house of Otis Norcross & Co. Today their spacious store is one of the most noted features of business in Boston, and the really artistic arrangement of their superb goods attracts the attention of every passer through Federal Street. The Centennial Exhibiton marked the change from white to the revival of colored patterns, and never were the dealers more taxed to keep stocks up to the demand than in this season.

Several celebrated horses have been preserved by taxidermy, says the Century. Sheridan's war horse "Rienzi," which carried him to "Winchester, twenty miles away," may be seen on Governor's Island. Sherman's famous horse, "Tecumseh," which he rode "from Atlanta to the sea," is in the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, and Gen. Robert E. Lee's war horse "Traveller," is in the museum of the Washington and Lee University, Virginia. The famous trotter "Lexington" was recently exhumed on Alexander's breeding farm in Kentucky, and remodeled from a sketch taken during life.

An entertainment is to be given under the auspices of William Parkman Lodge of Free Masons in Harmony Hall on next Tuesday evening. To make fun for the multitude the Lodge have engaged Ackerman, the humorist to give his "Mrs. Fitzgammel's Cosmopolitan Club," one of the best and most laughable things ever written. Nobody can do this rib-tickling piece like Ackerman, and I have an idea that that the hall will be crowded with people anxious to see and hear him.

Last Monday afternoon a six year old son of Eugene Ayer named Luther S. Ayer came very close to losing his life by drowning just above Whitney's Pond. While skating there he broke through the ice, but pluckily clung to the stones and grass until discovered by Mr. Greenlaugh and rescued from his dangerous situation. He made no fuss or outcry about it but grinned and held on like a little hero until the helping hand came. But it was a narrow escape for the boy.

Last Saturday morning Patrick Shea and John Maguire were arraigned in the Woburn District Court and held in $1500 each for breaking and entering the house of George F. Parker of this place: and in the the sum of $2000 each for burglarizing the residence of Mr. J. H. Tyler, both offences committed on November 1. James Doherty was also bound over. Failing to find bail they were all three sent down to wait the action of the Grand Jury. I hope this will prove a serious check to thieving in this village.

A blue jacket at Alexandria, in carrying out one of the multifarious duties which fell to Jack's lot during the Egyptian expedition was assisting to remove some trusses of hay from the quay, and, stumbling along under the weight of a small haystack, not being able to see where he was going, pushed against a commissariat officer irreproachably clad in review dress. "Who are you, and what are you doing here?" says the gentle- "Who am I?" says Jack. "Well I don't altogether know. I used to be a British sailor, but now, it strikes me, I'm turned into a commissariat mule!"

A keen-sighted writer in one of the Winchester newspapers has discovered faults and failings in the station-house of the B. & L. R. R. here, and suggests to the V. I. A. that it be looked into and reformed. He asks for more light, better seats, cleaner windows, and less dowdyism and shiftlessness all round, and thinks the V. I. A. should have the improvement looked after at once. He should bring to his mind that "corporations have no souls," are sometimes mulish, and almost always do as they please. At the same time the B. & L. Company ought to give Winchester a more cheery station.

The installation of the new pastor of the Unitarian Church, Rev. Theodore C. Williams, will take place on Friday evening November 24—the date of the issue of your paper. It is expected to be a very interesting and spiritually profitable occasion, participated in, as speakers or listeners, by a large audience. Unitarians from neighboring towns in goodly numbers are expected to be present, for whom awaits a cordial welcome from our Winchester people. The exercises will begin promptly at 7.30 o'clock p. m. and will consist of the following; Anthem, "Sing unto the Lord; Introductory prayer, by Rev. Henry H. Barber of Somerville; Response, "O, pray for the peace of Jeruselem;" Reading of the Scriptures by Prof. Geo. H. Palmer: Hymn, "The Lord is my Shepherd, to be sung by the congregation; Sermon by Rev. A Pleanant Duty.

The Indian summer's luxurious days are here tempting us from our dwellings to enjoy the richest season of the year. Among its wealth of opportunities is one little needed, but none the less a useful pleasure. The nut trees are just showering down their grateful havest for the busy squirrel, the noisy jay, and the thoughtful boy. All alike have enjoyed the grateful shade of the trees in the summer, or their fruit in autumn. Just now is the time to do for coming years that which we enjoy so well to-day. Let prudent farmer look along his pastures and fences and plant more or less of acrons and nuts useful for timber, or fruit and shade, as position may demand, for along our highways, are spaces where trees might grow and become sources of profit and beauty. Would it not be pleasant for some of the pleasure-drivers along our highways and lanes to take with them a few acorns of the strong white oak, the pretty chestnuts and shagbarks, all or any, now in season, and drop one, now and then, along the fences, or waste lands, only drawing over them a tuft of grass or leaves, and leave dame nature to take a kind care of your gifts? The lesson conveyed to those who may see you is valuable; the satisfaction coming to you in later life will repay the effort many fold, so will have become a welcome member of the "Public Improvement Society," and our highways and fields be more profitable and beautiful year by year. STONEHAM.

On Saturday evening the vote by ballot was found to have been nearly three to one in favor of accepting the Quannapowitt Company's proposition to supply the town with water. This company is of Wakefield, and proposes to lay mains and pipes in both Wakefield and Stoneham, the supply lakes being in the former town. William B. Stevens, Esq., District Attorney, is the Chairman of the Stoneham Committee. It is understood that the work is to be commenced at once.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 26, 1882.

DR. CRAIG:—Dear Sir:—I take great pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received in using your Cough and Consumption Cure, and French Crown Plasters. I was completely prostrated. Had three hemorrhages in four days. Physicians' prescriptions did me no good, and they told me I had better go to the hospital. I heard of your remedy, procured some, and in three days' time was able to go to work. They operated on me like magic, and I write this that others troubled as I have been may be made well. I will cheerfully write all who may correspond with me, and tell them the good done me through the instrumentality of your remedies, and will answer all who call upon me to same effect.

WM. T. LEPINE, 85 Scio St.

DR. CHAS. CRAIG:—I hereby return my sincere thanks for the wonderful cure your Crown Plaster has perfected on me. For many years I have been a sufferer with chronic pains in the stomach, and Rheumatism, and could never receive any benefit from medical treatment. Hearing of so many cures by this invaluable remedy, I sent for two of them. I hope the whole world will reach this invaluable remedy.

Yours sincerely,

Advice To Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms, as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by duggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on Consumption send two stamps. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

An Arkansaw politician was approached by a man, who said, "Colonel, please give me a nickel; I want to cross the river." "Haven't you got a nickel?" "No, sir." "I won't give you one. A man who hasn't a nickel is just as well off on this side of the river as on the other. Now, if you had money enough to establish yourself in business after crossing, I'd give you a nickel. As it is, you'd better stay here."

says Dr. Kaufmann's great book on Diseases, its causes and home cure with fine colored plates, is the best work ever published. A copy will be sent free to anybody who sends two 3 cent stamps to pay postage to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston Mass.

No baldheaded men is taken into the United States army as a recruit. This rule has been adopted to conciliate the friendly Indians. Nothing exasperates an Indian so much as to kill a United States soldier, and then be deprived of the satisfaction of scalping him. Such an outrage on the friendly Indians is calculated to goad them on to war. It is at the request of the Indians that the secretary of war issued the order that none but scalpable recruits should be received into the army.

 "Do not grasp at the shadow and lose the substance," Kidney-Wort is able to convert you from a shadow of your former self into the substance of established health. If you have disordered kidneys don't fail to try it.

Woman And Her Diseases

is the title of a large illustrated treatise, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., sent to any address for three stamps. It teaches successful self-treatment.

The "Tam O'Shanter" caps worn by pretty girls, are as attractive as they comfortable and, oh, they are just boss You can lay your girl's head on your shoulder and toy with her hair without having her say, "Do mind, dear; you'll smash my feathers." Boys, write them up, you'll like them and they are so comfortable to sit upon.

A Varied Performance.

Many wonder how Parker's Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it essence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable medicines which act beneficially on every diseased organ.

A small boy whose record for deportment at school had always stood at a hundred, came home one day recently with his standing reduced to ninety-eight. "What have you been doing," asked the mother. "Been doing," replied the young hopeful, "Been doing just as I have been doing all along—only the teacher caught me this time."

Catarrh.

The remarkable results in a disease so universal and with such a variety of characteristics as Catarrh, prove how effectually Hood's Sarsaparilla acting through the blood, reaches every part of the human system. A medicine, like anything else, can be fairly judged only by its results. We point with pride to the glorious record Hood's Sarsaparilla has entered upon the hearts of thousands of people it has cured of catarrh.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Cuticura

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER

Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribe the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

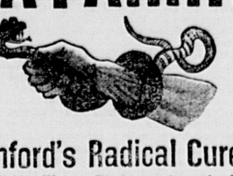

LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.

The Cuticura treatment for the cures of Skin, Scalp and Blood diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new blood purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the great skin cures. THE CENTURY

For 1882—83.

The twelfth year of this magazine—the first under the new name, and the most successful in its history, closed with the October number. The circulation has shown a large gain over that of the preceding season, and THE CENTURY begins its thirteenth year with an edition of

140,000 Copies.

A NEW NOVEL BY W. D. HOWELLS, to succeed this author's "Modern Instance." It will be an international story, entitled "A Sea Change."

LIFE IN THE THIRTEEN COLONIES, BY EDWARD EGGLESTON,—the leading historical feature of the year; to consist of a number of papers on such topics as "The Beginning of a Nation," "Social Life in the Colonies," etc., the whole forming a complete history of early life in the United States. Especial attention will be paid to accuracy of illustrations.

A NOVELETTE OF MINING LIFE, BY MARY HALLOCK FOOTE, entitled "The Led-Horse Claim," to be illustrated by the author.

THE POINT OF VIEW, BY HENRY JAMES, Jr., a series of eight letters from imaginary persons of various nationalities, criticising America, its people, society, manners, railroads, etc.

THE CHRISTIAN LEAGUE OF CONNECTICUT, by Rev. Washington Gladden. An account of practical co operation in Christian work, showing how a league was formed in a small town in Connecticut, what kinds of work it attempted, and how it spread throughout the whole State.

THE NEW ERA IN AMERICAN HOUSE-BUILDING, a series of four papers, fully illustrated, devoted to (1) City Houses, (2) Country Houses, (3) Churches, and (4) Public Buildings.

ILLUSTRATED PAPERS ON THE NATIONAL CAPITAL, including "The Capitol," "The Supreme Court," "The White House," etc.

Further work is expected from E. C. Stedman Thomas Hughes, Joel Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus"), Charles Dudley Warner, John Burroughs, E V. Smalley, H. H. Boyesen, and a long list of others Entertaining short stories and novelettes will be among the leading features of THE CENTURY, as heretofore. And the magazine will continue its advance in general excellence.

The subscription price is $4.00 a year; 35 cents a number. Subscriptions should begin with the November number, and to enable new subscribers to commence with the new series under THE CENTURY name, we make the following

LITERARY NOTICES.

The Christmas number of OUR LITTLE ONES, published by the Russell Publishing Company, Boston, is a beauty. It is one of the handsomest that has ever been printed of that very handsome children's magizine. All of the interesting stories, Christmas yarns and poetry are beautifully illustrated by artists who knew their business and did it well. Pop Corn, the frontispiece, will delight the small ones, and older people, if there is any of the juice of youth left in them, will enjoy the picture too. This is a good time to subscribe for OUR LITTLE ONES, which is only $1.50 per year.

THE YOUNG FOLK'S ANNUAL. Eight serials in one volume. Edited by Authur Gilman. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price $1.50 plain, $2.00 gilt. This elegant quarto volume contains as much solid, useful information, presented in a bright, fascinating style, as could well be crowded into so limited a space. It consists of a series of articles upon every day topics, glimpses of history, talks upon household art, studies in natural history, and sketches of adventure, by such authors as Arthur Gilman, Ernest Ingersoll, Mary Hartwell Catherwood, Amanda B. Harris, H. Butterworth, Fred A. Ober, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Charles R. Talbot, and others of equal reputation. The illustrations are many and excellent, and from original designs by Lungren, Miss Humphrey, Bodfish, E. H. Garrett' Robert Lewis, Halsall, F. T. Merrill, and "Roz." The volume is beautifully printed, and is bound in unique style in old gold covers, with title in red.

The first article in the December POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY, on the subject of scientific ethics, is the ablest and most important in the number. It is a reply by Mr. William D. Sueur, of Ottawa, Canada, to the article of Goldwin Smith entitled Have we yet found a New Basis for Morality? Cell-State is of remarkable interest as a summing up of the latest views on the subject of cell-structure and cell-action. Speculative Zoology, is a striking study of the past life of the globe. Other articles are Brain-Weight and Brain-Power, American and Foreign Asphalts, Criminality in Animals, Is Fingal's Cave Artificial? Time-Keeping in London, Musical Sensations, The Annual Growth of Trees, The Spectroscope and the Weather, The Relations to the Arts. The editorial departments in this number are quite up to their usual average of strength and excellence. New York: Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1883. This standard weekly magazine, now nearly forty years old, continues to afford the most convenient means of keeping informed in the best literature of the day, and abreast with the work of the most eminent writers. It give an amount of reading unequalled by any other periodical, and is the only satisfactorily complete compilation of a current literature which embraces more and more every year the productions of the ablest writers and thinkers in all departments of literary and scientific work. Hence its importance and value to American readers. It fills the place of many quarterly, monthly and weekly publications, and the reader is thus enabled, at a small expenditure of time and money, to keep pace with the best thought and literature of the time. The prospectus is worthy the attention of all who are selecting their periodicals for the new year. Reduced clubbing rates with other periodicals are given; and to new subscribers remitting now for the year 1883, the intervening numbers are sent gratis. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The great holiday number of ST. NICHOLAS comes laden with its seasonable freight of mirth and good cheer; and chiefest among its special features is a Christmas story entitled Grandmama's Pearls. Other timely features are, first, the bright, colored frontispiece by R. B. Birch,—a snow scene, with children, pony, and dogs, and an unmistakable Christmas flavor. Then there is a graphic account of a long dog-sledge journey on Lake Winnepeg, capitally illustrated by Farny; a Christmas poem by Nora Perry and a clever short story, The Christmas Fairies, that is a true story as well. Malcolm Donglass contributes a pathetic little Christmas tale; and two pages are given to the words and music of a simple but tuneful Christmas Carol. Besides the foregoing, there is The Story of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, a charming tale. Mary and her Garden, a six-page poem, beautifully illustrated by Alfred Brennan. An amusing Alphabet of Children, with a jingle and a picture for each letter. A quaint and highly original fairy tale, by Frank R. Stockton. J. T. Trowbridge's serial, The Tinkham Brothers' Tide-mill, is also continued. In addition to all this is an article on whale-hunting in Japan, by William Elliot Griffis, and The Discovery of the Mammoth, by C. F. Holder, with a startling picture by James C. Beard. The entire number, including the Departments, is copiously and handsomely illustrated by the cleverest designers for children.

Variety and freshness of illustrations and literary features are claimed for the December CENTURY. John Marshall the Great Chief-Justice, is the subject of the frontispiece, which with character sketches and many portraits, belongs to E. V. Smalley's paper on The Supreme Court of the United States. My adventures in Zuni is Frank H. Cushing's first paper on the remarkable tribe of Pueblo Indians with whom he has been living as an adopted chief for two years or more. William Elliot Griffis explains The Corean Origin of Japanese Art. The Taxidermal Art is the subject of several beautiful engravings of mounted birds and animals. A portrait of the late Dr. John Brown, the author of the inimatable story Rab and his Friends, which includes a portrait of the mastiff Rab, and a picture of the author's study, and some amusing grotesques by Dr. Brown, illustrate a charming paper on Rab's Friend by Andrew Lang. Something between a story and a satiric essay is Henry James, Jr.'s, Point of view, which has interest as a study of American manners. Professor Lounsbury, of Yale, returns to the Problem of Spelling Reform, and John Burroughs talks of the Hard Fare of the birds and small animals when winter is unusually severe. The Led-Horse Claim advances to a strong and novel situation in a mining experience. The author's full-page illustration of Cecil in the mine, perhaps the most striking illustration in the number. Through One Administration approaches the focal point of interest; and in The Christian League of Connecticut, the Rev. Dr. Gladden weaves practical hints for Christian co-operation into his effective New England story. The poems are by the late Sidney Lanier, Professor Henry A. Beers, Andrew B. Saxton, L. Frank Tooker; and in Brica-Brac by John Vance Cheney, J. A. Macon, H. C. Bunner, Frank D. Sherman, and others. Western Careers for Eastern Young Men is the leading article in Topics of the Time, and the other departments treat a variety of timely subjects.

Minstrel Songs. Old and New.

If one should ask "what are the most popular songs ever published?" the answer must be "just the songs contained in the neat volume now before us." Its pages are of the ordinary sheet music size, and are numerous enough to contain about all of the kind that have attained great popular favor.

"Old boys" will be delighted to hear again "Susannah," "Carry me 'long," "Camptown Races," "Rosa Lee," "Dandy Jim," "Lucy Long," "Settin' on a Rail," and "Jim Crow."

The newer nonsense favorites, as "Golden Slippers," "The Bright Light," are here; also the greater part of Foster's melodies, of which Ditson & Co. are the publishers. "Old Folks at Home," and the like, need no introduction.

Popular songs that are outside of the "minstrel" line are not forgotten. We find here "Mocking Bird," "Twinkling Stars," "Lily Dale," "The Old Home," and others. There are about one hundred songs, all provided with piano-forte accompaniment. Plenty of choruses are also given.

Choice Extracts from Druggists.

"Best kidney medicine on our shelves."

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Our best people take 'Malt Bitters.'"

A remarkable specimen of Herbert Spencer's overworked American is to be found in North Carolina. The Charlotte Observer says that Jim Archie, the dumper at a cotton press, works for both sets of hands, going on at 1 o'clock in the day and coming off at exactly noon the next day, working steadily and without a minute's rest the 23 hours through. From 12 to 1 he eats his dinner and takes a nap and this is all the rest he has. He says he once worked that way for nine days at a stretch and did not feel out of sorts. He has been at work in this way for a week and appears as fresh as the men who get twelve hours' rest.

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted in all such cases, parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette.

There is a High School Alumni Association in a certain shoe manufacturing city of Essex county, which not only permits the members to bring in the husbands or wives they have taken to themselves since graduation day, but also the lady or gentleman to whom a member may be pledged in marriage. This makes the Association extremely popular with curiously-inclined members, who attend every meeting and sociable in order to be able to report all the new engagements. It is a proceeding equal to "publishing the banns" for a young man and woman to come together to one of these engagement soirees.

Mothers Should Know It.

Yes, snails are considered a delicacy. They are called escargots on the restaurant poster, and they are served in their shells. You stick a fork in and pull them out. Sometimes they stretch, and, suddenly slipping off the fork, fly back again into the shell. A healthy snail will stretch like a bean-shooter, and is better fitted for a winter spring for a hurricane door than for an article of diet. They would also be good for the elastic for the sides of gaiters. But at the same time, they are considered a delicacy by the French, who rejoice in anything they can swallow.

"Rough on Rats."

The thing desired found at last. Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed-bugs. 15c. boxes.

They are telling in New Hampshire the story of a woman who is a member of the society with the long name, that during the last summer she has caught house flies in wire cage traps, and then relieved her conscience by taking them a couple of blocks away and setting free.

GENTS—A number of people had been using your Bitters here, and with marked effect. In one case a lady of over seventy years had been sick for years, and for the past ten years had not been able to be around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Her old remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, I sent to Deposit, forty-five miles, and got a bottle of Hop Bitters. It improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbors, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

The Woburn Journal

FRIDAY, DEC. 1, 1882.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

☞ The WOBURN JOURNAL says: "If the Republicans who voted for Morse will keep a sharp eye on that gentleman through the next Congress, it may be that they will wish they hadn't done so." If the Republicans "will wish they hadn't done so," why, they can fix that all right by not "keeping a sharp eye" on Representative Morse. The sharp eye which they kept on him during the last session induced 3,500 Republicans to vote for him this year.—Cambridge Chronicle.

Did? What did Mr. Morse do in the last session that caused so many Republicans to vote for him? What would that large body of alleged Republicans have done if Mr. Hayes had been the candidate instead of Mr. Bowman? Voted for Mr. Hayes, wouldn't they? That rather knocks your statement.

☞ Of course we haven't a word to say in favor the politics of the Boston Post, though it is the cleanest and most gentlemanly Democratic journal in New England, but as a newspaper—a live, fresh, reliable news distributer—we cannot praise it too highly. We like it first rate. It has full and complete Associated Press and special telegraphic reports every morning; its market and financial reports are full and reliable; its editorials are fresh, and if wrong-headed, readable; and there is nothing lacking in the Post to entitle it to the high rank it holds in Boston journalism. Read its prospectus in this paper.

☞ The Senatorial contest in this State daily waxes warmer. It is getting to be a mill of considerable magnitude. Mr. Hoar has the inside track and may possibly win the race, but those who are after his scalp are close to his heels. Some of the papers opposed to him are showing signs of mental disturbances which bode them no good, while the Boston Journal and some lesser lights are working like beavers for their favorite. The Journal condems the river and harbor "steal," but legs for Hoar all the same.

☞ Figuring out how Connecticut might have been carried by the Republicans at the recent election must be mighty interesting business, if not consoling. It reminds us of the wise saw which old Dr. Naudain never failed to repeat when his partner carlessly lost the trick, but we will not print it. However, it may be that some of our readers would like to know why the Republicans didn't carry Connecticut. A correspondent of the Boston Journal says it was because they did not go to town meeting and vote.

☞ We publish in this issue of our paper the prospectus of the Boston Journal, to which the attention of our readers is specially directed. The Journal is a capital newspaper. It is called by many the "Old Reliable," a name which it well deserves, for it is carefully edited in all departments, and whatever is read in its columns can be relied on. It represants the best elements in the Republican party, is full of fresh news, conducted with great ability, and ought to have on its subscription list every Republican in New England.

☞ It is reported that several more official heads at Washington are likely soon to fall into the basket, among them that of Public Printer Rounds. All this too on the recommendation of Attorney General Brewster by information from George Bliss, neither of whom is entitled to the slightest influence with President Arthur. Bliss is a fraud, and Brewster is an old grandmother, and the President would do well to give them a cold shoulder. There is likely to come out of the star route business a pretty row yet.

☞ For complicity in the star route frauds the President has removed Marshal Henry, Postmaster Ainger and Assistant Postmaster Parker of Washington, George E. Spencer, Government Director of the Union Pacific Railroad, and M. D. Helm, foreman of the Congressional Record. These men stoutly deny such complicity, but the report of Attorney General Brewster leaves no doubt of their guilty, if reliable.

☞ We are glad to have it from his own lips that Gen. Butler never changes his politics, but sometimes his friends. Not that we have the least idea of what his politics are, but a man who will stand right up to the political rack all the time, without variableness or shadow of turning, fodder or no fodder, is worthy of the highest commendation. This Gen. Butler says he has always done, and we are pleased to hear him confess it.

☞ Henry Ward Beecher is growing more and more cranky every day. His last sensation was to preach a sermon in support of the doctrine of evolution; and only a little while ago he said, that "the God depicted in the Othodox creeds was an infernal demon," and more of the same sort. He sees too plainly that there will be no escape for him in the next world unless he can get a change of venue.

— The amount of money collected at Mrs. Livermore's lecture was erroneously stated to be $5. The sum was a few pennies less than $15, so we are informed by Dea. Whitford, who should know about it if anybody does.

— If there are any of our readers who have not taken particular notice of the remarkably low prices for overcoats as published in the mammoth advertisement of the Boston Clothing Co., we wish they would do so now, or at least before they buy their winter outside garments.

— At the Annual Election of Officers Wednesday evening, November 22, Woburn Chapter Royal Arch Masons Elected Thomas S. Spurr, M. E. H. Priest; Charles A. Sweetser, E. King; J. Winslow Richardson, E. Scribe; Horace Collamore, Treasurer; Sparrow Horton, Secretary.

— The JOURNAL gets frequeat raps over its lignum vitæ knuckles for maintaining that Woburn is no worse than other towns of its size as respects rum-selling and rum-drinking. To all which we reply in the words of the great poet: "It is a mighty nasty bird that fouls its own nest."

— Mr. Howard Nason had quite a spell of under the weather last week, but has recovered. He was threatened with pneumonia, and for a day or two it was feared that the good brother might have a siege of it. During his confinement to the house brother Nute had the appearance of an unmated dove.

— The Mishawum Club will give a minstrel performance at their hall on the evening of January 10th next. The one given two years ago by the Club was a great success every way. It is proposed to improve on that one, if possible, and give the public something that they will not forget very soon.

— A good many poor hearts and empty stomachs were made to rejoice yesterday by the generosity of our village churches in distributing nice fat turkeys, according to their annual custom. The practice is what we denominate pure, unadulterated, concentrated piety—real, genuine Christianity—that ought to make skeptics ashamed of themselves.

— Russell's stiffening shop, which has been shut down for several days as is the custom at this season of the year, will start up again next Monday. The establishment is doing a large and lucrative business, and is one of the important manufactories of our town. We have seen it stated that Russell's is the largest heel-stiffening establishment in the world.

— Fr. Murphy will give a temperance address under the auspices of the St. Charles Catholic Total Abstinance Society on the evening of December 28. He is a fine lecturer and a warm friend of the temperance cause, and the announcement of his address will doubtless bring out a full house. We are glad to see the clergy taking hold of the temperance work—it means business.

— Lovers of good living had no grounds for complaint against our markets on the score of "flesh, fish and fowl," for Thanksgiving Day, for they were loaded down with splendid turkeys, chickens, ducks, and all and singular those innumerable other good things which go to make up a first-class Thanksgiving dinner. We like to look into the doors and windows of well laden markets even if we can't buy, though it is not always in the highest degree satisfying to a craving maw.

— On the evening of the 6th instant, that is to say, on next Wednesday evening, the Burbank Relief Corps will hold a grand Apron Sale, furnish a prime supper, and give an entertainment in G. A. R. Hall, to which the public are invited. The ladies of the Corps have had the affair in preparation for some time, and a leading one among them informs us that the prospect for a grand good time is flattering. Everything will be done to make it go off pleasntly for all, and we have no doubt but that there will be a large attendance, as there ought to be.

— The great scenic drama, "Romany Rye", the grandest spectacular production ever presented at the Boston Museum, is meeting with well-deserved success. The cosey auditorium is crowded at every performance, and the audiences are very enthusiastic. It promises to more than repeat there the great success of which attended its production in London and New York. There are thirty-six persons in the cast of "The Romany Rye," and it contains all the favorites of the Museum Company. Some of the most beautiful scenery and ingenious results of stage, machinery ever produced upon the stage, are displayed in this piece. The audiences become wonderfully excited over the great shipwreck scene and storm at sea, and are thoroughly interested in the thrilling play, which is acted to life by the company. It is evident that there is a long run in the future for this strongly written and effective drama.

— That we need a city government all of our citizens are aware. That it would be an improvement on our cumbersome form government all declare. Then shall we make the change? Can we do it this winter? These are questions now before us and for us to determine. The last census taken by our assessors showed that we had 11,759 population. The natural increase at this time will have carried it to rising 12,000, which will comply with the Constitution of the State. As we understand the proceedure, our selectmen can call a town meeting to vote on the question "Shall we ask for a City Charter," and vote "yes" or "no." We are of opinion that two thirds would vote "yes." Then, having made the regular application, and a committee having drawn a bill it is introduced into the Legislature, and, if passed, we should become a city. Will our people take hold of the matter and bring it before the coming session of the General Court? _

— In a couple or three weeks the ladies of the M. E. Church will give a two-days fair and entertainment for which preparations are being made.

— Rev. Mr. Keyes, who is holding a protracted meeting at Tapleyville, returned to spend his Thanksgiving at home. He will resume his labors at T. to-day.

— The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen to allow bills and perform other official business will be held on next Tuesday, it being the first Tuesday in the month.

— Mr. [illegible] was strongly endorsed by our citizens for a position in the Boston Custom House, but so far has failed to obtain one. Some how our Representative has no places for applicants just now.

— The St. Charles Dramatic Club gave a first class entertainment last evening, which was well patronized and highly appreciated. This Club has dramatic talent among the members and gives a fine entertainment.

— The second snow of the season set in on Sunday evening and continued for some hours. Not yet has snow enough fallen to make sleighing, but there is time enough between this and July to provide all of the article that anybody will want.

— Mr. Frank Pierce has built an addition to his shoe store to be occupied by workmen for manufacturing goods. It makes a snug, cozy place. He proposes to manufacture a superior article of children's shoes to be sold at comparatively low figures.

— Post master Wyman's term expires about the middle of this month, soon after which it is expected that Col. Grammer will take possession of the office, as we learn that Mr. Wyman will not seek a reappointment, having held the position long enough.

— Last Sunday afternoon Perseverence Division Sons of Temperance held a temperance meeting in Fraternity Hall, which was well attended. They have caught the spirit of the times, and propose to hold meetings every Sunday afternoon in aid of the cause.

— Our annual newspaper and magazine advertisements will nearly all be out this week, and then we will give our readers more attention. And perhaps by and by we will do better still by them. So, gentle, etc., please bear with us just this time, especially as we make up in quality what we fail to furnish in quantity.

— Last week the Superintendent of the Salem schools spent a whole day in visiting and inspecting our educational institutions, and expressed himself highly pleased with our system and proficiency of studies. Such is the excellent reputation of the Woburn schools abroad that not a week passes that Superintendents and representatives of Boston, Cambridge and other places do not visit them for the purpose of studying their machinery and gather valuable ideas. This is highly complimentary to our School Board, Superintendent and teachers, and we do not wonder that they all feel proud that the excellence of our schools attracts eminent educationists to them for purposes of inspection and examination.

— Article 6. Reference is made to a subject to which we have called public attention before; better police accomodations. We cannot comprehend that any town in the State has poorer facilities for their police than our own. We hope the Board will recommend some substantial improvements. The office and the lockup should be in the same building, the number of cells increased, better facilities for lodgers, and the heating done by steam. Should the Armory building be utilized for that purpose, these improvements could be made in connection with those demanded by the Military Company, at one and the same time. The town should make this change as soon as possible and while it could hardly be carried out this winter, an appropriation should be made so that it could be commenced early in the Spring.

— Thanksgiving Days are very apt to break in on the arrangements of weekly newspapers, and not unfrequently give their editors trouble. It is sometimes a grave question with them whether the paper shall "come out" the day before or the day after the holiday, and young ones in the business have been known to spend sleepless nights over it. Great public interests are supposed to be involved in the solution of the problem. The happiness, if not the fate, of communities hinge on it. It is a very important matter to the editors, and they think that everybody else is equally interested. Happily, the JOURNAL allows its regular publications to be interfered with by no such considerations. It marches straight on, holidays or no holidays, and "keeps step with the Union." The Advertiser may dodge the holidays as it pleases, but not so the JOURNAL—its publication cannot be delayed or hastened by any such insignificant obstacles.

— Notwithstanding the turkey, the cranberry sauce, the pumpkin pie, twisted doughnuts, and evening's merry-making, there is quite a good deal of a Sunday tone and atmosphere about Thanksgiving Day. There is a sort of subdued look, air and movement on the part of the people all through the hours, which is hightened by closed stores, silence at the manufactories, and toll of the meeting-house bell. The people don't appear to take to holidays as they do in the old countries—or perhaps we should say, they haven't yet learned how best to enjoy these brief respites from labor and days set apart for relaxation and pleasure. We are a rushing, driving, go-ahead, working people and when an occasional holiday drops in on us a good many of us don't know what to do with it. It is a sort of bore, after all, judging from the appearance of those who think they are keeping it. According to regulation rules we dress up, black our boots, put ourselves in holiday trim, and then we go about in a constrained sort of way, drop in here and there, partake of a formal noonday feast, loaf and lie around, happy when it is all over and we can go to work again. But there! it is part and parcel of life.

— The Phalanx had a target shoot at the Range last Saturday. Our reporter was not present, but word has been left at this office that some very good scores were made by the boys.

— The Board went out to the almshouse to witness the pleasure and thankfulness of the inmates over the excellent Thanksgiving dinner furnished them by master and matron Gray.

— The cause of the alarm about 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning was the burning of a tan shed at Beggs's tannery on Cross street. The loss was about $250, fully insured. The Winchester department were called out and put in appearance.

— At a meeting of the Highland Hose Company held last Tuesday evening Edward E. Fountain was elected Assistant Foreman vice L. A. Sweetser discharged; and George H. Ellison was elected Steward vice Everett L. Hayes discharged.

— Not much heavy business has been done in the District Court this week. General season of harmony and good feeling has been enjoyed. "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" still has the same old musical ring as it drops from the lips of the veteran Court Constable, Mr. Edward Simods.

— Bellevue Club is one of the principal social institutions of Woburn. It grows right along and already numbers a goodly array of our best young men. It is quite an honor to gain a membership, for though large it is select. The Club had a dance at Armory Hall last night which is said to have been a tony affair.

— In a very neat card our good friend, Mr. W. W. Hill, the popular druggist just ferninst the Common, invited the public to call and see his very large and exceedingly elegant assortment of Christmas and New Years cards on Wednesday, an opportunity which many people availed themselves of. Mr. Hill has a stock of these goods which does ones eyes to look at.

— Mr. Amos Cummings has a new card in this paper, which the ladies will do well to read. Mr. Cummings is the heaviest advertiser in Woburn by a good many dollars a year, and he says IT PAYS. Of course he don't "fool" away printer's ink but puts it "where it will do the most good," and reaps big returns. He is one of the most prosperous merchants in the county of Middlesex, and whether you believe it or not, advertising has a good deal to do with his great business success.

— It is going to take some money to carry on the work of the Temperance League with any degree of success. Men will be obliged to go down into their pockets pretty deep if the whole thing does not turn out a farce. It ought not to fail: men of means ought not to let it fail: it will not fail, in our opinion. There is work though to be done, hard work, and expenses to be met, and for these, sacrifices must be made. In fact, nothing amounts to a great deal for which sacrifices do not have to be made. Easy got, easy go. Those things that are gained by self-crucifixion are always the best. The aims of the League are meant for the improvement of the condition of our people and town: to help folks to be better, cleaner, happier. They mean protection in some degree for the weak, and to have laws observed. The members of the League see no reason why one class of society should be exempt from the pains and penalties of violated statutes, while others have to tread right up to the chalk-mark. The rumsellers asked for license to sell: they got it: now make them live right, square up to the provisions of the law and their bonds. To see that this is done is what the League is for. Make it a success—a complete one.

— The Thanksgiving Concert of the Congregational Sunday-School was held on last Sunday evening. It was a very pleasant occasion. The attendance was unusually large, albeit the evening was stormy, and the people were well paid for coming out. Mr. Superintendent Pollard conducted the exercises, which consisted of reading of the Scriptures, prayer by the pastor, congregational singing—Mr. John C. Buck, pianist—recitations, etc. The lesson was the Parable of the Sower, and the responses to questions by the Superintendent were by the younger pupils of the school chiefly. They were prompt and correct. Three little girls (Mr. Pollard taking the place of the fourth who was absent) represented the Sowers. They said their parts admirably, and at the close of each verse a choir in the parlor sang, in low, sweet tones, accompanied by an organ, a beautiful hymn, which was an exceedingly pleasant feature in the programme. Eight or ten little misses represented the Reapers, who, ranged along the front of the platform, made a pretty picture, and they did their parts well. Miss Clara Ellard gave two readings very finely indeed. The presentation of a handsome Bible to Mrs. George Thompson, a lady who has given thirty-six years to teaching in this school, by the teachers, in whose esteem, as well as that of the pupils, past and present, she stands very high, was exceedingly interesting and touching. Rev. Dr. March made the presentation in a brief speech appropriate and beautiful. The collection taken at the close of the exercises were donated to the Congregational City Mission of Boston, to be used for the poor on Thanksgiving Day.

MISS MERTENA L. BANCROFT,

TEACHER OF

Piano-forte and Harmony.

Residence,—Franklin Street, Woburn. 37-tf

— Recently the study of Rev. Mr. March in the Congregational church has been fitted up in such style that we doubt if there is a parlor in Woburn that can eclipse it in elegance and beauty of adornment. On the walls has been placed a paper of cheerful, pleasant color, at some points approaching the hue of a cloudless sky, along the top of which is a wide frieze of oriental design in dark rich shades, while the ceiling is beautifully frescoed in tints that blend and harmonize with the general coloring of the large, handsome room. The papering, frescoing, etc., was done by Mr. Gardiner of Stoneham, whose work in the pastor's study shows that he is a master hand with the pencil and brush. A very handsome brass chandelier is hung from the centre-piece on the ceiling, and bright brass rods and rings hold the fine, full-length curtains with which the three windows are shaded. A solid, black-walnut book-case, with a closet at one end and a clothes-press at the other, runs the whole length of one side of the room, and is filled with books. This is an elegant piece of furniture and must have cost a good deal of money. A large square mirror with semi-oval top stands on the mantle-piece, while the walls are almost literally covered with beautiful pictures, many of which were brought from foreign lands by Dr. March. Several eastern rugs are spread over the cheerful looking carpet, which add to the home charm of this pleasantly and beautifully furnished study. Chairs, lounge, tables, desks, etc., constitute its furniture, while ornamented vases, jars, boxes, and other rare things which the Doctor picked up in Palestine and other countries are tastefully arranged on shelves, stands, etc. Altogether the room and its farnishings form a handsome picture—one that a person of taste and cultivated intellect, such as its occupant possesses, must love and greatly enjoy.

The Gallery Clock in the First Congregational Church.

Attendants on the First Congregational Church may have noticed the clock above the gallery with the inscription, "Presented by Isaac Warren, Esq." The following letter from the archives of our public library, written more than half a century ago, explains the reason of this inscription:

To the First Church and Parish in Woburn:—The clock accompanying this is presented by the subscriber: If agreeable to the church and society, to be placed in your meeting-house, under the care and direction of the Parish committee, together with the present minister and officers of the church and their successors: With the most sincere and ardent wishes for the increase, welfare and prosperity of your church and society, and that this clock may not only be as a monitor to point out the importance of improving the precious fleeting moments as they pass, but may it be a lasting pledge of your future union, peace and harmony, and perpetual establishment of those precious, important, and evangelical truths of the gospel. With these sentiments you will please to accept it from

Stylographic Pens.

Mr. C. W. Livermore introduced to the notice of the public the first Stylographic Pen ever put on the market, and invented and applied the word "Stylographic" to this class of writing instrument. For years the people were content to pay $3.00 for a genuine Livermore Pen, and the same pens are yet doing good service. The success of these pens led unscrupulous persons to get up inferior imitations, which they offered at such low prices that many persons not understanding the difference, were induced to buy them. The Livermore Company therefore, cut down the price of their improved Stylographic Pens to $2.00 each, to give everybody a chance to have the best article of the kind. You can buy them for that money by remitting the amount to the Stylographic Pen Co., 290 Washington Street Boston; the pen together with a package of superior ink will be sent by return mail, and the money will be at once refunded if they do not prove to be perfect and satisfactory in every respect. There is nothing more appropriate than a Stylographic, as a gift to a lady or gentleman. The Stylographic Pen Co., is the largest concern of the kind in the world, with branches at New York, Chicago, and London, Eng.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend, if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case where our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that we might get before the people a fractional part of the confidence that is expressed to us every day in this medicine by those who have carefully noted (without prejudice) its effects upon the blood and through that upon the whole system, stimulating all the functions of the body to perform the duties nature requires of them. Try a bottle and satisfy yourself.

Cold Hands and Feet.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she had very little appetite; could take no long walks, and her face was badly broken out with a humor. She was low-spirited; troubled with cold hands and feet; her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve; and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits, is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

A. L. HINCKLEY,

Golden Floral.

Messrs. Lee & Shepard have this season published eight of their Popular Household Favorites in what they happily term the "Golden Floral" style,—a style which is not only entirely novel in character, but immensely captivating to the eye. Nothing like it has ever before been attempted by the book-publishers; and it is not too much to say that this attempt—a perfect success as it would seem—will henceforth have many imitators. The purpose of the publishers in bringing out this new style of binding, was to combine the attractions of a favorite illustrated poem with the popular charms of a Christmas card. Not a cheap, inartistic Christmas card, by any means, but one of the highest grade and thoroughly refined and tasteful in desigh, was what was demanded of the artists. The plan, as developed in full, cannot fail to delight the most exacting person. Each book has a cover, upon which is wrought the most exquisite floral designs upon a gold ground and each one of these designs has been chosen so as to be in perfect harmony and symbolism with the spirit of the poem. The edges of the cover are ornamented with heavy silk fringe, thus enhancing the beauty and finish of the book. As a souvenir for holidays, birthdays, Easter, or weddings, a single volume, or, better a full set, of the Golden Floral series, is certainly the most chaste, elegant and unique.

NORTH WOBURN.

The fair held by the enterprising ladies of the Unitarian society in the chapel on last week Thursday was a grand success. No previous fair has been so satisfactory in its results. The ladies started out for a good thing and they had it. The net receipts were rising $100, and the pleasure was worth a good deal more. Mrs. Dr. Clough of the Centre drew a $20 quilt, and Capt. J. P. Crane also of the Centre drew a valuable prize. The ladies feel very grateful for the assistance rendered them by their Centre friends, and return hearty thanks for the same.

Hood's Sarsaparilla gives an appetite and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body. Try a bottle and realize it.

Thanksgiving Day.

The day was clear, bright and cheery. There was about the usual Thanksgiving attendance at the M. E. Church, where W. M. Simons preached the annual sermon. Several good entertainments were given to full houses. The streets were generally deserted. A good many people went into the city. On the whole it was a pretty happy day.

WINCHESTER.

Mrs. W. E. Plummer has three cups and saucers that have been in the family 250 years, so the Star says.

On and after Monday next the daily sessions of the High School will begin at 8.30 o'clock in the morning, and close for the day at 1.30 P. M.

One evening last week the School Board, Superintendent and teachers held a meeting at Mrs. Eleanor Huses's and discussed educational matters. I suspect it was a profitable gathering.

Quite a good many cases of diphtheria are reported in town, some quite severe ones. The season so far has been rather favorable for such diseases. I hear of no deaths however from it.

Last Sunday evening the M. E. Sunday school gave their annual Thanksgiving concert, and it was a good one. Mr. Superintendant W. F. Fitch directed and managed matters admirably. The house was beautifully decorated, and the exercises were of the most interesting character.

The report is that the water hasn't been so low in the reservoir this season as at the present time. It has been a long time since there was a rainfall of any account, and unless we have some soakers before the ground freezes up for good lumbering operations in this neighborhood will be light.

The V. I. A. "mean business." Meetings will be held at short intervals this winter at which lectures will be given, discussions held, and work laid out for the coming season. The Association is ably officered, and a commendable interest is taken in its success by our citizens.

Rev. Fr. J. P. Daley, who has taken charge of the Catholic Church here, is a lucky man, or a more than ordinarily worthy one. Lately his old congregation of the Church of St. Frances de Sales at Boston Highlands presented him with $1200 clean cash as a parting token of their high esteem of his character. He is an excellent man, forceable preacher, and well deserved the handsome gift from his old parishioners.

The meetings under the auspices of the Reform Club in Livingstone Hall on Sunday afternoons at ½ to 4 o'clock creating a deeper interest, unusual efforts are being made to obtain good speakers and to make the meetings attractive. Next Sunday the exercises will be varied somewhat and of more than usual interest. Miss Carrie Roach the talented Elocutionist will read several temperance selections. She comes highly recommended and volunteers her service for the good of the cause. Mrs. Bailey will sing one or two solos and lead the singing.

On Thursday evening of last week occurred the forty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. Sumner Richardson, which was made the occasion of a pleasant celebration and party by his numerous friends in this place. He was generously remembered by them in the shape of substantial gifts, which were gratefully received and appreciated. Mr. Richardson is one of our oldest and most respected citizens, and his wife shares fully the esteem in which he is held. A man of pronounced views and fearless in maintaining them, we have men who do not always "hitch" with him; but he is honest, sincere and well-meaning, and for these virtues everyone gives him credit. The respect in which he is held by this community was fully demonstrated by the wedding anniversary last week.

The ordination of Theodore C. Williams of the Unitarian Church took place as per announcement in the JOURNAL last week, on Friday evening, November 24. The church was profusely and beautifully decorated, the pulpit being heaped up and surrounded with potted plants, flowers, and vines. Baskets of flowers hung from the chandeliers, and the Metcalf memorial tablet was handsomely decorated. There was a very large attendance, the house being filled to its utmost capacity. The religious exercises were very interesting and the music excellent. Mr. Williams is a talented gentleman, a graduate of Harvard College, class of '76, and of Harvard Divinity school Class of '82. He has supplied the church here for the last six months with great acceptance, and I suspect his pastorate in Winchester will be a long one.

The Star appears to be considerably stirred up over some sportive remarks of mine concerning its politics, which I regret. I had supposed the editor was less touchy on these little, harmless and good natured hints than he appears to be, and knowing that he is perfectly competent to return as good as he receives I have not thought it necessary to trim down and smooth off my items concerning the Star to suit nerves of more than ordinary delicacy. When he says the "attacks of the JOURNAL are becoming too personal and mean" etc., the good editor speaks without the book. He may ransack the Winchester column of the JOURNAL from a to izzard and fail to find a single mean or personal item concerning him. One good reason for this is, that there is nothing in the editor's character or conduct that affords grounds for adverse criticism; secondly, I have no taste for "personal journalism"; and lastly, the JOURNAL wouldn't print my "personal and mean" effusions if I should write any. I am charitable enough to believe that, when the editor of the Star penned the ill-natured paragraph referred to things were not running smoothly, as is often the case in the office of a country paper, and knowing that the shoulders of the JOURNAL and its Winchester reporter were broad, and that both were good natured, he concluded to make them the scape-goats of his vexed and temporarily soured emotions. At the same time I beg Editor Fultz to remember that perfection is not one of the attributes of poor human nature.

ENTERTAINMENT.—Next Tuesday evening, December 5, the Literary Union will give a choice literary entertainment devoted to the life and works of the poet Whittier. As the present object of this society is to purchase a piano for the Sunday school, it is hoped that the affair will be well patronized. The price of admission will be ten cents, and after the exercises, cake, ice cream, and coffee will be served in the supper room. The entertainment will be in the Town Hall, doors open at 7 o'clock, entertainment promptly at half past seven.

SCHOOLS.—The schools open Monday, after a week's vacation, for the winter term. The East school has been thoroughly renovated and repaired.

A Hotel Man's Luck.

Mr. J. G. Tyler, chief clerk at the Union Depot Hotel, Ogden, had rheumatism in the muscles of the chest and left shoulder. By By applying the Great German Remedy three days he realized complete restoration, and he is of the opinion that there is nothing equal to the St. Jacobs Oil for pain. The Great German Remedy is also a specific for burns and sprains.—Salt Lake (Utah) Tribune.

A Good Offer.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company has just issued an illustrated treatise, "The Heart of the Continent," describing the wonderful growth of the Six Great States. The book is beautifully printed, and numerous engravings of high merit adorn its pager. Any one sending their name and address with two three cent postage stamps will receive a copy by return mail, by applying to PERCIVAL LOWELL, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Illinois.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Health of Connecticut.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 10th.—The monthly report of the State Board of Health, published on the 7th inst., says long diseases hold the front rank. Consumption has been as fatal as lung fever, and there has been a large per centage of deaths from bronchitis and congestion of the lungs. A peculiar spasmodic cough has also been very common, not distinctive enough to be called whooping cough, and attacking adults as well as children. Neuralgia and rheumatism are reported as being prevalent and exceedingly obstinate and unyielding to treatment. Since the introduction into our section of the Craig's cough and consumption cure, pulmonary diseases are rapidly disappearing, and now that the excellencies as a curative power of the French crown plaster is being generally known, neuralgia and rheumatism are complaints not often heard of.

Willing to Come Down a Little.

In riding over to Lost Mountain from Marietta I came across a young man who was digging post holes for a barbed wire fence, and when I told him what I wanted, he replied:

"I'll go with you. I was in that fort myself, and I kin point out every position."

When we reached the ground he began telling where this and that regiment was stationed, and finally he halted beside a huge boulder and said:

"Right here, stranger, was where I squatted for four hours. I rested my gun right thar on that ledge, and I reckon I killed exactly twenty-eight Yanks that day."

"No!"

"Solemn fact, and I know a dozen men who'll swear to it."

"Let's see? This battle was fought in 1864?"

"K'rect you are."

"That's about eighteen years ago?"

"Jist about."

"And you are about twenty-five years old?"

"I was twenty-five this spring."

Then I looked at him for a long time, but he never winced. When we were going home, and after a long period of silence he suddenly remarked:

"Stranger, don't you believe I was thar?"

"Perhaps you were, but you see you were not quite seven years old on the day of that fight."

"That's what I've been figuring on," he continued in a very serious voice, "and I'll tell you what I'm willing to do."

"Well?"

"I'll call it twenty-four instead of twenty-eight dead Yanks in front of my position! That's fair, isn't it?"

I told him that nothing could be more liberal, and cordial relations were at once re-established.—Detroit Free Press.

Rumor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases, with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statement of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

"I believe you're a fool, John," testily exclaimed Mrs. Miggs, as her husband unwittingly presented her the hot end of the potato dish, which she promptly dropped and broke. "Yes," he added resignedly, "that's what the clerk told me when I went to take out my marriage licence."

says Dr. Kaufmann's great book on Diseases, its causes and home cure with fine colored plates, is the best work ever published. A copy will be sent free to anybody who sends two 3 cent stamps to pay postage to A. P. Ordway & Co., Boston Mass.

The Duchesss of Talleyrand is a famous sport woman. She dresses in plain woolen stuffs, and, with a small felt hat and a waterproof, takes her gun under her arm, and all by herself, marches over hill and dale, climbing fences and jumping ditches in quest of game.

Heartily Recommended.

Don't condemn a good thing because you have been deceived by worthless nostrums. Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured many in this section of nervous disorders, and we recommend it heartily to such sufferers.—News.

The neighbors of a Pine street woman were unable to ascertain how she sprained her wrist, until the six-year-old son said: "There was a noise in the house last night, so pap thought it was burglars, and he kept mam in front of him, and she fell down stairs."

A young lady in Missouri, who is engaged to be married, has a collection of 17,000 spools. It is evident that she has no intent of splitting her own kindling wood after she is married.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

"Little thanks are due to him who only gives away what is of no use to himself." The thanks of invalids the world over are being showered on the inventor of Kidney-Wort, for it is giving health to all. Kidney-Wort moves the bowels regularly, cleanses the blood, and radically cures kidney disease, gravel, piles, bilious headache and pains which are caused by disordered liver and kidneys. Thousands have been cured—why should you not try it.

Unity of action, concord, sympathy and goodfellowship are admirable traits in human character; but they will not heal our physical infirmities. Catarrh, for example, stubbornly resists their effects or influence. In fact this malady withstands all of its would-be destroyers, except Ely's Cream Balm. "Solitary and alone" this Balm stands as the only recognized and infallible specific for Catarrh. "For fifteen years," says J. B. Chase, St. Denis Hotel, B'wy. and 11th St., N. Y., "I have been greatly annoyed with a disgusting catarrh. My sense of smell, not to mention other troubles, became much impaired. A thorough use of Ely's Cream Balm has cured me of these troubles." It is not a liquid or snuff, and is easily applied. Only 50 cents a package.

The Scope and Aim of the Journal.

During its nearly fifty years of existence The Journal has ministered to the tastes and wants of a constantly increasing constituency, which, although it embraces subscribers in all parts of the Union, is chiefly centred in the New England States. As a distinctively New England newspaper in tone and spirit, in the scope of its intelligence and in the representation and championship of those interests in which the people of New England are most concerned, it challenges comparison with any other paper. The best test of its success and popularity—better even than the increase in its circulation, is the disposition of those who have once become subscribers, to continue so: and it is one of the most agreeable and encouraging facts to those who have it in charge that it is still a welcome visitor in many homes into which it has found entrance from its early issues. The last half century has witnessed a great changes in newspaper methods and agencies, and by comparison with its present development, American journalism might almost be said to have been in its infancy when the publication of The Journal was begun. Steam, the telegraph and the cable have wrought great transformations, and newspaper enterprise now encircles the globe, presenting the reader of to-day with an epitome of yesterday's happenings in every part of the world. With all these changes and improvements The Journal has kept pace; it has added new features and has steadily enlarged its facilities; but through all changes it has retained those distinctive characteristics which have won and kept the regard of its readers. It is therefore better equipped than ever before to meet the demands of its constituency.

The Special Qualities.

The special aim of The Journal is to embrace within its thirty-six columns a sufficient account of all the events of the week at home and abroad to satisfy the needs of the average New England reader. Its presentation of news will be so ample and comprehensive that readers who look to it as their chief or only source of information concerning current events will ye able to rely upon its accuracy, and to be sure that no matters of importance can escape their notice. It will endeavor to solve the by no means easy problem of compressing a week's news into a single paper, not by capricious selections and rejection of material, but by careful condensation and arrangement. Bearing in mind in particular the needs of busy men and women, who desire to have the most information conveyed in the most compact form, it will aim at variety and breadth rather than expansion in any particular direction, and will endeavor to perform for its readers the important service of sifting and grouping those matters in which they are likely to feel an interest. In all this, particular attention will be given to

New England Affairs.

The facilities afforded in this direction by the dispatches of the Associated Press are supplemented and extended by the services of a large number of special correspondents and reporters at the most important points, who will report matters of local interest, by telegraph and mail. Their dispatches and letters, with the gleanings from our exchanges, will make each weekly issue in particular an epitome of New England news. Arrangements have been recently made, of which our readers for the coming year will have the benefit, for the further enlargement of these facilities.

Agricultural Affairs

Will receive, as heretofore, a large share of attention. The valuable and widely-read contributions of the "Young Farmer," whose hints and suggestions have been a source of profit to hundreds of practical farmers, will be continued; and the markets for produce in Boston, and the condition of the crops and markets in all parts of the country will be reported.

Special Political Interest.

It will witness the closing session of the present Congress, and the opening session of the new one. Matters of grave public concern, such as the revision of the tariff, the adoption of new provisions for regulating the count of the electoral vote, the question of the silver coinage, the question of reforms in the civil service, the forms of supplementary legislation for the enforcement of the laws against polygamy, and the question of extending national aid to education will be discussed in Congress; and their discussion together with the more than usual interest attending the present relations to the great political parties, will draw general attention to Washington, and will make it desirable for the reader to have the fullest and freshest advices therefrom. The needs of the readers of the WEEKLY JOURNAL in this direction will be fully supplied by our correspondents, "Perley" and "Webb," and their assistants, whose special dispatches will be supplemented by the regular press dispatches and by "Perley's" letters, describing the social aspects of Washington life.

The Political Position of the Journal.

The Journal is a Republican newspaper; it believes in Republican principles, and does not regard the mission of the Republican party as ended. It is sympathy with the most liberal and progressive tendencies in the party, and will lend its influence to the championship of those reforms which the best men of all parties are rapidly coming to regard as essential. The Journal is loyal to Republican principles, but it is not subservient to any dictation, and it will never hesitate to criticise measures and tendencies, whatever the party strength behind them, which it regards as harmful. Those who are familiar with its course in the past do not need to be reminded of its policy either as regards the general advocacy of Republican principles, or as to its fredom of utterance, when criticisms is called for. To the discussion of all questions, political and other, which demand consideration, The Journal will bring candor, information and a readiness to give both sides a fair hearing. Moral and reformatory measures will be discussed with an intelligent sympathy, business matters will be regularly presented, and in general, the editorial columns will be varied, timely and progressive.

Events of interest as regards

Foreign Affairs

Will be reported in dispatches, and more fully represented and discussed in the very readable and entertaining letters of Mr. Edward King, who is recognized and widely-quoted authority on contemporary affairs abroad.

The Special Features

Which have been so acceptable in the past will be during the coming year. What The Journal has been it will continue to be, every effort that is possible being made to secure for it the continued support of the reading and thinking men and women of New England.

L. HOUGHTON ALLEN,
UNDERTAKER.
Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.
All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.
Hearses, Carriages, and Flowers furnished at short notice and at low prices. At the old stand, No. 8 Montvale Avenue, near corner of Main street.

The Woburn Journal

LITERARY NOTICES.

The table of contents of the December number of GOLDEN DAYS gives a long list of very interesting articles, many of which are beautifully illustrated by competent artists. This excellent magazine "for boys and gilrs" is of large size, 62 pages, with handsome covers, and is furnished at the low price of $3 a year. GOLDEN DAYS is unquestionably one of the very best of our juvenile publications, its contents being pure, good and improving to the young mind, and always bright and interesting. It is strongly endorsed by the secular and religious press, and both clergymen and laymen praise it without stint. We advise those of our patrons who would subscribe for a first class youth's magazine to send for GOLDEN DAYS. James Elverson, Publisher, Philadelphia.

The December WIDE AWAKE is the holiday issue, and is probably the largest and finest single number of a young folks' magazine ever published; it appears in a beautiful cover printed in colors, and its page of contents gives a tempting array of titles, and an impressive list of authors. Two frontispieces open the number: Lost on the way to Grandpa's, by George F. Barnes, and The Mother and the Child, from Bourgereau's painting, with a border designed by E. H. Garrett, and illustrating Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's poem is followed by one from Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, The Little Mud Sparrows. Celia Thaxter and Helen Hunt are also represented by poems with beautiful illustrations. Father on is an illustrated group of poems contributed by English poets: A Christmas Carol, by Christina Rosetti, Wings, by Dinah Mulock Craik, The Conquest of Fairyland, by A. Mary F. Robinson, and Garden Fairies, by Philip Bourke Marston. There is also a Russian Folk-Lore ballad, by Mrs. Craigin, with seventeen illustrations by Mrs. McDermott. Two serials are begun: The Silver City, by Fred A. Ober, which promises to be a realistic romance of the best sort, and Old Caravan Days, by Mrs. Catherwood, a story of the old Turnpike times and the white tent-wagons. Mrs. Diaz also begins an amusing series, The John Spicer Lectures. Besides Mr. Gilman's Dictionary paper, and Mr. Hale's To-Day paper, there are two delightful and very pictorial articles: Our Dogs at Eversley, in which Rose Kingsley, the daughter of Charles Kingsley, gives amusing reminiscences of her father's famous dogs, and Old Fashioned Cookery, by Luthera Whitney, with twelve drawings. After this the number is crammed like a pudding with plums, with sparkling short stories from the best story writers in America: there is A Case of Coincidence, by Rose Terry Cooke, and Dolly's Christmas Kettledrum, by Nora Perry, and Nelly's Heroics, by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, and How Sin Hop went Ashore, by John Coryell, and Two Modern Little Princes, by Margaret Sidney, and The Isle of Peace, by Eliot McCormick, A Fortunate Misfortune, by Susan Coolidge, &c., &c. One hundred and fifty original engravings illuminate the number, which will be long remembered and long preserved.

Only $2.50 a year. 25 cents a number. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Franklin Street, Boston, Mass.

KITTY AND ALMOST.

Kitty had a birthday present which pleased her very much indeed. What do you think it was? A sandal-wood work-box from Uncle Curtis, with scissors, thimble, needles, and everything it was proper for a complete work-box to have. It was a spur to Kitty's love of sewing.

She did not like the needle and thread before; now she did. And Kitty undertook to hem a dozen towels. A dozen towels is not a pile, to be sure, but she well knew that it was only a stitch at a time, and a stitch at a time is perfectly within the compass of a small child to do. Kitty was on the first towel, doing it all herself, even to turning down the hem, and had hemmed half of one end when she took it to her papa.

"Papa," she asked, "is not that hem even?"

Papa took his eyes from the newspaper, put them on the hem, then looked at his little Kitty as much as to say, "Do you think it is, Kitty?"

"Don't you think it is almost even?" asked Kitty, guessing his meaning and blushing.

"What is almost even?" asked Kitty with a look of surprise.

"Yes," answered he.

"It is uneven," replied Kitty.

"Yes," replied papa, "almost even is uneven. The hem is uneven."

"Then it must be picked out and done over," said Kitty with a disappointed hitch; "I want to do it all right."

"Of course," replied her father.

"Papa is setting himself up to be a great judge of hems," thought Kitty inside. She did not think her mother was so exact. However, since she had asked him she could not do less than to act on his judgment. Kitty went to her window seat, picked out the stitches, which nobody allows is pleasant work, and carefully began the second time. She did not dare to go beyond two stitches before coming to show it. Her father took the towel and examined the hem.

"This is even," he said, "the stitches are in a straight line, the work is done right."

And Kitty, I am sure, was more pleased than if she had succeeded at first, and much more than if her father had thoughtlessly said, "Very well," when it was done ill.

"Kitty," said papa, taking her small hand in his, "there is a straight line running through life; on one side of it is a wrong side, on the other is the right, and everything is on one side or the other. There is no such thing as almost right. Almost right is always wrong, almost good is always bad, almost true is always untrue, a lie, as almost even is uneven."

"Yes, papa," Kitty added "and an almost perfect lesson is an imperfect lesson; I told the girl so. Because if you miss once you lose your place."

"Exactly so," said papa; "and as God is a truth-loving God He likes to have things called by their right names. He wants us to speak the truth and see the truth, and in order to do so we must be exact in our words and expressions."

"Best kidney medicine on our shelves."
"Our lady customers highly praise them."
"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

A party of drunken cowboys fired upon a train on the Atchison and Santa Fe road, breaking eight windows in one car seventeen in the sleeper, and five in the special car in which Assistant General Supt. W. S. Mellon was with a party of friends. The passengers only escaped with their lives by lying down upon the floor of the cars. This is "personal liberty." How delightful it will be in this country when the "Personal Liberty League" reigns supreme!

Change of Mind.

I declined to insert your advertisement of Hop Bitters last year because I then thought they might not be promotive of the cause of Temperance, but find they are, and a very valuable medicine, myself and wife having been greatly benefitted by them, and I take great pleasure in making them known.

Drought and Prayer in 1676.

William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass., in his "History of the Indian Wars," printed in 1677, gives the following quaint story of a drought in Connecticut in August, 1677. The writer of the narrative was Mr. Fitch, the minister of Norwich;—

"Concerning the drought: the true Narrative of the Providence is this: in August last, such was the Want of Rain that the Indian Corn was not only dried and parched up, but the Apple Trees Withered, the Fruit and Leaves fell off as in autumn and some Trees seemed to be Dead with the Drought: the Indians came in town and did Lament their Want of Rain and that their Pawawes could get none in their Way of Worship, desiring me that I would seek to God for Rain; I appointed a Fast-day for that Purpose. The day being come, it proved a clear Day without any Clouds until nigh Sun-setting, when we came from the Meeting, and then some Clouds arose, the next Day remaining cloudy, then Vncas with many Indians came to my home. Vncas lamented there was such want of Rain; I asked whether if God would send us rain, he would not attribute it to the Pawawes. He answered, No, for they had done their Uttermost, and all in Vain; I replied, if you will declare it before all these Indians you shall see what God will do for us; For although this year he hath shown his anger against the English, and not only against the Indians, yet he hath begun to save us; and I have found by Experience twice in the like case, where we sought him by Fasting and Prayer he hath given us Rain and never denied us. Then Vncas made a great Speech to the Indians (which were many) confessing that if God should send Rain, it could not be ascribed to their Pawawing, but must be acknowledged to be answer to our Prayers. This day the Clouds spread more! and the next Day there was such a Plenty of Rain that our River rose more than two Foot in Height."

How I Felt.

Why two years ago I was just about crazy and no wonder my wife and children were afraid of me. You just want to suffer with neuralgia with no relief as I did until I used Sulphur Bitters. They cured me and now my wife says I am as meek as a lamb.—Robert Davis, American House, Boston.

Couldn't Beat 'Em.

An Englishman, stopping at a country inn in one of the Eastern States, was continually boasting about the superiority of everything in England, and depreciating the productions of America. The landlord, as may be surmised, did not relish this, and therefore thought of a plan to get even with the boaster. Procuriug six fine, healthy crabs, he poured them into the Englishman's bed. Telling his guest that his bed was ready, he lighted a candle and escorted him up stairs. Upon reaching the door he managed to put out the light. Of course it did not make much difference to the Englishman, so he undressed himself and went to bed. Immediately he gave a terrific yell, and cried:

The landlord who was outside the door, and who had lit the candle, came and looked into the bed and coolly said

"Them's bedbugs! Can you beat them in England?"

It is a singular freak of nature that no matter how long the sermon, the preacher never gets tired, whereas the congregation wax awfully weary.

An exchange asks; "What is it that makes girls so attractive?" It is the money their fathers are supposed to have.

"I never betrayed a friend's confidence," said one lady to another, by way of insinuation. "Very true," was the answer, "for you were never entrusted with it."

MEETING OF CONGRESS.

Congress reassembled last Monday with nearly all the members of each house present and ready for business. With the exception of the usual message to the President announcing that Congress was again ready for his message there was little or nothing to distinguish the opening from that of any other day. Routine business was soon and quietly despatched, and the work of the session began. It is said that there are several important measures that will be likely to receive attention during the winter, but a very large amount of legislation is not looked for. The Christmas holidays, with getting over them, will take quite a slice out of the limited time in which to work; and then many members are serving their last term, who will want to get easily and pleasantly through, and will be less zealous for the promotion of the interests of the dear people than they would have been had the elections in their districts gone differently. These will not help along the work to any great extent, and on the whole a more than ordinarily profitable session need not be expected.

The President sent in his message which was read and listened to with due attention. It is quite long, and treats of many subjects, some of which are of importance to the public. Looking it over carefully and sifting it well we find the principal points to be, a strong recommendation for the reduction of taxation, in which the people will agree with him; a reduction of letter postage is advised, another point on which he will find himself in accord with the public; a proposition to aid internal improvements by novel methods, which may or may not strike a responding chord in the public breast; a discussion of the evils to be found in our civil service, concerning which sound doctrines are advanced and good reasoning employed. The message says our relations with foreign countries are satisfactory, though the policy adopted for mediation in South America has not been so successful as might have been desired. A good many other topics are discussed in the document, a large share of which are of minor importance, though such as naturally come within the line of a state communication to Congress. The recommendations are generally wise and statesmanlike, and the message, altogether, a good one.

The reports of the heads of Departments were next considered. That of the Secretary of the Treasury is very long, and to one not particularly fond of figures and tabulated statements rather tedious. Only an expert accountant is able to master such a report. The Postmaster General makes a strong plea for the postal telegraph system, but has little to offer on the reduction of postage. The other reports are not of startling interest to the general reader.

☞ We publish this week the annual announcement of the New York Observer, and ask for it a careful perusal by our readers. The Observer stands at the head of religious journals in this country, and is second to no other in influence and number of weekly readers. Its secular departments are filled with live matter, while the letters of "Irenæus" are worth a good deal more than the subscription price of the paper.

☞ By reference to a card in our advertising columns it will be seen that a meeting is to be held in lower Tremont Temple, Boston, at half after three o'clock on next Friday for the purpose of organizing a Civil Service Reform Association. The call is signed by prominent gentlemen, among them Hon. John Cummings of Woburn, and the meeting no doubt will be large and interesting.

— "Cummings's Graphic" asks: "Reader, are you aware that you determine the character of the stores of the town you reside in?" It is so most emphatically, and the fact can not be impressed too strongly and indelibly on the public mind. The people determine the character of the business houses of their town.

— Particular attention is called to the change in the advertisement of Smith & Son this week. The junior partner went to New York last Tuesday for a stock of Christmas goods, and spent several days there in looking up and purchasing the best. Wait patiently and the firm of Smith & Son will show you a stock of Christmas wares that will delight everybody.

— Mr. A. E. Thompson, the popular Main street merchant, has a very interesting communication in this paper on the subject of "Butter"—a theme in which everybody and the women folks are deeply interested. Please carefully peruse the article.

— It was amusing to see our local reporters of the Boston papers squabbling over their reports of the Town Meeting last Monday evening. If they had been content to wait until the JOURNAL appeared they could have got a correct one for their papers.

— A notice in the window of Estabrook's bakery reads: "A cup of hot coffee and a good square meal can be obtained within." And they can. At all hours, and better coffee or more palatable food can't be served up in Woburn. They are served at all hours, too.

10. Organ Postlude.

—"Cummings's Graphic" is a new periodical which will appear and make a bid for public patronage early next week. The proprietor has been to the expense of having a head engraved for it, which represents the exterior of his store, 150 Main street, with each of the interior departments brought out to the life. The paper contains a large amount of interesting and useful reading matter—but we will await its appearance, and let the public, especially the ladies, judge for themselves of its merits.

— At an auction sale, held on the 28th ult., for account of The Merrimack River Savings Bank of Lowell, the following pieces of property were disposed of: House and lot of land, containing about 10,000 feet, being No. 72 Main street, for $1200 to Bernard McHugh. House and lot of land containing about 5000 feet, No. 74 Main street, for $1412.50, to E. W. Hudson. Large double house and lot of land containing about 40,000 feet, on Main street near Cross street for $1900, to E. W. Hudson. Lot of land containing about 45,000 feet, for $400, to J. P. Crane.

— At the annual meeting of Mt. Herob Lodge, A. F. & A. M. held Wednesday evening, the present officers were all re-elected.

— W. B. Randall, who was injured at Russell's factory some weeks ago, has gone to work again. The insurance company paid him his money as prompt as a major.

— It may seem impertinent in the JOURNAL to do so, but it would like to propound this interrogatory: When the town, last Monday evening, voted $100 to the Treasurer, and $50 to the Secretary, of the sinking Fund Board, why was not a reasonable recompense voted to Mr. G. R. Gage for the five years service rendered by him to the town in the same capacity?

— On next Wednesday and Thursday evening the ladies of the Baptist society will hold a festival in the church, at which their annual sale of useful and ornamental goods will take place. A first class musical entertainment will be given on each evening, and a grand supper served from 6 to 10. For the amount of real enjoyment that will be furnished the price for admission and supper have been placed very low.

— Several of our theatre-going people visited the Park last Monday evening to see Lawrence Barrett in Mr. George H. Boker's tragedy, "Francesca Da Rimini," and were delighted. The play is of intense interest all the way through and in it Mr. Barrett, as Lanceotto, the warlike dwarf, appears at his best. He was recieved by a vast audience with great enthusiasm, and in a manner highly flattering to his genious as a tragic actor. Mr. Barrett was called before the curtain and responded in a neat speech which was warmly received. The play has had a great run this week, and the popular Park theatre is crowded nightly to see and hear the celebrated actor.

— We have looked the thing all over carefully, weighed the pros and cons with judicial fairness, and the decision is, that there is no establishment in town that makes a larger, better, or handsomer exhibit of Christmas goods than that of Mr. Sparrow Horton. It would be an endless task to enumerate the contents of his rare stock of holiday wares, and to be admired and longed for they only need to be seen. There are beautiful pictures, elegant cards, pretty vases, new games, toys—well, everything to delight the eye and gratify the taste, and the prices which Mr. Horton has pasted on them are so low that everybody can buy, and not feel as if he was taking bread-and-butter out of his children's mouths, or robbing his heirs of their inheritance.

— Our traders are putting in prime Christmas stocks of all kinds, and will have a full supply of everything useful and beautiful for our people. And right here permit us to reiterate the suggestion that Woburn people buy at home. They can procure all the goods desired cheaper than in Boston, and it is their duty, if they would see the town grow, prosper and flourish, to patronize home trade and industries. This running into the city for Christmas or any other wares is not the right thing to do, and we hope that this year everybody will buy at home. If we would have any business done here the different branches of trade and industry must be supported. Withdraw your support entirely and your town becomes a "Deserted Village," or rural cemetery. A partial withdrawal tends in the same direction. To live and prosper we need to help each other. Reader, when casting about for Christmas gift goods, remember and take to heart these suggestions.

— In another column an intelligent correspondent gives the law applicable to the licensing of victuallers and liquor sellers which is of public interest. He also makes statements respecting the course of the Methodist society towards the Merriam application for license, and of Mr. Amos Cummings as to Mr. Peter Kenney. It is true, as "Law" states, that neither of these parties entered their objections to the granting of the licenses aforesaid, but it is only fair and just to add that, at the time of publication last spring, neither the Methodist society nor Mr. Cummings supposed that the licenses prayed for came within the class where objections from them, as adjacent property-holders, would lie. They, we believe, still hold to a construction of the law which would debar them of the right of protest. If these are the facts, they would seem to exonerate the M. E. Society and Mr. Cummings from the implied charge of inconsistency as friends and advocates of the temperance reform. At any rate, they can answer "Law" for themselves.

— The Board of Selectmen met in regular monthly session at their Rooms on Tuesday afternoon and transacted the following business:—The monthly report of the Chief of Police was accepted and ordered placed on file.——Use of the Selectmen's Rooms, for dress purposes, was granted to the Hook & Ladder Company for their ball to be given on the 29th instant.——Notices prohibiting coasting on all the streets and sidewalks of the town were ordered posted at once.——Thomas H. Hill was granted an auctioneer's license.——Philip McKenna was appointed engineer for the unexpired term of Murray, resigned.——The monthly bills were passed and approved.——In response to the following letter the Committee on Military were instructed to send for the guns mentioned therein, obtain them, and then let the town place them where it sees fit:

For the Journal.

A Few Facts.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE WOBURN JOURNAL:—Apropos of certain remarks which have been made of late in private and public, it is believed that the following contribution of law and fact may be of sufficient general interest to warrant publication.

Section six of chapter one hundred of the Public Statutes provides that all applications for liquor licenses shall be published in the local newspapers at least ten days before the licensing board acts thereon. Section seven of the same chapter reads as follows, the italics of course being my own:

SECT. 7. If before the expiration of the ten days following the publication of the notice, as required by the preceding section, the owner of any real estate adjoining the premises described in an application for a license to be exercised by a common victualler to sell liquors to be drunk on the premises notifies the licensing board in writing that he objects to the granting of the license, no license to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on said premises shall be granted. And in case such license is granted after such objection has been filed, the owner of such real estate may apply to the police, district, or municipal court, or to any trial justice within whose jurisdiction the premises are situated, for a hearing in the case; and said court or trial justice, if it appears that due notice was given by the said owner of his objection to the granting of such license, shall revoke the license, and notice of revocation shall be sent to the licensing board; and any city or town in which any such license has been so revoked shall refund to said licensee or his legal representative the money expended by him for said license and his court fees and costs.

It will be observed at once that the power herein given to the owner of real estate adjoining the premises described in an application for a license is without limitation, excepting in the two particulars, that he must be the owner of adjoining real estate, and the application must be for a license to be exercised by a common victualler. Both of these limitations practically, and as a matter of law, in no wise take away from the strong prohibitory character of the section, and the really absolute power which is placed in the hands of the possessor of adjoining real estate. For, in the first place, the word owner means not alone he in whom is vested the general property, or ownership in fee, but it embraces also those who are in possession under a special title, as, for example, a lessee (Hartford vs. Brady 114 Mass., 466, 470; 2 Ohio 123). Secondly, every liquor seller who has a license of the first, second, or third class, (and it is only licensees of these three classes who have authority to sell liquors to be drunk on the premises), must, also, "hold a license as an innholder or common victualler" (P. S. chap. 100, Sect. 9 cl. 5). It is seen, then, as stated above, that there is in reality no restrictions or conditions annexed to the power which the section gives to the owner of real estate adjoining a would be liquor saloon to prevent, peremptorily, the procurement of any license to sell liquor to be drunk on the premises.

Having stated so much by way of law, allow me next to give a few facts which, as premised above, I have reason to think will be of some interest to the public. In its issue of April 20, 1882, the Woburn Advertiser published the applications of twenty-nine persons for liquor licenses. Of this number, twenty-five applied for a license either of the first, second, or third class, to be exercised as a common victualler, and therefore came under the provisions of Section seven. One of these applications, given by way of illustration, reads as follows:

"WOBURN, MASS., April, 20, 1882.

Notice is hereby given, under Sec. 6 Chapter 100 of the Public Statutes that Peter Kenney has applied for a license to sell intoxicating liquor as a Common Victualler of the first class at No. 153 Main Street in said Woburn, in a saloon, on the first floor."

The owner of the real estate adjoining the premises described in this notice is the Chairman of the State Prohibitory Committee, who was in the recent election the Prohibitory candidate for Congress from the Fifth District. This earnest advocate and leader of the cause of temperance had it within his power by merely penning an objection to the Board of Selectmen to have shut up for the present year one of the most frequented and flourishing liquor saloons in the town of Woburn.

In the issue of May 4th the Advertiser published another batch of licenses, six in number. Of these, five applied for licenses of the first, second, or third class. One of the five was the application of Thomas G. Merriam "for a license to sell intoxicating liquors as a Common Victualler of the first class, at Billiard saloon, second floor of Whitcher's Block." The owner of the real estate adjoining these premises is the Corporation of the Methodist Episcopal church, the religious home of so many (comparatively speaking) strong and unswerving friends of the cause of prohibition, who are ready at all times to devote their money in printing, and their time and energies in distributing, ballots which may help defeat such arch enemies of the cause of temperance as the late Republican nominee for Governor. The pastor of the aforesaid church and the leader of this noble band of temperance workers, is well known to the Woburn public as the eloquent apostle of the cause and as a man fearless in his honest and conscientious advocacy of it.

PURE IS THE ABSOLUTE NECESSITY OF HEALTH. BLOOD

THE marvellous results of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA upon all humors and low conditions of the blood (as proven by the cures effected) prove it the best BLOOD MEDICINE. Such has been the success of this article at home that nearly every family in the whole neighborhoods have been taking it at the same time. It eradicates scrofula, vitalizes and enriches the blood, thereby restoring and renovating the whole system. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA purifies the blood. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA cures dyspepsia. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA cures biliousness. A peculiar point in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA is that it builds up and strengthens the system, while it eradicates disease, and as nature's great assistant proves itself invaluable as a protection from diseases that originate in changes of the seasons, of climate and of life.

A Notable Family Gathering.

An event occurred last Thanksgiving Day, in the old "Sally Wyman house" on Main street, which, to the writer, seems worth recording, and is here briefly described. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierce, old and well known residents of Woburn, celebrated our time-honored national feast-day, by a regular old fashioned family reunion. There were present on the occasion, besides the "parent pair," their ten adult children,—nine sons, and one daughter,—four daughters-in-law, one son-in-law, and three grandchildren, all of whom were in excellent health and the best of spirits. It is noteworthy that, the ten children were born within the period of twenty years,—the oldest being in his fortieth, and the youngest in his twenty-first year; that death has not invaded the family circle, and that all the children live within an hour's ride of the parental roof. The family had not met together before for fifteen years, at which time several of them were, of course, mere children. Now all are well developed, the nine sons being in point of stature, considerably above the average,—the "baby," the tallest of the lot. When grouped together, they make an imposing spectacle of manly physique.

The party sat down to dinner at about four o'clock P. M., and when viewed from a little distance presented a picture not often seen, and one really worth a long walk to look upon. After partaking heartily, and with evident relish, of the traditional roast turkey, and its vegetable accessories, supplemented with plum pudding, pies, pastry and dessert,—all of which had been prepared in the best style of the culinary art, under the immediate supervision of the very competent hostess,—the company rose from the table in the best possible humor, to enter with zeal into the sports and pastimes which are the concomitants of every well ordered harvest festival. Games of various kinds were introduced, interspersed and spiced with stories and songs, conundrums and comic elocution, jokes and repartee, until "the fun grew fast and furious," reminding one of an old fashioned corn husking. During the evening, among other invited guests, came Mrs. S——, and Mrs. T——, who, by their vivacity and wit, contributed not a little to the pleasures of the occasion, leaving nothing to be desired, so far as the ladies were concerned, in the way of either dignity or avoirdupois. But, as all sublunary things have an end, so did this memorable scene. At a seasonable hour the hilarious assemblage broke up, completely surfeited with joy, and, no doubt with hearts brimful of thankfulness toward the beneficent source whence sprang the manifold delights of this long to be remembered, and joyous family reunion.

WINCHESTER.

Dr. Winsor is himself again—well and rugged.

The Ladies Friendly Society held their annual sale on yesterday afternoon and evening. It went off in good shape.

Mr. St. John of the Harvard Divinity School will preach at the Unitarian Church next Sunday, the pastor being in New York.

Sheldon's Fourth Reader is to take the place of Appleton's Fourth in our schools. The schools are doing first rate this winter.

By the swinging back of one of the heavy doors at the depot Mrs. George P. Brown received quite serious injuries the other day.

Hearty thanks for "comps." to the grand dramatic entertainment last Tuesday evening. And may their shadows never grow less [ED. JOURNAL.

The Star says Miss A Josephine Lang of Woburn, who is teaching here, can accommodate a few more pupils on the piano. She is a thoroughly educated pianist and a very successful teacher.

The Reform Club has elected the following Officers:—President, S. C. Small; Vice Pres. J. R. Cobb, H. L. Wilson and Alexander Mckenzie; Secretary, A. E. Rowe; Treasurer Robert Cowdrey.

I don't know about the time of the expiration of Mr. Brown's term of office. A few weeks ago the Boston papers said his present term would end in December. The Star needn't get so mad about it.

The Reform Club meeting Sunday was a great success. Miss Carrie Roach of Malden, Elocutionist, read a few pieces very effectively, some more touching than any speeches could have been. She is a very natural reader and carries the sympathy of the audience. Meeting next Sunday will be led by Mr. J. R. Cobb.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, the eminent lawyer and able temperance advocate, will lecture in the Congregational Church, Friday evening, Feb. 22, on the Constitutional Amendment. The town is fortunate in securing Mrs. Foster as she is one of the ablest speakers in the country and her services are in great demand.

The Good Will Club will give an entertainment on the evening of December 21, for which preparations have already began. From all accounts I judge that it is to be the affair of the season, for which everybody is waiting with great interest. This Club is noted for the excellent character of its entertainments. Let us all be on deck early.

At the regular meeting of the Good Will Club held last Tuesday evening "Once upon a time" was given with great success — Mr. C. W. Gray, C. T. Kimball, Mr. Norcross, Misses Mary E. Carter and Nellie Morse took part. Miss Dolly Hammond played the piano: Miss Effie Norcross, Miss Morse and Miss Holbrook rendered several songs finely.

The Reform Club hold temperance meetings on Sunday afternoons in Livingstone Hall which are well attended. Good speeches, good music and good fellowship make these meetings very interesting and agreeable. The officers and chief workers leave nothing undone to attract people to the Hall in which they have so far met with good success. May their labors and works and efforts to reform men and make them better be abundantly blessed.

The Ladies Temperance Union are industriously aiding the good cause of temperance in this place. They are a power for promoting sobriety and good morals. Deeply interested in the well-being of their fellow men; earnest in works for the amelioration of the condition of those on whom rum has its iron grasp; friends of humanity, and honest in purpose, these ladies employ all honorable means to advance the temperance cause, and are doing a good work. Their lines of labor are approbated by all of our best people.

There has been fun on the ice here this week. The cold snap fixed things all right for the skaters and they have improved the advantages for fun offered. The young of both sexes have been alike jovial on steel, and they hope "good ice" will last all winter. There is no better exercise, if taken moderately, than skating. It brings all the thews, sinews and muscles of the body into play, and hardens and strengthens them. I like to see the lassies with their red cheeks and sparkling eyes, warmly dressed, skimming over the glassy surface of our ponds, for it means vigor and robust health, besides a "good time." And the boys too. But there is no danger but that the boys will all be there, and all the time, if they can manage to escape school and "chores."

BIBLE PRESENTATION.—Mrs. S. A. Studley of East Cambridge, the mother of John T. Wilson of Winchester, has had bound in superb style, including strength and beauty, the illustrated Bible issued in parts by Johnson of New York, one of the noblest specimens of typography executed in this country. This costly edition she now presents to the Universalist Church of Washington, D. C. where it will not only grace the pulpit of the church in prospect, but finds a faithful expounding for the people who worship therein. A timely gift. It can be seen for a few weeks at the Universalist Publishing House No. 26 Bromfield Street, Boston.

A FRIEND.

NOTE.—If "A Friend" had been a little more careful in mailing his letter the above interesting item would have appeared last week:—ED. JOURNAL.

A General Stampede.

Never was such a rush made for any Drug Store as is now at Hills, opposite the Common for a Trial Bottle of King's New Discovery for Consumption, Cougs, Colds. All persons afflicted with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can get a Trial Bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at the above Drug Store.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

They also refund the money if any persons are dissatisfied from whatever cause. The genial Supt. G. W. Gill, Esq. assures us he guarantees full satisfaction in every instance. Health of Connecticut.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 10th.—The monthly report of the State Board of Health, published on the 7th inst., says long diseases hold the front rank. Consumption has been as fatal as lung fever, and there has been a large per centage of deaths from bronchitis and congestion of the lungs. A peculiar spasmodic cough has also been very common, not distinctive enough to be called whooping cough, and attacking adults as well as children. Neuralgia and rheumatism are reported as being prevalent and exceedingly obstinate and unyielding to treatment. Since the introduction into our section of the Craig's cough and consumption cure, pulmonary diseases are rapidly disappearing, and now that the excellencies as a curative power of the French crown plaster is being generally known, neuralgia and rheumatism are complaints not often heard of.

A Fortunate Kiss.
Frederik Bremer.

In the University of Upsala, in Sweden, lived a young student—a lone youth, with a great love for studies, but without means of pursuing them. He was poor and without connections. Still he studied, living in poverty, but keeping a cheerful heart, and trying not to look at the future, which looked so grimly at him. His good humor and good qualities made him beloved by his young comrades. Once he was standing with some of them in the great square of Upsala, prating away an hour of leisure, when the attention of the young man became arrested by a very young and elegant lady, who, at the side of an elderly one, walked slowly over the place. It was the daughter of the governor of Upsala, living in the city, and the lady with her was her governess. She was generally known for her beauty, and for her goodness and gentleness of character and was looked upon with great admiration by the students. As the young men now stood silently gazing at her as she passed on like a grareful vision one of them exclaimed:

"Well, it would be worth something to have a kiss from such a mouth!"

The poor young student, the hero of our story, who was looking intently on that pure and angelic face, exclaimed, as if by inspiration, "Well, I think I could have it!"

"What?" cried his friends in a chorus, "are you crazy?" "Do you know her?" etc.

"Not at all," he answered; "But I think she would kiss me just now, if I asked her."

"What in this place, before all our eyes?"

"Freely."

"Well, if she will give you a kiss in that manner, I will give you a thousand dollars!" exclaimed one of the party.

"And I!" "And I!" cried three or four young men in the group, and bets ran high on so improbable an event, and the challenge was made and received in less time than we take to relate it.

Our hero—my authority tells not whether he was handsome or plain; but I have my particular reasons for believing he was rather plain, but singularly good looking at the time—immediately walked off to meet the young lady. He bowed to her and said: "My lady, my fortune is in your hands." She looked at him in astonishment, but arrested her steps. He proceeded to state his name and condition, his aspirations, and related simply and truly what had just passed between him and his companions.

The young lady listened attentively, and when he had ceased to speak, she said, blushing, but with great sweetness, "If by so little a thing so much good can be effected, it would be foolish in me to refuse your request," and she kissed the young man publicly in the open square.

Next day the young student was sent for by the governor. He wanted to see the man who had dared to ask of his daughter in that way, and whom she had consented to kiss so. He received him with a severe and scrutinizing brow, but, after an hour's conversation was so pleased with him that he asked him to dine at his table during his studies at Upsala.

Our young friend now pursued his studies in a manner which soon made him regarded as the most promising scholar at the University. Three years were now passed after the day of the first kiss, when the young man was allowed to give a second one to the daughter of the governor as his intended bride.

He became later one of the greatest scholars in Sweden, as much respected for his learning as for his character. His works will endure forever among the works of science: and from this happy union sprang a family well known in Sweden in the present day, and whose wealth of fortune and high position in society are regarded as small things compared with its wealth of goodness and love.

Heartily Recommended.

Don't condemn a good thing because you have been deceived by worthless nostrums. Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured many in this section of nervous disorders, and we recommend it heartily to such sufferers.—News.

"Every truth has two sides; look at both before committing yourself to either." Kidney-Wort challenges the closest scrutiny of its ingredients and its grand results. It has nothing to fear from truth. Doctors may disagree as to the best methods and remedies, for the cure of constipation and disordered liver and kidneys. But those that have used Kidney-Wort, agree that it is by far the best medicine known. Its action is prompt, thorough and lasting.

It has been found out that the reason a woman is always scared at a mouse is because she has only two legs to run away with and a mouse has four.

A pure, wholesome distillation of witch hazel, American pine, Canada fir, marigold, clover blossom, etc., fragrant with the healing essences of balsam and pine. Such is Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh. Complete treatment for $1.

Unity of action, concord, sympathy and goodfellowship are admirable traits in human character; but they will not heal our physical infirmities. Catarrh, for example, stubbornly resists their effects or influence. In fact this malady withstands all of its would-be destroyers, except Ely's Cream Balm. "Solitary and alone" this Balm stands as the only recognized and infallible specific for Catarrh. "For fifteen years," says J. B. Chase, St. Denis Hotel, B'wy. and 11th St., N. Y., "I have been greatly annoyed with a disgusting catarrh. My sense of smell, not to mention other troubles, became much impaired. A thorough use of Ely's Cream Balm has cured me of these troubles." It is not a liquid or snuff, and is easily applied. Only 50 cents a package.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

The woman of tender feelings most frequently gives utterance to a sigh, and the large sighs she utters are frequently due to the small size of her shoes.

The ills which flesh is heir to are more often due to impurities in the blood than is geneally supposed. The purification of this vital fluid enables the system to ward off its worst enemies. There is no doubt that Hood's Sarsaparilla is one of the best blood purifiers in the world, and we feel confident that those who give it a trial will not be disappointed.

FUNERAL and FURNISHING UNDERTAKER.
Having recently enlarged my warerooms, I have now on exhibition one of the finest and most extensive lots of Caskets, Coffins, and Grave Clothes that can be found in the State. I have fine goods of my own manufacture, and of the leading manufacturers throughout the country. I have a full line of the celebrated Stein Manufacturing Co.'s Cloth Covered Caskets. These Caskets are covered with black broad-cloth, white broad-cloth, and silk velvet in various shades, and are acknowledged to be the finest cloth covered goods in this country.
All in this and neighboring towns who are under the sad necessity of purchasing such goods, will find it decidedly to their advantage to buy them of me, as my prices on different grades of goods are from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. lower than the same quality of goods are sold in Boston. I give my personal attention to my business, and have sufficient facilities to promptly attend to all orders from other towns as well as Woburn.
Hearses, Carriages, and Flowers furnished at short notice and at low prices. At the old stand, No. 8 Montvale Avenue, near corner of Main street.

Sermon and Horse Race.

A CHICAGO TURF REPORTER'S EXPERIENCE ON A NEW JOB.

All reporters are not good "all around" men. The Chicago Herald has one who is peculiarly "horsey." "We are a little short," said the city editor of the Herald in an apologetic way, to the sporting reporter on Saturday night, "and I will have to ask you to help on the religious tomorrow."

"All right; what is it?"

"Go down to the cathedral; our Episcopal bishop is going to discourse on something interesting. Use your own judgment about space."

The sporting reporter finished an article on the result of the running meeting, checked off his assignment and went home. The next morning he turned up smilingly at the church, and hustled in through the vestibule as if he had been delayed by the transfer at Western avenue on his way to the driving park. He was met by a solemn looking usher, of whom he inquired breathlessly,

"Am I in time for the first heat?"

The usher looked astonished, and asked: "Can I show you to a seat?"

"Yes, will my quarter-stretch ticket admit me to the grand stand?"

"We have no grand stand," said the usher perplexed, "but I can give you a front pew if you would like that," and he conducted him to a seat in the second pew, immediately under the pulpit, and went away, wondering what sort of a fish had come to church that morning. The sporting reporter took a seat next to a benevolent looking old gentleman with mutton-chop whiskers and a very high collar. He looked in vain for a table or rest to write upon. Not finding any, he mopped his face with his sleeve and began whittling a very small stub of lead pencil.

"Good day for the races," he said, from force of habit. The mutton-chop man did not answer, and the turf reporter inquired if there were many entries. The man did not understand that either, and the reporter opened a hymnal and began to read it, under the impression that it was an old-fashioned "Krick's Guide." The church slowly filled up, and after a time the bishop and other clergymen came out and the service began. The entire ceremonies completely nonplussed the racing man. He could not keep up with the procession, and when the bishop and clergymen began intoning together, he offered to bet with the mutton-chop man as to which would come out winner. He sat the morning out and went back to the office with the best face on the matter he could put.

"See here," he said to the city editor, "what sort of a racket were you trying to give me?"

"Why, what is the matter?" said the chief.

"Why, that church racket. I couldn't make head or tail of the race, and for the life of me I dont know this minute who won. It was this way, you see. I went in and got a good seat right in the grand stand; there was no reporters' stand."

"Judge's stand?" said the editor, "why, that was the pulpit."

"No, it wasn't any pulpit. It was just like a judge's stand, only it had a big cover, which I suppose they let down on the judge when he made a bad decision. The grand stand and pavilion were filled up, and I tried my best to get a few points on the day's race, but no one seemed to be very fly on points——"

"Did the bishop preach?"

"There were four entries——"

"Four what?"

"Four entries. One was a big, 16-hand fellow, whose colors were blue and white: the other was smaller and had red and white; the other was black and white, and the last seemed to be riding out of his colors, and I conldn't make him out at all. In fact, I couldn't tell which was which, for there was no programmes. Blue and white got to pole and the scoring began. I tried to get some odds on him from a sucker who sat next to me, but he wouldn't bet. At last they all came up neck-and-neck, and I stood up and shouted "It's a go," but the crowd all told me to sit down, and the man who tends the gate came up and told me he'd put me out if I didn't make less noise. I asked him who was running this track anyway, but a dame behind me pulled my sleeve and told me to sit down. Red and white cast a shoe at the quarter pole, but caught up fairly afterwards, resumed his pace and came under the wire a clear winner by half a length, trotting a little lame, however. They took breath, and I tried to catch a bet again, but could find no takers. Time was called for the next heat, and the unknown was a bit fractious at the post, and after some delay they effected an indifferent start. Red and white went to the front, but blue soon passed and took the lead, winning easily. In the third heat the field got away at the first tap of the drum, red leading and blue coming up to second place. There was a good race up to the half-mile pole, where blue took the lead. As he broke into the straight at the finish, he seemed to be picking up his feet quite lively, and he came down the stretch with his head up, and went under the wire at a 2.20 gait.

"Well, you don't seem to have caught much of the sermon. Was there any music?"

"I should say so. There was a full orchestra in the band house. It was quite slick, but one filly was crowded into a pocket by a big gelding, and when the race was finished she was left behind. When I came out of the door I tried to see the Paris mutuals, but they weren't on the board. I didn't get the hang of the thing to-day, but if you give me another crack at it next Sunday I think I will get on to it in better shape."

"De Good Ole Times."

"De odder nite de ole man Saleratus Brown drapped over to see me," began the old man, as Pickles Smith got through swallowing a tenpenny nail which he was holding in his mouth to cure the backache. "He sot down with a grunt, shoved out his feet wid a groan, and remarked dat times had so changed dat he didn't ear' to lib anoder day. It made me narvous to ha'r him take on an' tell how modern folkses war dyin' off, modern houses no better dan coffins, modern food a pizen to de system, an' dat ninety nine men out of ebery hundred war' liars, cheats an' thieves.

"Almos' ebery day I h'ar some of you takin' on 'bout de good ole times when nobody died an' de front doah of ebery house stood open. You doan' know what yer talkin' 'bout! In de good ole times de common house was 'bout as comfortable as de common hog pen. More people had to ride ten m'les fur a doctor dan a less distance, an' when he arrove he didn't know bran from broomsticks. Any sort of a man who knew Moses from Aaron was good 'nuff fur a preacher, an' de man wid de loudest voice an' de loudest bellow was de bes' lawyer. Women war' freckled and men went bar'futed to church, an' de fadder who didn't bring up his sons wid a great deal of stearn dignity an' blue beech gad mixed togeder expected de boy to turn out a pirate.

"In de good ole times men stole an' cheated an' lied an' played hypocrife, jist de same as men do now, an' if de women didn't gad quite so often dey gossiped jist as much. De man who sighs for de good ole times am frowin' away his breaf, an' dar am a dim suspishun in my mind dat he am lazy an' shiftless. De pusson who can't play his hand wid de world of to-day am either light in de head or wobbly in the knees. I furder desire to add dat de nex' time I h'ar a member of dis club wishin' for a return o de days when de war' only one fam'ly on a road ten miles long an' no umbrella to lend and not one fam'ly outer sixteen could lend a cupful o, sugar widout scrapin' de bottom o' de box, I shall purceed to read him a lecture dat will slant his ears at an angle of fo'ty seben degrees."—Bro. Gardner to the Lime-Kiln Club.

Not Excused.

When I was a young man I spent several years in the South, residing for a while at Port Gibson, on the Mississippi River. A great deal of litigation was going on there about that time, and it was not always an easy matter to obtain a jury. One day I was summoned to act in that capacity, and repaired to court to get excused. On my name being called I informed His Honor, the Judge, that I was not a freeholder, and therefore not qualified to serve. "I am stopping for the time being at this place." "You board at the hotel, I presume?" "I take my meals there, but have rooms at another part of the town, where I lodge." "So you keep bachelor's hall?" "Yes, sir." "How long have you lived in that manner?" "About six months." "I think you are qualified," gravely remarked the Judge, "for I have never known a man to keep bachelor's hall the length of time you name who had not dirt enough in his room to make him a freeholder. The Court does not excuse you.

Change of Mind.

I declined to insert your advertisement of Hop Bitters last year because I then thought they might not be promotive of the cause of Temperance, but find they are, and a very valuable medicine, myself and wife having been greatly benefitted by them, and I take great pleasure in making them known.

Jersey velvet and jersey satin are new materials intended principally for dress waists, and having a back woven like that of the ordinary jersey cloth and as elastic. They fit perfectly, which is more than can be said of ordinary velvet or satin.

"A CITY CHARTER."

Under the above caption the Advertiser contained a timely and sensible editorial last week, which has given rise to considerable discussion in business circles. The Advertiser writes in favor of an application for a city charter being made to the next Legislature, and gives good and substantial reasons why such a step should be taken.

We heartily agree with our neighbor in this matter, because it is believed that the interests of Woburn would be greatly enhanced by changing its form of government from that of a town to a city. It is urged by a few in opposition that such a change would involve a larger cost for doing the public business than at present, but we think not. In many respects our government now does not differ from a city government. Except in name it has a City Clerk, a Road Commissioner, a Board of Health, a Police Department with Chief, Collector, Treasurer, Auditing Committee and other Departments, all of which are conducted almost precisely, and with about the same expense, as they would be under a charter. The salary of a Mayor would be next to nothing, and Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen always in small cities serve without pay.

The arguments in favor of the change are many and weighty. A town with 12,000 inhabitants is too large and unwieldy to handle profitably and easily, and our Town Meetings are not what they should be. This is not the fault of officers or voters, but the fact is, we have outgrown the conditions which were applicable to a town government and ought to cast off the old shell and come out next spring a full-fledged city. We are satisfied that our affairs might be conducted as cheaply under a charter as they are now, and much more satisfactorily to everybody, to say nothing of the prestige that the change would give us, and favorable effect on the price of property, business, and population which it would have.

As to the necessary 12,000 population there can be no doubt. Last spring we lacked only about 240 of the required number, and that deficiency has been more than made up is the opinion of all observing people. It would cost but little to show the Legislature by a census that Woburn is entitled, on the score population, to a city charter.

No politics or political influences should be allowed to enter into this question. Fair minded men, and those who have the best interests of Woburn at heart, will not stop to find out how the division of the town into wards will effect one party or the other, but will canvass the matter from a business standpoint, with the good of the place always in view.

BOSTON CITY ELECTION.

Boston held her municipal election last Tuesday. There were a Democratic Republican, Citizens' and other tickets in the field, and the contest was a warm one. The result was a Democratic victory of large proportions, Albert Palmer, their candidate for Mayor, and the biggest half of their Aldermen, being elected. On a square political fight Boston casts about 6000 Democratic majority, and though the Borbourn ticket was not nearly as good as either of the others the unterrified walked up to the polls at the command of the bosses and made a clean sweep. This is the first time the city has had a political election in a good many years, and the Republicans were laid out colder than a wedge. Likewise, the "Citizens."

☞ This afternoon at half past three o'clock an important meeting is to be held in lower Tremont Temple. The object of which is to organize a civil service reform association. The call for the meeting was numerously signed by prominent gentlemen of the Commonwealth who are dissatisfied with the present modes of conducting our civil service, and wish to inaugurate a better condition of things. It may be that something will be done by the present session of Congress which will render such an organization as is contemplated by these gentlemen unnecessary. Or, if not, the Democratic party, if it get into power in 1884, will give all kinds of political reforms a backset that they will not recover from for the next twenty years. Their success will render civil service reform associations entirely superfluous.

☞ B. B. Johnson, Esq., of Waltham says in view of a movement in that town for a city charter: "I hold that a city government would bring us (1) a better class, or order, of service. (2) More intelligent and considerate public action on items of expenditures. (3) A direct personal responsibility to each officer. (4) A more thorough and consistsnt method of business. (5) Better police and sanitary arrangements. (6) The largest representation of voters. (7) Less danger from cliques and clans."

☞ One reason why the Democratic members of Congress are not enthusiastically in favor of a reform in the civil service, or legislation this winter with that end in view, is because they expect to come into power at the close of the present administration and want no obstacles in the way of making a clean sweep of the offices. A law fixing the tenure of appointed officers at four or six years would interfere with them, and a victory without the fodder of the public crib would be a barren one indeed.

☞ We are glad to know that the editors of the Woburn Advertiser and Arlington Advocate, both good fellows, have made up, and that now everything is quiet on the Potomac. Both are staunch temperance men, only they have different ways of showing it.

☞ Some Republicans profess to be greatly alarmed because Gen. Butler dined with President Arthur the other day. They think they see a deep, dark plot in the circumstance to defeat Mr. Hoar for the Senate, and the election of Gov. Long. It was indeed a strange affair, and there can be no doubt but that Gen. Butler and the President have some very wicked scheme on foot.

— There was a powerful rain Wednesday afternoon and night.

— The Baptist Church Fair, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, was a great success every way.

— Gilcreast H. & L. Co. gave a grand and very pleasant ball on Wednesday evening. It was well attended.

— Frank Pierce has a splendid stock of toilet slippers for the holidays, all of new patterns and in great variety.

— The officers again succeeded, on Sunday last, to keep the sale of liquor at the minimum by constantly watching licensed and unlicensed places.

— A series of revival meetings will be held in the M. E. church, under the direction and auspices of Rev. S. A. Barnes of Providence, R. I., to begin on December 22.

— At the reunion of the 22d and 32d Mass. Regiments, at the United States Hotel, Boston, on Wednesday, Woburn was represented by quite a large number of members.

— The second son of Dr. Lothrop who was taken into the city by his father sick with diphtheria, recovered and is well. Our reporter was wrongly informed respecting his death.

— A petition is in circulation about town praying the management of the B. L. & C. R. R. to put on an 8 o'clock A. M. express that will make Boston in 22 minutes. A large number of business men and influential citizens have signed it.

— Mr. John I. Munroe, who for some years has been doing a large and lucrative business here in coal, wood, lumber, etc., has taken a partner in the person of Mr. Carroll of Marlboro. May abundant success be vouchsafed the new firm.

— A petition has been numerously signed by prominent citizens of this place for the restoration of Conductor George Fuller to his old position on the B. & L. R. R. He was a very popular conductor, and we hope the prayer of the petitioners will be granted.

— "Cummings's Graphic," which made its appearance on Tuesday last, contains a good deal of solid information, wise counsel, and trustworthy directions. Mechanically speaking it is as neat as a pin, and we expect its general circulation will give the famous Cummings establishment, 150 Main street, such a boom as it never had before.

— Mr. Mark Allen, editor of the Advertiser, has just copy-righted an American drama in five acts entitled, "A Crucial Test: or, Who Killed Jason Coolidge?" We have not had the pleasure of reading the play, but as our friend Allen always does good literary work we are safe in saying his "Crucial Test" will prove a dramatic success.

— Mr. McKitrick of No. Woburn, left his horse and buggy on Fowle street Sunday afternoon and, becoming frightened, the horse ran at great speed up Main and Salem streets, meeting Col. A. L. Richardson near Bow street. The Col. turned his horse about, gave chase, and overhauled the runaway near the R R. bridge at Walnut Hill, at the risk of his own life. Damage slight.

— We take much pleasure in calling public attention to the Christmas advertisement of Hammond's Clothing House, and also in heartily recommending his goods, wares and merchandise. It is a prime house, pleasant and profitable to buy at, easy to get along with, and very satisfactory to patrons. The advertisement referred to tells its own story much better than we could do it, and therefore we advise its careful perusal.

— Christmas will be observed by the Sabbath School connected with the First Congregational church, on Christmas Eve, in a manner which must be very interesting to both old and young. The music on the occasion will be a very pleasant feature of the service, inasmuch as the Sacred Cantata, "The Night of Glory, or Birth of Christ," will constitute the musical part of the programme, sung by the church choir, assisted by a grand chorus of forty voices under the direction of Dr. Lang, with organ accompaniment by Mr. John C. Buck.

— If any person should have doubts about some business being done in Woburn let him, or her, drop in, or look in, to the stores on Main street of a Saturday evening. He'll see sights that will disabuse his mind of its false notion about our trade, pretty quickly too. Tarry a brief space in our clothing houses, shoe stores, dry goods houses, markets, and other places along the streets, and at the same time try to take in the crowds of people on the sidewalk, and the conclusion will be inevitable that Woburn is the liveliest burg this side of Boston, and that she is paddling her own canoe bravely and successfully. She's no "bedroom" for Boston, but a town of business, trade, work, manufactures, and as good a one in these respects, as can be found any where.

— Please run your eye over the professional card of D. Edwin Conery, Esq., a prominent lawyer of Medford.

— A bit of good reading may be found by turning over to the first page of this paper, furnished by the Boston Clothing Co. Comment on the article would be out of place.

— From November 18 to December 11th twenty-seven cases of diphtheria were reported to the Board of Health of Woburn, seven of which were fatal. On Monday six more cases were reported.

— William Malloy lost the thumb and one finger on his left hand at Eustice Cummings's establishment last Friday by getting his hand into the cog-wheel of a belt knife. He went to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

— Last week Charles Kendall, at his home at Montvale, fell a distance of thirty feet from a scaffold and, striking a barrel in his fall, was so seriously injured that he had to be taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

— For only just an average suburban newspaper it strikes us that our good neighbor, the Advertiser, is running up a pretty steep list of snow storms this season. At the rate it is going on we shall have a thousand of them before next dog-days.

—Mr. Dodge, the jeweler, presents as fine an array of holiday wares as can be found in town. The goods are all of the very best warranted to wash, and are just what the people need for Christmas presents. Please take a look at his windows and show-cases.

— On Wednesday morning while Samuel Cummings, son of Mr. Ebenezer Cummings, was loading a cow onto a sled, at his place on Cambridge street, had some ribs broken and his face badly injured by the upsetting of the sled. Dr. Bartlett was called and attended to his injuries.

— Mr. Alek Grant has a superior stock of fashionable and very genteel suitings, heavy, handsome materials for overcoats, and everything else in apple-pie shape. His new quarters are light, warm and pleasant, and, as his trade is tiptop, he feels quite contented and happy. Grant makes up nobby suits.

— Rev. Daniel Dorchester, D. D., Chairman of the Constitutional Prohibition State Committee, will lecture on constitutional prohibition in the Methodist Church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. This subject is agitating the public mind everywhere, and as it is important that people should become educated in it, the Church ought to be filled next Sunday evening.

—A critical observer of weather and things, a man of brains, and of a reflective cast of thought, remarks to us that never, before this year, since Adam first wore jacket and trowsers, has snow been known to fall in November, in this latitude, and remain on to away along into December. Remaining on is the gist of this remark, or rather, the peculiarity of the present fall and winter. Will the Oldest Inhabitant rise and explain?

— To-morrow evening the the celebrated Spaulding's Bell-Ringers will give one of their very popular and highly enjoyable entertainments in Lyceum Hall, for particulars of which read the card in another column. This company has been in the concert field about seventeen years in which time it has travelled all over the civilized world and given thousands of entertainments. It is a good one, and Georgie Dean Spaulding always draws a full house.

— At a special meeting of the School Committee, held on Tuesday evening last, S. H. Patten was appointed janitor, vice T. D. Hevey, resigned; and the janitorship of the Union street school was also assigned to Mr. Patten. On account of the non-attendance of pupils, the following teachers have for the present been retired: Miss Effie I. Parker of the Hudson School; Miss Nellie A. Hanson of the Montvale School; Miss Gertrude Tabor of the Cedar street School, mixed.

— Better or richer Christmas stocks were never before exhibited by our dealers. Each year is a little ahead of its predecessor —things more beautiful and more of them are offered for sale. The stores all up and down the streets are lined with things beautiful and appropriate for the merry holiday season, so no trouble need be experienced by any one in getting what is wanted. In due season the windows will be filled, decked out, and arranged to catch the public eye, and then look out for a big rush and big sales.

— By reference to a card in this paper it will be seen that the operetta, "Bo-peep," followed by the comedietta' "My Uncle's Will," will be given in the vestry of the Unitarian Church on next Tuesday evening at 7.45 sharp, reserved seat tickets for which may be obtained at Mr. Fred Leed's drug store, corner Montvale Avenue and Main street. This will be a good entertainment, and those who are not there will miss a neat thing. The price of general admission is a mere nothing, so to speak, and if the Unitarian vestry isn't filled plum full it will be strange.

— Mr. J. J. Cameron, the harness maker on Walnut street, buried a little son, five years old, last Monday, who died of diptheria. The funeral at the house was a sad scene. It was attended by only the father of the dead boy and Mr. V. M. Simons the minister—the wife and other children being in bed sick at the time. Those were the only persons present until near the close of the clergyman's prayer when Mr. Lawrence Reade, the undertaker, entered the room to perform his part of the lonely, melancholly ceremony. It is not often that such a sad funeral is attended.

— Try to excuse and smooth it over as much as we may, there is no getting around the fact that December has been a very cold backward and disagreeable month so far. There is a plenty of good sleighing now and has been, off and on, for some weeks. The plumbers begin to appear out in sealskin cloaks and lavender kids and have already laid by money enough to pay all expenses at the seaside next summer. And the future holds out no encouraging signs. The prospect isn't pleasing, for pretty soon "the days will begin to lengthen and the cold begin to strengthen," the snow to heap up in huge drifts, and so on to the end of the chapter.

— Under a city government the Republicans of Woburn would have a good representation in both branches.

— Young fellows who go on the ice would do well to leave an obituary notice at this office to save an error on our part.

— Storms have interrupted the School sessions this week to some extent. On several days it has snowed and made things uncomfortable and nasty for teachers and pupils.

— A prominent citizen of Fitchburg says: "I am convinced that our money is more economically spent, and the tax-payer realizes more for his money, than was the case under the town government.

— In his card in this paper Fred Leeds asks the people to examine his very fine stock of Christmas goods before purchasing, to which we join our request to do so by way of emphasis. It will be found a good one.

— Rev. Mr Keyes has closed his series of revival meetings at Tapleyville and is now at home. He goes soon to Taunton, to which city he has had a call to do evangelical work, where he will probably remain some weeks.

— Great rafts of our people should go to North Woburn this evening to attend the fine entertainment to be given by the Union Workers of that village. The horse cars will leave there at 10 o'clock—in season to get home early.

— We have said probably a thousand times that communications unaccompanied by the writers' names—not necessarily for publication, but as a gaurantee of good faith—cannot be inserted in this paper. Will "Vale" please make a note of this?

— The Burlington news from our prompt and excellent correspondent was crowded out last week together with several profound editorials and sparkling local items. We trust this will answer for notice and apology to our fair scribe of Burlington.

— Town creditors for the month of November were duly and squarely paid off on Tuesday last, the regular settling day. Mr. Dow hands over the little, precious envelopes with such a grace and courtesy that it does ones soul good to recieve the money.

— The junior member of the dry goods house of C. A. Smith & Son returned from New York late last week with a large stock and great variety of goods particularly for the holiday trade. The selections were made with a view to the wants of this community, and to say they are all admirable would be drawing it very mild. A cask of foreign ware is as beautiful as anything we ever saw in that line, and cannot fail to please purchasers especially as it comes very cheap. There is a large number of delightful little sets in the stock which will be likely to go rapidly. We notice too a variety of elegant rugs, ranging in cost from seventy-five cents to five dollars, which are peculiarly well adapted for Chritmas gifts. They are worth looking at. Besides these Mr. Smith bought many other seasonable goods, which the public are respectfully invited to call and examine.

— One of Boston's representative business houses is the firm of Jones, McDuffee & Stratton. Their well-known establishment at 120 Franklin Street corner of Federal Streets, contains one of the largest and most attractive varieties of china goods, while in glass and pottery ware an enchanting display is made. The lover of the beautiful could most profitably pass the morning in examining the elegant goods at this store, and even then he would be inclined to feel loth to leave, as some new and striking article is constantly engaging one's attention. At this season of the year, when the weather reminds us the holidays are near, there is a large demand for articles for presentation and for household use. Jones, McDuffee & Stratton offer an enticing variety of goods admirably adapted to all purposes, including novelties in dinner, tea and toilets sets, duplex lamps, plaques, umbrella vases, etc. These goods may now be examined, and we advise our readers to make an early inspection.

— It seems as though all the things manufactured for Christmas gifts grow more beautiful and expensive every succeeding year. The wits of artists and skill of artisans are put more and more to their trumps to design and make wares whose beauty and cost shall meet the demands of the period, and if this thing continues where will we land? It takes a mint of money now to supply a family of children with presents, and if it does not come to a halt pretty soon only the very rich can afford to entertain Santa Claus on his Christmas visits. Why bless us! Look back say only a dozen years or so ago and mark the difference between holiday gift goods then and now! Call to mind if you can what filled the hung-up stockings of the little ones in those days —days that seem simple, primative and poor to 1882—and mark what a race of extravagance we have been, and are still, running in these matters of holiday presents. A penny tin whistle, a gingerbread elephant, a six-penny doll—why, these were something grand, the children of fifteen years ago thought, and they would go nearly wild over them; but it is not so now by a long chalk. How little noses would turn up, and little lips pout, at such poor, simple, homely offerings now! This theme might be pursued with profit a good deal farther than we have the time or space to go, therefore we will leave it for some abler pencil to harp upon, if so minded any other pencil should be.

— The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church are making great preparations for their annual fair which takes place on next Wednesday and Thursday evenings. They are going to have a big one.

— Col. W. T. Grammer has been appointed postmaster of Woburn and the appointment has gone to the Senate where it will be confirmed. To save considerable trouble in making reports Col. Grammer will not take possession of the office until January 1st.

— The School Committee at a special meeting last evening, considered the question of the prevalence of diphtheria in town and made the following expression: "That the condition of the public health does not require the closing of the schools and that no unusual cause of alarm exists."

— The next entertainment of G. A. R. will be given on next Thursday evening at their hall. There will be vocal and instrumental music by Miss Hattie Hyde, Mr. Albert Cummings, Miss Grace Healey, a commedietta by a Somerville troupe, and the best of all, a narrative of the wreck of the Wateree at Arnica, Peru, on August 13, 1868, by Surgeon G. F. Winslow, U S. N.

— The edict against coasting in the streets has thrown a sad and disappointed shade over the faces of the small people of the village who look upon it as an abridgement of personal liberty hard to be brooked. The order is regarded as tyrranical and unjust to the last degree, more especially by those who had new cutters given them early in the season in the use of which grand times were anticipated. The question uppermost in the youthful mind of Woburn just now is, "have we any rights which the town authorities are bound to respect?" The unanimous opinion is, that they have, and in the edict against coasting one of those rights, and a very important one, has been ruthlessly violated by men who evidently have forgotten that they once were young. These young people, remembering Lexington, two of the patriotic victims of which lie in Woburn's old graveyard; and Bunker Hill, where Woburn men fought for personal and civil liberty, their souls revolt at the bare mention of having their sacred rights invaded and trampled on by men "clothed in a little brief authority." It is rather more than their freedom-loving stomachs can bear with grace and equanimity. What course the youth will take to regain their freedom and establish their privileges on a firm foundation is left entirely to conjecture.

NORTH WOBURN.

Please bear in mind that the North Woburn Union Workers will give their fair, festival and entertainment this, Friday, evening. Bear in mind too that it will be a very excellent time, for all due and necessary preparations to make it such have been attended to by ladies "in whose vocabulary there is no such word as fail." Let engine hall be crowded to its utmost capacity, for there will be genuine enjoyment at the fair.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gentlemen— * * * * I have had ringworm humor and salt-rheum so badly that my body was covered with raw sores; so, also, my head and face. I have had many number of doctors in the last seven years, and none of them could cure me. One day my mother was in the city of Taunton, and found one of your cook books, and in reading it I found many people testifying to cures from the use of your Sarsaparilla and Olive Ointment. I felt forced to try it, although I had seen many things advertised that never did me any good. I have now taken two small bottles and one large one of Sarsaparilla, and used three boxes of Ointment. I now call myself cured. Nothing can be seen of the humor but the dim outlines of the sores. I shall take two more bottles, and then the cure will be complete.

I am gratefully yours,

Biliousness, Sick Headache.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Gents—Please send me by express two bottles HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA and a few Cook Books for distribution. Your preparation has worked wonders in the case of my wife, who has been troubled with sick headache and biliousness for years. She only took one-half teaspoonful at a dose, and has not been so well for five years as now. She found that within a week after taking it she felt very much better, and is now entirely free from those severe headaches. She has not taken any of any account since last spring, and what little she had is lent to do some others some good, and we must have it in the house.

Yours truly,
HOMER B. NASH.

JOURNAL COURT RECORD.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT OF EASTERN MIDDLESEX.

Parker L. Converse, Judge.

Again it becomes our solemn duty to write out a readable report of the business transacted at the Hall of Justice in Dodge's Block this week. It is far from being a pleasing task, except to those who love the dark side of life and revel in its sorrows and miseries, and as that is not our style, it is with a great degree of reluctance that we sieze our trusty pencil to portray in somber hues the doings of that august body. His Honor has held aloft the Scales of Justice with a commendable degree of evenness and impartiality; the courteous and affable Clerk has smoothed with sympathetic words and kind demeanor the rough path of the accused; while the attendant officers have been careful to add no pang to the grief that filled the sorrowing souls of the poor unfortunates unwillingly brought to Justice's awful Bar. Johanna Carroll was up for selling liquor contrary to law, and was fined $50, and costs. She appealed, hoping to receive a greater degree of leniency at the hands of District Attorney Stevens, in which belief she is bound to slip up. A woman arraigned at the bar for selling rum! But our pencil shrinks from the duty of writing words befitting such a case. A few simple, inoffensive cases of intoxication closed the docket at our hour for going to press.

Make your wife a present of a black silk dress and buy it of C. A. Smith & Son.

You can find the nicest assortment of mats and rugs you ever saw at C. A. Smith & Son's.

A silk umbrella would be a good present. You can buy one as low as $2.50 at C. A. Smith & Son's.

You can find an elegant assortment of pocket books and plush and leather bags at C. A. Smith & Son's.

You can find some very handsome felt and woolen druggets and can buy them cheaper than you can in Boston of C. A. Smith & Son.

Look at our hand run Spanish lace fichues. We have beautiful designs in lace ties and fichues from 25 cents to $5.00 each. C. A. Smith & Son.

Every young lady wants a pair of Terra Cotta Mousquetaire kid gloves. We have secured a special bargain to sell at only $1.25 a pair. C. A. Smith & Son.

Mr. Smith secured during his visit to New York last week many fancy articles which will not be found elsewhere, also many bargains in staple goods. It will pay you to visit our store. C. A. Smith & Son.

Two weeks ago Messrs. R. H. White & Co., of Boston, advertised a certain make of blankets as "The best blankets ever sold at $5.00 a pair." Messrs. C. A. Smith & Son of our town have been selling the same blankets all the season at $5.00 a pair and they claim as well, that they are the best blankets ever sold for the price. A pair would be a splendid present for some one.

The Ladies of the surrounding towns, especially Winchester ladies, should make it a point to visit the Woburn stores during holiday week, instead of the bustle and snarl of a trip to Boston. They will enjoy a pleasant stroll through well stocked stores finding everything they want for Christmas presents and fully as cheap as in Boston. We invite every one to visit our store during Holiday week. C. A. Smith & Son.

Millions Given Away.

Millions of Bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have been given away as Trial Bottles of the large size. This enormous outlay would be disastrous to the proprietors, were it not for the rare merits possessed by this wonderful medicine. Call at Hill's Drug Store, opposite the common and get a Trial Bottle free, and try for yourself. It never fails to cure.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

WINCHESTER.

Well, let us try again:—[Star] Nuf ced: shake!

Mr. Henry Rolfe is building a house on Mt. Vernon street.

It is said that the Baptists are going to hold their Sunday School in the afternoon as formerly.

The Star speaks in a flattering language of Miss Livingstone, who with Mr. Flagg, gave a very fine entertainment here last week. She deserves it.

The fall term of the schools in this town close for a two weeks' vacation on Friday, December 22. The winter term will begin January 8, and continue 12 weeks.

Mr. Charles V., brother of Mr. Henry Whitten of this place, was elected an Alderman of Boston last Tuesday. He is one of the heavy merchants aud rich men of the "Hub."

For the benefit of the Good Will Club some ameteurs will give "The Cricket on the Hearth" in the vestry of the Unitarian church, on Thursday evening, December 21. We shall all be there to see.

An effort is being made to have the Hon. Rufus S. Frost of Chelsea, President of the Law and Order League, to preside over the meeting Friday evening, Dec. 52, at which Mrs. Foster of Iowa will speak.

The annual Christmas festival of the Children of the Unitarian Society will be held in the vestry of the Church on Saturday afternoon, December 22. No doubt it will be an exceedingly pleasant festival.

On Christmas Eve the Congregational Sunday School will give a concert which is now in course of preparation. It will be a good one, for no pains will be spared to give the people their full money's worth of real, genuine pleasure.

G. A. R.—A. D. Weld Post has elected the following officers: Commander—W. A. Snow; S. V. C.—Royal S. Carr: J. V. C.—James E. Byrnes; Chaplain—S. C. Small; Quartermaster—H. Parker 2d; Surgeon—E. Windsor; O. D.—M. E. Lym; O. G.—G. A. Hall.

The Star advocates increase of pay to our firemen. A good many will agree with it in the recommendation. Firemen ought to have pay enough to induce them to take an interest in the Department, and reimburse them for some of the wear and tear to which they are subjected.

Hon J. M. Usher of Medford will address the Reform Club temperance meeting next Sunday. Mr. A. E. Rowe will preside. It was announced from the Pulpit that Mr. Usher would speak last Sunday but the storm prevented. An interesting meeting and a full house may be expected.

Dr. Winsor has gone South for his health, which is not first rate, although erroneously stated to be so in last weeks' JOURNAL. The rigors of our northern winters are rather more than the doctor can stand with comfort and safety, and he has gone to a milder climate to see how that will effect him. Everybody here hopes he will return well and robust.

At a regular communication of William Parkman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., held on Tuesday evening last, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. M.—John Dugan Twombly; S. W.—James Herbert Dwinell; J. W.—Edwin Robinson; Treasurer—George F. Parker;—Secretary—William F. Fitch; Member of Board of Management—George S. Littlefield.

Great preparations are being made for the Sunday School concert of the Baptist Church to take place on Christmas Eve. It is expected to be of more than ordinary interest as the exercises will all be appropriate to the blessed season of Christmas, with an uncommonly large number of participants. The concert will probably draw a large attendance, as it will deserve to, for the programme is calculated to be very entertaining.

It is reported that about $300 were the net proceeds of the annual sale of the Ladies' Friendly Society, on last Thursday evening week. It was a very successful sale and more than met the expectations of the most sanguine. It was a pleasant affair too. A song by Mr. T. P. Ayer was prime, as also was the singing by a selected choir of children under the direction of Mrs. Bailey, the accomplished teacher. "Puss in Boots," the fairy lake, and a collection of India pictures were fine.

Your typo made a big error in announcing the lecture of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster—it should have read December 22 instead of February 22. The date of this lecture should be kept in mind, and when it is given a very large audience should greet the talented lady. She enjoys a reputation second to no other temperance advocate in this country, and the services of no one, that I am aware of, of either sex, are in such constant demand as hers. She is a very gifted lady; a true philanthropist, a lover of the cause; and she is very eloquent.

A public meeting of the Village Improvment Association was held in Harmony Hall on last Friday evening, which was fairly attended considering the inclemency of weather. There were several visitors from Medford, and among the prominent citizens present I noticed Messrs. George S. Littlefield, J. H. Tyler, D. N. Skillings, J. T. Wilson, Edwin Ginn, G. H. Eustace, C. F. Lunt and others. President Twombly occupied the Chair. Several excellent speeches were made during the evening, Rev. Mr. Cutter of West Medford leading off with some well-timed and eloquent remarks. He was followed by Mr. Brown, President of the West Medford Association, Mr. James Russell of Winchester, and Elizur Wright of Medford, who, of course, had to tell us all about the Middlesex Fells. The remarks of all these gentlemen were pleasant very and interesting. My idea is that all these Village Improvement Associations greatly mistake their mission in simply laboring to adorn their towns. To bring in business and increase the growth of the towns are the real objects to be obtained.

At a Bad Time.

Commander J. B. Coghlan U. S. N., writes to us from the Navy Yard at Mare Island, Cal.—An enforced residence of two years in California made me the subject of most painful attacks of rheumatism. Consultation upon my case by eminent Naval and other surgeons failed to afford me the slightest relief. Dr. Hoyle recommended to me St. Jacobs Oil, the happy result of the use of which was my complete and wonderful cure.— Washington (D. C.) Army & Navy Register.

Law and Order League.

On last Saturday evening the Woburn Branch of the Massachusetts Law and Order League met in Grand Army Hall for the purpose of perfecting an organization which had been partially consummated some ten days previously. Numerically the attendance was very gratifying and encouraging, and in weight of personal character and influence much more so. The meeting was entirely harmonious, and there was perfect concord of sentiment respecting the execution of the laws. The following officers were unanimously elected: President—Hon. John Cummings; Vice-Presidents—Charles B. Bryant, Leonard Thompson, Edward D. Hayden, John Johnson, James Maguire; Treasurer—Charlie A. Jones; Secretary—Henry M. Aldrich; Executive Committee—the President, Treasurer and Secretary, ex officio, Jacob Brown, Griffin Place, Luke Warren Fowle, Major James W. McDonald, J. Henry Symonds. On accepting the presidency Hon. John Cummings made an excellent speech, in which he set forth the duty of good citizens in respect to the evil of rumselling, and his willingness to co-operate with the friends of temperance in their efforts to restrict the traffic. The remarks gave great satisfaction to the audience. Other speeches were made, all tending in the right direction, and imbued with a spirit inimical to the illegal sale of intoxicating drinks and other violations of law. The meeting was composed of representatives of our best business and social society, and in this respect was one of the best ever held in Woburn.

BURLINGTON.

SOCIABLE.—The sociable has been postponed and notice of it will be hereafter given.

S. S. CONCERT.—The Sunday school are preparing a fine exercise for Christmas Eve.

LITERARY UNION.—The Literary Union will soon present the life and works of another New England poet, in whom all are interested. The society numbers above thirty members. The Whittier entertainment was very successful.

CONCERT.—A grand concert by a company from Lynn will be given in the Town Hall, Thursday evening December 21, under the auspices of the Literary Union. Mr. M. H. Nichols of Lynn will direct the affair and a very fine programme will be presented. As many excellent artists will appear at this entertainment, it is hoped that a large number will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear them. The proceeds will be devoted to the present object of the Union, the purchase of a piano for the Sunday school.

The Literary Union gave a very pleasant entertainment in the Town Hall, Tuesday evening, Dec. 5. The programme was devoted to a study of the life and works of the Quaker poet Whittier. Mr. Arthur Wood gave a well-written essay, after which numerous representative poems were recited by different members of the society, and general questions on the subject of poets and poetry were asked and answered. Rev. Leander Thompson of North Woburn, a personal friend of Mr. Whittier, was present and kindly gave an account of the poet as a man, with many interesting reminiscences, which added much to the pleasure of the occasion. After the exercises, refreshments were served in the supper room.

Health of Connecticut.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 10th.—The monthly report of the State Board of Health, published on the 7th inst., says long diseases hold the front rank. Consumption has been as fatal as lung fever, and there has been a large per centage of deaths from bronchitis and congestion of the lungs. A peculiar spasmodic cough has also been very common, not distinctive enough to be called whooping cough, and attacking adults as well as children. Neuralgia and rheumatism are reported as being prevalent and exceedingly obstinate and unyielding to treatment. Since the introduction into our section of the Craig's cough and consumption cure, pulmonary diseases are rapidly disappearing, and now that the excellencies as a curative power of the French crown plaster is being generally known, neuralgia and rheumatism are complaints not often heard of.

ALMOST AS BAD.

What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, b th point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

LITERARY NOTICES.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for January is just out, a marvel of beauty, the most costly, evidently, ever issued. There are two unrivaled steel engravings; the first, Cherry Ripe, an exquisite copy of Millais' celebrated picture; the other, Psyche Listening to the Flute also exceptionally charming. Then there is a double-sized colored steel fashion plate, which is a picture as well: and some thirty other fashion patterns, besides a score of designs in embroidery, crewel-work, etc., etc. But the great feature is a magnificent colored pattern in Berlin-work for a curtain-border, chair-stripe, etc., etc., the most expensive and beautiful, yet useful embellishment, perhaps, ever published in any magazine. There are two novelets, The Professional Beauty, by Frank Lee Benedict, and Rule or Ruin, by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, besides several completed stories by other first-class authors, and the very best always write for this magazine. The reading matter is increased also, there being one hundred and four pages in the number. PETERSON, in short, is cheaper and better than ever for 1883. The price is still only two dollars a year. To clubs it is astonishingly low, viz: six copies for nine dollars, with an extra copy to the person getting up the club. Or seven copies for ten dollars and a half, with both an extra copy and a large-size engraving, Christ Before Pilate, or a photograph Album, to the person getting up the club. Subscribe to no magazine till you have seen a copy of this. Specimens are sent, gratis, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address Chas. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia Pa.

O. Ditson & Co., send us a few samples of their new publications of sheet music. If this is the kind of thing that they do, the great store has gone into the picture gallery business. First comes Mrs. Langtry's well-known face, adorning the Jersey Lily Polka, (40 cts.) by Turner. Next the roseate face of the popular composer, H. M. Dow adorns his Laughing Song, (50 cts.) Then a charming rose chromo accompanies Rose Leaf Waltz, (40 cts.) by E. Mack. A kind of Bridge at Midnight picture is on the title of Old Oaken Bucket, (40 cts.) and Golden Youth Galop (40 cts.), pretty and easy pieces by Charles Kinkel; and The Lilies Clustered Fair and Tall, (35 cts.) by Celia Thaxter has an appropriate flower title. Three Nice Old Ladies (30 cts.) is pictureless but comic, and Many a Bird (30 cts.) sings to us in German and English. There are also two brief Skethes for Piano by Strelezki, in classical style. They are Greeting of Spring, (25 cts.) and Galop, (25 cts.

The children of Israel were once fed by manna sent from heaven. This was an undoubted case of "God-send." The amelioration of human ills and ailments has been often undertaken and as often failed. Ely's Cream Balm, however, "has been weighed in the balance and not found wanting." It is a sovereign, speedy, certain and pleasant cure for Catarrh and cold in the head. Thousands of persons have attested this fact. "Ely's Cream Balm is a God-send," writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H. on May 22d, 1882. "I had Catarrh for three years, had tried nearly all remedies but to no purpose. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed quite freely, and I thought the sores in it would never heal. Your Balm has cured me." This preparation is not a liquid or a snuff, and is easily applied. Can you, reader, afford, to experiment with injurious irritants and injections when a pleasant cure is at hand?

According to the English papers, buccaneering is carried on in the South Pacific under the protection of the British flag. These buccaneers, or "beach-combers," are professedly traders between the Pacific Islands and Australia, but their real occupation is kidnapping the Pacific Islanders for the Australian plantations. The kidnapped islanders are for the most part imported into New South Wales. In the past five years the Governor of New South Wales has granted 66 licenses to shippers to "recruit" about 2400 islanders. These persons have a roving commission, and, having no Government agent on board, go pretty much where they like, and do pretty much what they like. In consequence of the outrages committed by them it has become dangerous for missionaries, or unarmed men to land in the Pacific Islands. Australian papers have from time to time denounced the disgaceful traffic.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Skirts of French crape and waists of satin are worn for evening dress. They are made up over satin and the effect of the dull and lustrous stuff placed in contrast is very good. The Pompadour combination of pink and blue is a favorite in these costumes, roses being massed together in borders for the front of the skirt, and forming shoulder straps.

"Slow and steady wins the race." Steadily, but not slowly, Kidney-Wort is distancing all competition for universal popularity and usefulness. This celebrated remedy can now be obtained in the usual dry vegetable form, or in liquid form. It is put up in the latter way for the especial convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It will be found very concentrated and will act with equal efficiency in either form. Read advertisement.

"Ah dearest," sighed the young man, kneeling at the feet of his owneest own, "dost thou know what of all outward things is nearest my heart?" "Really, I can't say," she replied, "but if you have any regard for your health in this terrible weather, I should think it was a flannel shirt." She was too practical, and it broke the engagement.

A Nevada paper says that very few of the fortunes made in the early days of the Comstock mines are retained to-day. The men who acquired wealth at that time, it continues, "were the most extravagant the world ever knew—even the Pacific coast Argonauts were parsimonious compared with them. They built the finest private residences, owned the best horses and drank the highest priced wines that money could buy. To-day the men who can proudly claim the possession of independent bank accounts as the result of their labors on the Comstock can be counted on one's fingers, and the men who were rich in the sixties are now reduced to nearly absolute poverty, and can be counted by the hundreds."

Heartily Recommended.

Don't condemn a good thing because you have been deceived by worthless nostrums. Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured many in this section of nervous disorders, and we recommend it heartily to such sufferers.—News.

A stock raiser in Texas, in a recent letter to a friend, narrates that the other evening his Chinese cook came into the house in a perturbed condition, and with an oder of serious trouble about him. "What in the world have you been doing John?" exclaimed the master, as he made for the door. "Me catchee labbit, but me lettee him glo again. Melican labbit smellee like hellee. Oh, my glacious!"

The Woburn Journal

LITERARY NOTICES.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for January, from the frontispiece—which is a masterly engraving from Rembrant's celebrated portrait of the Burgomaster—to the last page of the Drawer, is a remarkably beautiful and interesting Number. The opening article is the first of the long-expected series of papers by George H. Boughton, entitled "Artist Strolls in Holland," and illustrated from drawings by the author and E. A. Abbey. The illustrations are what might be expected from such masters; and the article is so quaint and so picturesque in itself as to make one wish that all descriptive articles might be written by artists. J. C. Beard's illustrations for Mr. Charles F. Holder's entertaining article, "Living Lamps," are beautiful and novel representation of phosphorescent phenomena. Ernest Ingersoll, as a writer, and A. C. Redwood, as an artist, co-operate in a most interesting representation of "A Redwood Logging-Camp" full of pictures of the Coast Range region of California. This is the first of a series of papers prepared by Mr. Ingosoll and Mr. Redwood, and will soon be followed by others describing Washington Territory. Colonel Higginson continues his American History series, with a chapter entitled "The Old English Seamen," showing what the Cabots, Hawkins, Drake, Cavendish, and Raleigh did for the maritime supremacy of England in America in the sixteenth century. The article is beautifully illustrated. Conrad Wilson contributes a paper on the possibilities of the American Dairy. In fiction and poetry the number is unusually strong. Austin Dobson contributes The Ladies of St. James's: a proper new Ballad of Country and Town," illustrated by Abbey. J. T. Trowbridge contributes "Widow Brown's Christmas"—a New England story in verse—illustrated by Frost; and there are two Herrick poems illustrated by Abbey. Besides the serial novels by Miss Woolson and William Black, there are three short stories: "The Rosary of Hearts," by Mrs. H. M. Plunkett, illustrated by Dielman; "Tit for Tat," by Charles Reade, illustrated; and "Dick's Christmas," by Edward Everett Hale. There is also a characteristic sketch by Charles Phelps, "The New Year's Log-Rolling." Mr. George William Curtis, in the Editor's Easy Chair, defends the good old Saxon custom of dining our English guests, discusses Mr. Spencer's views concerning America, points out the plutocrats tendencies of our time, especially in politics, and pays a tribute to the memory of the late Francis G. Shaw. The other Editorial departments are fuller than usual, and are well sustained.

THE WHEELMAN for December is a handsome and readable number, in both of which particulars it strongly recommends itself to the patronage of bicyclists. It is finely illustrated, printed on thick tinted paper in large, clear type, and in other points of artistic and mechanical excellence takes no back seat for the best of them. The contents are fresh, lively, spicy and interesting. THE WHEELMAN is published in Boston by The Wheelman Co.

We are in early receipt of the January, or Christmas, number of FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE, which on careful examination we find to be a supurb one. Of the publications designed for Sunday reading this MAGAZINE stands in the forefront, and deservedly so, for it possesses a great deal of genuine merit, and for good, fresh, solid reading it is not excelled. Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is its editor, one of the most eminent divines in this country, and of course the MAGAZINE is edited with great ability. The January number, devoted principally to Christmas themes, is profusely and beautifully illustrated by artists of note, while its table of contents shows a great array of very interesting articles by the best writers. The SUNDAY MAGAZINE ought to be a regular visitor in every household. Published by Frank Leslie, N. Y.

A Parent's Duty.

There is a habit among parents about which, although we hope it is not as prevalent amongst our readers as others, we feel moved to say a word. It is that of impatience toward children, because of their propensity to ask many questions which seem silly to the adult and experienced mind.

A writer who has given evidence of a wide range of observation and a discriminating judgment has furnished a striking plea for childhood. He asks parents to imagine themselves in a strange country, where everything would be unknown to them, and asks them if they would not be apt to make coustant inquiries of the older inhabitants, and so not exhibit their ignorance, but do it in a way well calculated to excite the mirth of the questioned? He goes on to answer his own question affirmatively, and to show what these adults in a strange land would do, unless they were downright dolts, as the only means of acquiring information.

What are little children but strangers in a strange land? Everything is new to them. The range of their vision is very narrow at first. As it gradually widens they become actively curious; so much so that it requires a very well informed and wide-awake parent to satisfy their curiosity.—But suppose he or she fails to answer the hundred and one questions prompted by this curiosity, is the questioned justified in getting out of patience with the questioner? Surely not. Much less should the little prattler be scolded for "asking so many silly questions," perhaps by way of covering up conscious ignorance of which ought to have been learned by the parent as a preparation for parentage. Have patience, parents, with the intense desire to ask questions, however foolish they may seem to you, which may be shown by your little ones.

An Old Time Bear Story.

"A very odd kind of a providence happened lately in our neighborhood, viz:—Mr. Rebulon, a farmer, living about five miles northeast by north of this township, having trained up a couple of large bears to the plough and other services, clapped them before his sled last week, with twenty shipples of wheat for the new city. The animals drew extremely well for four miles and a half, when the halter of the near bear giving away, the farmer set about replacing it; but while he was thus employed, the brute, seizing him by the right leg, tore it miserably, and both bears hauling at once, ran away with the sled, so that, with the utmost difficulty he got home in four hours on foot. Messengers were dispatched to look for the sled and cargo, and two days being spent in fruitless search, they were given up for lost; but on the third, at noon, the noise of a team near the house was heard, and young Gad. Stanhope jumped up to see who was coming, when behold! to his astonishment it proved to be two bears drawing the sled into the barn, with no earthly thing in it except four large bears and three cubs. The lad and two men that happened to be then in the house, ran nimbly, and shutting the barn door, with my long gun I shot them all through a crevice."

If you are a frequenter or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all new countries—ague, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880.

I have sold Hop Bitters for four years and there is no medicine that surpasses them for bilious attacks, kidney complaints and many diseases incident to this malarial climate.

H. T. ALEXANDER.

It costs England $125 to fire one of her big guns at an enemy, which made it necessary for her to kill about seven Egyptians at each shot in order to get the worth of her money.

How to make a Live Town.

1. Sell your building lots at reasonable prices.
2. Induce business men to locate in your town.
3. Patronize the business men of your own town.
4. Speak well of worthy public enterprises.
5. Speak well to strangers of your town and people.
6. Encourage your local newspaper by subscribing for, advertising in, and paying for it.
7. If anything should be undertaken that may be of benefit to the town do not speak ill of it to others because you happen to be prejudiced against it.
8. Always sum up your expenses when you visit places outside your town to buy goods.
9. If you have any surplus money, do not spend it in far-off speculations, but give yourself and the town the benefit of it by establishing some profitable factory.

Choice Extracts from Druggists.

"Best kidney medicine on our shelves."
"Our lady customers highly praise them.
"Physicians prescribe them in this town."
"The largest bottle and best medicine."

A Nevada girl had a very perceptible moustache, and on the morning of her wedding day she undertook to remove it with a caustic preparation. Her lip was burned to such a black and swollen condition that she refused to show herself to the guests. As the bridegroom would not consent to a postponement, the ceremony was performed privately, and the company consoled themselves with a dinner. The bride started on her honeymoon journey closely veiled, and unkissed by her friends.

Mothers Should Know it.

"My wife," says Wigglesworth, abstractedly lifting a handful of prunes from the box, "is one of the most economical women I ever saw. When-ever I smoke a cigar in the house she makes me blow the smoke on her plants to kill the bugs, and stands ready with a little box to catch the ashes, which she uses for tooth powder, while the stub that is left she soaks in water and treats the flower-pots to a Turkish bath with it. That's the kind of a woman you want to tie to, young man."

that so many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable oder of their breath, it is mainly caused by disordered digestion and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

Says The Independent: "The prohibition victory in Iowa is complete. Now for Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, and the other States. Let the crusade go on. These States may be more nearly ready for prohibition than the political leaders think. Still our Christian Temperance women have only begun their campaign. They have scored but the beginning of their victories. Let the church, the pulpit, the thrift and the morality of the country support and encourage them to go forward."

A Knabe in the White House.

(From the Baltimore American.)

There was seen yesterday at Messrs. Knabe & Co.'s factory a magnificent concert grand, just finished by them for the presidential mansion. President Arthur, who is a thorough connoisseur of music, in selecting a piano for the White House, decided in favor of the Knabe Piano as his preference, and ordered accordingly the instrument refered to. It is a concert grand, of beautiful finish, in a richly carved rosewood case, and of superb tone and action—an instrument worthy in every respect of the place it is to occupy. It was shipped to its destination yesterday.

FRIDAY, DEC. 22, 1882.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

VOLUME XXXIII.

This is the last number of Volume 32 of the JOURNAL, and next week it will enter on its 33d year. Its age, if nothing else, entitles it to respect. But so also does its management and worth we think. The JOURNAL is a good family newspaper—one of the best in the county—and always has been. It has always been well conducted by good newspaper men, but never better, we modestly affirm, than at present.

The patronage of the JOURNAL is first rate. It was never poor. The people have confidence in its stability, in its opinions, in its news, and they like it. A good many folks in and around Woburn wouldn't know hardly how to keep house without the JOURNAL, and it grows more and more a household necessity in this region of country.

We are very grateful for the kind treatment and liberal patronage received from the people of Woburn, Winchester, Burlington, and other towns, during our sojourn here, and we mean to try to deserve them a good deal more in the future than in the past. Our best thanks, however, they will accept now.

We make no further promises concerning Volume 33, except that we shall do our level best to please everybody. When we fail in that the remedy will be, to stop the paper.

CHRISTMAS.

What Christmas is, its origin, and the day on which it falls this year, are too well understood to need any words about them from us. Every year a great deal is written, said and sung concerning the merry season, and the present is no exception to the rule.

Whether so intended or not, the chief characteristic of Christmas is merriment. It is meant to be, and generally is, a happy season, especially to the young. Jolity and good cheer are expected to rule the day, and generally do.

This is right. Christmas is a time to rejoice and be glad. Merriment, glee, and good times are in order, for the day we celebrate brought more joy and gladness to the world than any other since time began. That fact should be remembered while enjoying the good things with which a kind providence has provided us.

While happy ourselves, it is a duty, and should be a pleasure, to see to it that all others are made happy too. There is enough for Christian hearts and hands to do on that day. Let them attend to it.

☞ The Woburn JOURNAL quotes our statement that thirty-five hundred Republicans voted for Leopold Morse for Congress because they had kept an eye on him in previous years, and inquires how we can figure it out that Mr. Hayes could have been elected. We figure it in this way: Firstly, had Hayes been nominated Morse would not have run at all. Secondly, the larger part of those who voted for Morse would not have done so were Hayes the candidate. —Cambridge Chronicle.

You would modify your first statement, then? It was not, after all, Mr. Morse's merits that gave him the 3,500 disgruntled Republican votes, but Mr. Bowman's demerits, eh? That is the true way to put it, probably, and it is more than likely that Mr. Hayes would have been elected, if nominated.

☞ Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, returned Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to the Spanish Court, was given a grand reception at Bangor on Tuesday night by his hosts of friends and admirers. It was a notable occasion, and a great time generally. Mr. Hamlin, who has been in public office continuously for about forty years, says he has settled down in Bangor for good and all, but others say he has a sharp eye on the Portland Custom House. He is old enough, and been long enough at the public crib, to retire.

☞ Lest the star route case should drop out of the public mind it is deemed advisible to state in these columns that the trial is still in progress at Washington. Also, that it is likely to continue for several months to come. Before it began Attorney General Brewster promised to attend the trial whenever sober enough to do so, and as he has not yet been present his personal condition may easily be inferred.

☞ The January number of Watson's Illuminator fairly sparkles, coruscates, scintilates and dazzles with wit, mirth and jollity. It is the best thing to keep a Christmas dinner from "hurting" one that is printed in America. But it must be taken in moderate doses, else it will bu'st the patient. P. S. The reader need not be "well shaken before taken:" the Illuminator will do that for him.

☞ Congress has voted to take a recess from to-day to January 2, to give the members, who are a greatly overworked body of men, an opportunity to enjoy the festivities of the holidays. At first, with self-sacrificing spirit, they voted not to do so, but finally concluded to take their holiday with the rest of us.

☞ Possibly Congress, when it gets together after the holidays, may enact some sort of civil service reform legislation, but it would be full as safe to guess that it will not. Though the demand from the people is trumpet-toned, we have never been over sanguine that much would be done towards reforming the civil service this session.

☞ The price of the Boston Journal has been reduced to two cents, and the subscription to six dollars a year. Considering its value it is now the lowest priced paper in Boston.

☞ At a meeting held in Tremont Temple, Boston, last Friday afternoon, a Civil Service Reform Association was duly organized. Among the Vice-Presidents we find the name of E. D. Hayden, Esq., and E. P. Whitney, Esq., was chosen one of the Executive Committee, both of Woburn.

☞ We have been requested to announce in the columns of the JOURNAL that the 28th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association will be held in the English and Latin High School building, Montgomery street, Boston, on December 28, 29 and 30th instant.

☞ New Hampshire and some parts of Maine experienced a severe shock of earthquake on Tuesday night. No political significance is attached to the occurrance, though the Democratic press are not reconciled to such a view of the case.

☞ One of the Aldermen in the Portland, Maine, city government was dismissed from the Board a few days since for drunkenness. That seems like a strange item of news to come from the home of Neal Dow.

☞ The JOURNAL is emphatically of the opinion that a Town Meeting should be called at once to take steps for procuring a city charter. We know that nearly all of our most prominent citizens are in favor of this move.

☞ The chances are considered more than even in favor of the re-election of Senator Hoar. The sentiment of the Republican party leans strongly that way and it will not be disregarded by the Legislature.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON.

The JOURNAL wishes its hosts of patrons, and everybody else, A MERRY CHRISTMAS, and HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The Windows.

There are very fine displays of Christmas goods in the show windows of our principal stores, and they attract the attention of many passing lovers of beautiful things. There has evidently not been an attempt by any of the proprietors at unique exhibitions as on some former years, useful goods taking the place of Santa Claus, Kris Kringles, and the like.

As we came along up the street the display which Burgess makes takes the eye and pleases it. Very fine wares of all kinds fill the glass, and make a nice show.

Leeds makes a rare showing of Christmas cards, perfumery, and other goods. He is selling rapidly.

Copeland, Bowser & Co., have decked out their windows with elegant goods which look very handsome. They have had and are having an immense trade, and no wonder, for they have just what the people want for Christmas presents.

The windows of the Boston Clothing Company's store make a fine appearance. Mr. Buck has good taste and the goods gratify it. It is a nice display.

W. W. Hill makes a very fine showing of Christmas cards, glasses, wallets, bags, perfumes, and a great variety of other rich wares appropriate to the merry season. He is having a large trade.

Cummings's great millinery establishment is chock full. It would be difficult to imagine an article appropriate for a gift that cannot be found in his store. The windows are very handsomely arranged, and make an attractive appearance.

Robie's news depot comes to the front with lots and lots of pretty things, and a great many useful ones.

There are a great many beautiful things in the windows of A. E. Thompson's store, and inside may be found all that the heart can wish.

Frank Pierce always sets his shoes, slippers, rubbers, etc., out in an attractive manner, and has done so this year.

Dr. Dodge's windows are alive with rich Christmas gift goods. His stock of cards consists of an endless variety, and other handsome wares are to be seen in profusion.

C. A. Smith & Son, as usual, have decked out their show windows with fine taste. Nothing on the street makes a better appearance, or attracts more attention. Rich goods are seen through the great panes of glass, and by gas light they shine. They are selling heaps.

Horton, of course, has everything that can be thought of or imagined in the Christmas goods line. He and his clerks are very busy.

Charlie Munroe has decorated his windows handsomely. They always look first rate, but he and Webster have put an extra touch to them for this blessed occasion.

Nobby hats, elegant neckties, scarfs, fine underwear, beautiful bags, satchels, and a great many other useful goods occupy the windows of the popular Hammond Clothing Store.

Other show windows not named here, but equally meritorious, attract crowds as they pass along the street.

— It is very dry indeed hereabouts and elsewhere in New England. What is wanted is a full week of steady pouring rain, and if the JOURNAL is anything of a weather-wise we shall get it soon.

— The Congressional Record, daily, can be found on the tables of the Public Library reading-room. Those who would keep posted in the proceedings of Congress will find the Record very handy to have.

— Andrews & Cutler's almanac for 1883 is a real beauty. It is handsomely printed, splendidly illustrated, and guarantees the best kind of weather through the year, besides giving dates of all the eclipses for 1883.

— We have reason to believe that the entertainment given by the G. A. R. last evening was capital. It consisted of all sorts of pleasant and interesting things; there was a good turn out, and everybody was happy and contented.

— The aroma or perhaps fragrance, of the rich English Plum Pudding already begins to permeate the air, and now and then our olfactories are pleasantly assailed by it. What would a Christmas be without the great, fat, black plum pudding? Don't ask us!

— Last Sunday's Globe had a long lockum story about liquor spies and informers here in Woburn working in the employ of the Law and Order League of which the people can believe just as much and just as little as they please. Reporter Smith is nothing if not sensational.

— No tickets to the Mishawum Club entertainment will be sold before January 3, and none delivered before that date, except those to the Committee of Arrangements, and the complimentaries, which will be few in number. This arrangement is made for good and sufficient reasons.

— The ladies of the M. E. Church held their annual fair, sale and festival on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, and were made happy by a large attendance and liberal patronage. Each year the ladies of this church give their fair and sale, and it is always a success. They know how to make it so.

— We would call attention to the advertisement of Munroe & Newton in another column. Mr. E. D. Newton of Marlboro, Mass., who has had large experience in the coal and lumber business has associated himself with J. I. Munroe for the transaction of the coal and lumber business at the office 104 Main street, formerly occupied by J. I. Munroe & Co.

— Minnie Madden, the talented young actress, supported by a superb company, is playing at the Park theatre this week to first rate houses. Her engagement, under the management of Mr. John H. Hawlin, commenced last Monday evening, and will close tomorrow. The press extol her merits as an actress very warmly, and those who have seen her say she deserves all the praise accorded her.

— The grand chorus of forty voices, under the leadership of Dr. Lang, will be something worth listening to at the Congregational Sunday school concert next Sunday evening. Care should be taken to provide seats for everybody, which will be no easy task, we opine, for the attendance, no doubt will be very large. The sacred cantata, "The Night of Glory" will be given, which, we suspect, will give great delight to the audience.

— It would be a novelty indeed to see a lady on the street without a brown paper parcel in her hand. The sight will be common enough after Christmas. It is rather a pretty thing to look at though—those brown paper parcels are—because in each one of them there is pleasure and happiness for somebody. They are carried home to make small hearts glad on Christmas, and so somehow they are handsomer and more interesting than just the common sort of brown paper parcels.

— The literary and musical entertainment given in the Unitarian vestry on Tuesday evening last was a complete one. It was largely attended too. Every reserved seat was sold, and the room was filled. "Bo Peep" was a gem, and admirably carried out by the young people. To Miss Mabel Davis was due a good deal of credit for the tasty and excellent dressing of those who took part in the play. She gave a great deal of time, care and taste to the business. The society were very much gratified with the result of the affair.

181 Main Street (Lyceum Building), Woburn. 51-2

— The days have reached their shortest, and soon will begin to stretch out.

— The second entertainment by the Mishawum Club promises to be a very fine and enjoyable affair.

— For some time travelling here has been about equally divided between wheels, runners, and "hoofing it."

— An everlasting throw of gift goods has been sold by our traders in the last week. They certainly have no cause to complain.

— Our efficient boss of the highways has robbed the sidewalks of their danger by covering them with sand. This makes locomotion safe and pleasant.

— A reporter with an inventive set of brains will never complain of a dearth of local news, as some of our esteemed contemporaries frequently do.

— Col. Grammer is devoting a good deal of time to learning ropes in the post office about these days. He proposes to get at the true inwardness of the business.

— The Baptist Sunday School will hold their annual Christmas Concert on Sunday evening. If it wasn't for being called a tattler we should let it out that it is going to be the cap-sheaf.

— There is to be a Christmas Tree, yule log, mistletoe, holly, and jolly goings-on at the Almshouse. Our juicy-hearted Unitarian people will do a good deal of contributing to this merry affair.

— The sale of reserved seats for the Mishawum Minstrel entertainment in Lyceum Hall Jan. 10, will commence at Buss's drug store Wednesday evening Jan. 3 at 7 o'clock; not more than seven seats will be sold to one person at a time.

— The press of the leading cities speak very highly of the dramatic talents of Miss Violet Campbell who will appear in Lyceum Hall on next Monday evening with the Globe Dramatic Company. She is undoubtedly an artist of genuine merit.

— All the kinds of diaries for 1883 that are made can be found at Horton's book store, and the person who can't suit himself there can't anywhere. In prices they range all the way from two bits to away up into the pictures, and all are prime and warranted.

— Some of the boys have the temerity to coast on outside streets notwithstanding the order against it. And girls too. They mean to be law-abiding, but young human nature can't withstand the temptation of a neat hillside and swift cutter. And really we can't blame them.

— It has been suggested to us by a gentleman of standing that the establishment of a public bath at Richardson's laundry would be a most excellent thing. There are reasons why such an establishment ought to be well patonized in Woburn, but we dont know whether it would be or not.

— We are in reciept of "Wayside Gleanings" from the office of the Arlington Advocate, at the helm of which is the model printer and journalist, Charles S. Parker. The literary part of the "Gleanings" is made up of brief but intensely interesting articles from the pens of Arlington people, while its mechanical execution is unexcelled.

— The Advertiser is full of good things this week. Its "Law and Order League" article is readable and contains sound sense and good temperance doctrine. We wouldn't intentionally wound the feelings of the editor, but it seems—only seems, mind you—that "Christmas," his leader, has done like service for the last three years, to say the least.

— The National Band Association will give a grand ball in Lyceum Hall on the evening of January 19, next, to which everybody is invited. The National Orchestra will furnish the music. W. H. Little will be floor director, with several aids, and J. C. Hearn will be prompter. A concert will precede the dance, and close at 9 o'clock.

— Nervous and very sensitive people might object to the wearing of old fashioned cow bells on horses, but it would be a very unreasonable objection, and should have no weight with those who use them. Their music is so pastoral-like and sweet; their gingle so melodious and soothing; their tones so dulcet, so to speak, that it is inconceivable to us how any one can raise an objection or offer a protest against them. Nothing suits us better or falls on our tympanum more melodiously than cow bells.

— Within the last month or so Mr. A. Cummings has fairly flooded this town and neighborhood, making a territory of about six miles square, with handkerchiefs. In that time he has made them a specialty, and dead loads of them have left his store. The way the thing has been done was to buy in such huge quantities as to get a big reduction from wholesale prices, and then sell at so small a profit that they have been offered to the purchaser at astonishingly low figures. It beats all how handkerchiefs have gone at his store.

— There is much talk about town in relation to a change of local government. The matter is brewing, and the weight of opinion is greatly in favor of a city. It is probable that a mass meeting will soon be held for an expression of public sentiment on the subject, and if favorable to a change, a town meeting will soon follow. We find that the thinking, more intelligent and tax-paying part of our population favor the movement, and it would not surprise us at all if the town should within a few months be incorporated into a city.

— Horn Pond ice is now 8 inches thick, so it is said. The boys tell their anxious mothers that it is 8 feet thick.

— Mr. L. B. Norris, owner of the box factory, who has been seriously ill, is better, with a prospect of getting about again.

— Vennor hasn't hit December weather worth a cent. He promised a very pleasant month, which it hasn't been, unless viewed from on Eskemo's standpoint.

— Pierce's Popular Lyceum Course was an excellent one. It deserved a full house, which it did not get. The course has not been duly appreciated and patronized so far.

— There have been a few new cases of diptheria in town this week, but it is dying out, and the scare has abated. There will probably be no more trouble from it to speak of.

— The Village schools close to-day for the holiday vacation. The ice is tip top, and if the boys and girls don't have some fun on skates in the next week or two then they don't know themselves.

— Perseverance Division S. of T. hold meetings regularly every Sunday afternoon afternoon at Fraternity Hall, and members are warming up to the work first rate. The Division can do a power of good if rightly directed.

— It is said, with how much truth we are unable to say, that a fear of what the Woburn Law and Order League may do has had a wholesome effect on the rum traffic. Observers say there has been considerable less drunkenness in the last week than usual. We hope the report is true.

— On Wednesday last Mrs. Thomas H. Hill, wife of our Clerk of the Board, supplied her quota to the necessary number of inhabitants to entitle Woburn to a city charter, in the shape of a very young lady, over whose arrival Mr. and Mrs. Hill feel happy.

— Rev. Daniel Dorchester, D. D., Chairman of the Constitutional Prohibitory State Committee, gave an admirable address on constitutional prohibition at the Methodist Church last Sunday evening. There was a large attendance, and the audience, or at least the larger part of them, liked the lecture very much. Rev. Dr. Dorchester is an able man, and an earnest, and successful advocate of the cause of temperance, believing all the time that the true way to secure the reforms desired is to labor within the Republican party.

— On Sunday morning at the Unitarian Church, the following Christmas programme will be rendered. Singing by the Mozart Male Quartette:

1. Offertory on Christmas Hymes. Guilmant.
2. Gloria. Buck.
3. Hark, the Herald Angels Sing. Mendelssohn.
4. Tenor Solo. Holy Night. A. Sam,

MR. G. G. ENDICOTT.

5. Response. Buck.
6. Organ Solo.
7. All Glory, Land and Honor. Shuman.
8. Organ Postlude.

In the evening at six o'clock, Sunday School Christmas Concert; songs, recitations, &c., &c.

WHAT WILL convince you of the wonderful curative properties combined in HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, if the remarkable cures that have been effected by its use fail to impress upon your mind this repeatedly proven fact? Thousands are using it, and all declare that it is a medicine possessing all and even more than we claim for it. My friend, if you are sick or in that condition that you cannot call yourself either sick or well, go and get a bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and realize yourself how this medicine hits the right spot, and puts all the machinery of your body into working order.

CONVINCE

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—It affords me much pleasure to recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. My health has been such that for some years past I have been obliged to take a tonic of some kind in the spring, and have never found anything that hit my wants as your Sarsaparilla. It tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over. Respectfully yours,

J. P. THOMPSON.

One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had been taking it a week she had a rousing appetite, and it did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested."

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by all druggists. Price $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5. C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

147 MAIN STREET, - - - - - - WOBURN.

— Mr. Ed. Buchanan, who for some years has been mining in the "Rockies," has returned to Chicago.

— The temperance lecture to be give by Rev. Fr. Murphy has been postponed to Wednesday evening, January 3.

— A fine thaw set in yesterday for a variety, but what it will end in no one, except a real weather prophet, can tell.

— Miss Fannie E. Lewis of Illinois is visiting relatives and friends in this place. They are happy to see her, and she in enjoying life.

— Of course it is possible that things will remain about as they are until the January thaw sets in; but at the same time we don't believe it.

— At the meeting of the Board of Selectmen last Tuesday evening, T. H. Hill & Co. were given the contract of insuring the public buildings.

— We trust the Woburn Mendelssohn Club will conclude to give a concert here soon, for if it does the lovers of music will get something good.

— Charley Kendall of Montvale, reported badly injured last week, was not so badly used up as at first thought. He was not laid up, and didn't go to the hospital.

— Special attention will be given to Christmas music at the Baptist Church on next Sunday morning. Something musically appropriate and excellent may be expected.

— Anent the Christmas time the old poet says: So now is come our joyful'st feast, Let every man be jolly; Each room with ivy leaves is drest, And every post with holly.

— In assigning class-day positions at Tufts College this week W. Scott Ward was chosen to make the address to the class, which is an honorable recognition of his scholarship.

— There need be no particular worfiment over a short ice crop. There will be enough of the commodity to enrich the dealers and impoverish the community next summer, be the crop big or little.

— Edgar Thompson, son of Leonard Thompson, Esq., who is in the employ of a railroad company in Chicago as draughtsman, is visiting his home and friends here. He will remain about two weeks.

— An artist was in town yesterday with a proposition to publish a birdseye view of Woburn. We should think such a map would sell like hot cakes. He had samples of his work in other towns which was first rate.

— We are forced to the unpleasant conclusion that our esteemed contemporary, the Clinton Times, has got its back up about something and dropped the JOURNAL from its exchange. Massachusetts country editors are exceedingly sensitive creatures.

— Mr. Mark Allen, editor, dramatist and agriculturist, is finney-fying his sanctum sanctorum off in the most lavish style. He is putting down a rope carpet of oriental pattern, dado borders, painted vases and peacock centre, and what else we won't undertake to say.

— The postoffice Clerks have had a busy week of it, and their Christmas labors are not entirely over. Bundles, packages and letters innumerable have been sent out and received in the last few days, and "still there's more to follow." But rest will come with the close of the holidays.

— The goose begins to roost high these days in anticipation of Christmas sacrifices of poultry. It sees signs of a slaughter of the innocents, and deems it discreet to get as far out of the way of the chopping-block and axe as possible. But, if fat, we fear he will fall a victim to the demands of the Christmas feast.

—To-morrow evening there will be crowds an crowds of men, women and children in the stores and shops of this town making their final purchases for Christmas. There will be work enough for proprietors and clerks, and a busy time of it they will experience. But then, you know, "Christmas comes but once a year."

— An unusually bright and beautiful moon makes the evenings uncommonly pleasant to be out in. The substitution of moonlight for gas once in awhile is quite agreeable and favorable for sore eye. Still for a regular diet we can hardly say which we should choose, gas or moonlight, but rather think we should take electricity.

— We intended this as a Christmas number of the JOURNAL, and by the time the reader gets through with it he will be apt to think that we have succeeded pretty well. We meant to have printed a Christmas story, but remembering that every one of our exchanges would have one, we concluded not to do so. "The more odd, the more genteel," you know.

— On Monday evening next the Globe Dramatic Company will give a first class entertainment in Lyceum Hall, the particulars of which may be learned from a card in this paper, posters and small bills. We have no doubt but that this will be a dramatic entertainment worthy of the patronage of our people, and as it comes on Christmas evening there will probably be a houseful. The distinguished artist, Violet Campbell, has played leading lady with Miss Conway at the Park Theater, Brooklyn N. Y.; with Edwin Adams in Enoch Arden; with E. L. Davenport, Barney Sullivan; also, staring engagements with Charles Wyndhem, the English comedian. She has had great success staring in Baltimore, New York and all the principal cities of the Union. Miss Campbell will be supported in Lyceum Hall with a fine company, and as the plays are popular ones, the people will have a good treat.

— The appointment of Col. W. T. Grammer as postmaster at Woburn Centre was confirmed by the Senate on Wednesday.

— We hear of a goodly number of little Christmas parties, family gatherings, neighborhood collectings together for next Monday, whereat presents and good eating will figure conspicuously. We like to hear about such happy gatherings, and blessings on all of them says the JOURNAL.

— Bear in mind that the quarterly meeting of the Trustees of the Woburn Five Cents Savings Bank will be held in the rooms of the Bank on Friday evening, January 4, next, at half past seven o'clock. The report of the Treasurer and Auditors will be made at the meeting. The bank is flourishing.

— We can't speak by the card, but the report reaches our ears that the Law and Order League mean business. Strong men are back of it, and we have an idea that they will accomplish a deal of reform and good. It is not a pleasant business, but the cause is just, and that ought to give them courage, and determination that all laws shall be obeyed.

— Mr. W. H. Curtis, proprietor of Curtis's well-known Bazaar, Main street, Woburn, would inform the public that he has been appointed sole agent for Woburn for the sale of Harper Brothers' celebrated patterns, to which fact the attention of ladies is respectfully called. As early as the 10th. of January proximo he will have a full and complete line of spring styles of patterns for ladies' wear, on which date he invites all to call and examine the same, and get the modes for next spring. Mr. Curtis has also been appointed to take subscriptions for Harper & Brothers—the Monthly, Weekly, Bazaar and Young People—and those who wish to subscribe for these standard publications will do well to give him a call.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Mr. A. N. Jewett will paint the Methodist Church. It will be well done.

I hear it said the tramps are quite plenty here now-a-days, or rather nights.

The public schools close to-day, Friday, for the holiday vacation. The children are not glad nor nothing, you may be certain.

The Good Will Club gave the "Cricket on the Hearth" last evening or were advertised so to do, and personally, I have no doubts of its success.

There is some diptheria in this town, and a few cases of scarlet fever have been reported. Generally however the the health of the town is above an average.

The Advertiser has a good word for Dr. Brown's hot temperance drinks. Just how the editor got his information I don't know. Of course it was reported to him.

On Wednesday evening, January 10, the O'Connell Court will give an assembly in Lyceum Hall. I am told, on the sly of course, that it is to be a rouser. Everything in applepie style.

The Congregational Sunday School, which means scholars, teachers and officers, are making due preparations for their concert which is to be given on Christmas Eve. It is expected to be excellent.

On Christmas Eve the Baptist Sunday school concert will be held in the church. Exercises appropriate to the joyful season will be given, and a very interesting and refreshing season is expected.

If their owners' estimate is to be relied on we have some pretty fast horse-flesh in this neck of timber. Some powerful quick time has been made by horses here of late, over which there has been no unseemly bragging.

The last surprise party at Mr. Sumner Richardson's left with that estimable, but unfortunate, gentleman and his worthy spouse rising $185 in gold, to be divided equally between them. It is a good thing to have friends.

The Young Men's Association have inaugurated under very favorable conditions a series of dances, the first of which was given on Thursday evening. They have everything ship-shape, and there is no doubt but that the series will be a very pleasant one.

To-night, Friday, Mrs. Ellen Foster the eminent temperance advocate and worker, will deliver an address on constitutional prohibition here. The fame and great popularity of this gifted lady-lawyer will no doubt call out a full house, for it is a great treat to hear her.

A Christmas festival will be given in the Baptist Church on Monday evening, for the purpose of making the young people happy. There will be a Christmas Tree laden with beautiful presents for the Sunday School pupils, nice refreshments, and pleasant goings-on.

The water is very low here. The famous and somewhat romantic Abbajona is running emptyings, so to speak, and its pebbly bottom would be exposed to every passer-by but for the protecting ice on its surface. Water in the reservoir too, the source of some part of our daily drink, is getting low.

Next Monday is Christmas for which and the evening before our people are duly preparing themselves. Several nice things are on the tapis, but the small folks are more interested in the well-laden Christmas trees and the contents of stockings than anything else. I hope every one of the little ones, especially the poor little ones, will be made glad, happy and joyful on that great day of days. And may a blessed Christmas spirit prevail in every household in Winchester.

The time is coming, and is not far distant when a company will supply Winchester, Arlington, Woburn and Stoneham with electric lights. Prominent citizens of Winchester are interested in the scheme. For obvious reasons, it is not desirable to say more about the grand scheme at this time, but "time will tell." The proprietors of stores, public buildings, and dwelling-houses will find the electric light better and cheaper than oil or gas. [Star]. Glad to hear it, and if it is going to come cheaper to consumers, bring on your electricity with all due diligence and delay. I hope the Star is not a false prophet.

BURLINGTON.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT.—There will be a concert by the Sunday school, in the church, next Sunday evening, at half past seven o'clock. The exercise, "Glory to God" will be given, and the services will be appropriate to the Christmas season.

LITERARY.—Directly after the holidays, the Literary Union will give an entertainment, presenting a view of the life and works of the poet Longfellow.

NORTH WOBURN.

This, Friday, evening there is to be another of the assemblies which are so popular here. It is looked forward to with pleasure.

The Unitarian Society will entertain the Sunday School with a Christmas Tree on Saturday evening. It will be loaded down with good things.

The fair of the Congregational Society passed off very pleasantly, and was a real nice thing. I hear that a good bunch of money went into society's coffers from it, and that the good ladies were well satisfied with their receipts. Which is pleasant to hear.

The Screen Law.

To the Editor of the Woburn Journal:—In the communication addressed to your people two weeks ago I took occasion to call attention to certain prohibitory features of the present license law, and in connection therewith gave certain facts the better to show what might have been done for the cause of temperance, under those provisions of law, had our citizens kept themselves informed on the subject and made use of the power placed in their hands. In the present article I desire to direct attention to to another restrictive feature of the law, and to show what can be done at the present time by any citizen of Woburn who honestly wishes to further the temperance cause, and to limit the traffic in spirituous and intoxicating liquors.

SECT. 12. The board [granting the license] shall require the licensee to remove any screen, blind, shutter, curtain, partition, or painted, ground, or stained glass window, or any other obstruction which may interfere with a view of the interior of the licensed premises. No such licensee shall place or maintain, or permit to be placed or maintained, upon any premises used by him for the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquor under the provisions of his license, any screen, blind, shutter, curtain, partition, or painted, ground, or stained glass window, or any other obstruction, or shall expose in any window upon said premises any bottle, cask, or other vessel containing, or purporting to contain, intoxicating liquor, in such a way as to interfere with a view of the business conducted upon the premises.

This section was amended by St. 1882, Chapter 259, which went into effect May 26, 1882, by adding at the end thereof the following words: "or with a view of the interior of said premises; and the placing or maintaining of any of said obstructions shall of itself make the license void."

The stringency of this enactment is seen at a glance, and but little by way of exposition and interpretation seems called for. In a very recent decision (Commonwealth vs. Donahue, Hampden County) the Supreme Court said that the above prohibition is not limited to an act done by a licensee while carrying on the business under his license, but applies also at times when by the provisions of his license it is unlawful for him to do any business; and they accordingly held, in the case cited, that the defendant Donahue had violated the law by not observing the provisions of section twelve on the Lord's Day.

Any one who has occasion to pass up and down Main street frequently, knows perfectly well that the terms of the screen law are complied with, during the business days of the week, but by very few of the licensed dealers who are located on said street. In fact when they were threatened prosecution by the Chairman of the State Prohibitory Committee, some six weeks ago, they quietly informed the police that they preferred to take the chances of a prosecution rather than change, in any respect, the arrangement of their saloons.

To show how the screen law is observed on Sunday I will state that last Sunday, with a list of licencees in my hand, I walked up one side of Main street and down the other, and found that of the thirteen licensed premises on said street (excluding druggists, all of whom, however, violate the screen law on Sunday) there was but one of which an unobstructed "view of the interior of the premises" could be had. In six places in particular the curtains were either closely drawn, or the shutters tightly closed. The one licensee who observed the law last Sunday had violated it the week before by having his wooden partition up and his door curtained.

It would seem superfluous to add anything by way of comment on this state of facts. A larger, or easier field for earnest, practical labor in behalf of temperance could hardly be presented. Our citizens have merely to open their eyes as they traverse the principal thoroughfare of the town, and make complaint to the court of what they see. To work up a good case would require no expenditure of money, nor necessitate the hanging about or visiting of any liquor saloon. Every successful prosecution would mean one license the less in the town of Woburn and the payment of a fine by the defendant of at least fifty dollars and costs, or an imprisonment of from one to six months, or an imposition on him of both fine and imprisonment.

JOURNAL COURT RECORD.

Parker L. Converse, Judge.

This week had been quite a busy one in the District Court. There have been quite a good many simple drunks, a few double-and-twisted ones, an assault and battery case or two, some bastardy business, and other matters. On the whole, the Court can congratulate itself on having done a very fair stroke of work since our last, and the prospect for more is above an average. We refrain from publishing names of parties before the Court this week for prudential reasons.

LITERARY NOTICES.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE for this week contains a great amount of choice literature, which will be found very entertaining to the cultivated reader.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE for the current week is a delightful number. Christmas comes in for a large share of its stories and pictures, all of which are excellent.

The MUSICAL HERALD for January is a good number. It contains several pieces of new music by popular composers, besides a large quantity of interesting literary matter. The HERALD is published by The Musical Herald Co., Boston.

One of the most beautiful publications for Christmas that has fallen under our eye this year is "Harper's Christmas Pictures and Papers: By The Tile Club and its Literary Friends." It is a book of large sized engravings from the drawings of the Tile Club accompanied with descriptive articles from ready pens. It is an elegant piece of work, and makes a beautiful holiday present.

The January number of FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY is of remarkable excellence, and in all respects, what a magazine ought to be; the artigles are exceedingly interesting and instructive; the stories, sketches, etc., highly entertaining; the poems possess much merit, and the miscellany is most comprehensive. "The War Cloud in Europe" (fifteen illustrations); "Rachel" (eight); "Life in Old Florence" (six) "A Polynesian Kingdom" (twenty one) and "A Bar of Iron" with its nine illustrations) are by popular writers, and replete with interest and information. The fine serial 'A Whited Sepulchre" is continued, and there are short stories, sketches, adventures, etc., by M. T. Caldor, A. M. Douglass, M. E. Aymer, Mrs. M. A. Dennison, etc. "William Penn and the Philadelphia Bi-Centenial" and "The Devil's Looking-Glass" claim particular attention. Each number of this popular periodical contains 128 quarto pages and over 100 illustrations, together with a beautiful colored plate frontispiece. "Be Good Again," the title of the present one, is a gem. The price of a single copy is 25 cents; yearly subscription $3, postpaid. Address MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY draws from the intellectual sources of all nations, and is now recognized as the most successful scientific periodical in the world. Appealing to no one class, it is patronized by intelligent readers of every class all over the country. It is widely taken by the cultivators of science in all branches, and by physicians, engineers, scientific farmers, and those pursuing the mechanical and manufacturing art. Thoughtful clergymen find it indespensable, and are extensively enumerated among its subscribers. Teachers, finding its discussions of the scientific principles of education invaluable, are among its most liberal supporters. It has a large clientage among the lawyers, and it is not easy to find an honest and independent student of politics that does not read it. The reason of this is, that our best minds are getting tired of shallow frivolities of sensational literature, and demand a magazine that elevates the standard of popular reading in this country. Those, therefore, who desire to know what is going on in the world of thought will find that they can only keep informed by subscribing for THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY. Terms: $5.00 per annum, or 50 cents a number; cloth covers for the volumes, 50 cents each.

ST. NICHOLAS for January contains several notable features, preeminent among which is the brief biographical sketch of Elizabeth Thompson Butler, which is accompanied by six illustrations from drawings made by the celebrated artist herself especially for ST. NICHOLAS, her portrait, and several groups from the great picture, The Roll-call. Another very interesting article is A Chinese New Year's Day in Santa Barbara. Then there is the prize Tiger Composition, which was written by Hollis C. Clark, aged fifteen years. Some further adventures of Tinkey, in a story entitled Fairy Wishes, Nowadays, with characteristic illustrations, is sure to be welcomed. J. T. Trowbridge's serial leaves the Tinkham Brothers in an exciting situation, where they must stay until the February number. There are interesting chapters of The Story of Viteau, and the Field of the Cloth of Gold has five illustrations. Silk Culture for Boys and Girls is an article which inaugurates a new department, to be known as Work and Play for Young People. This sketch gives full instruction for beginning this interesting and profitable occupation for enterprising young Americans. In addition, is the usual amount of short stories, verses, bright pictures, and departments. The frontispiece is a beautiful picture by E. H. Alashfield, His Lordship's Bed-time.

An old Scotch lady from the country was visiting some friends in the city one Sunday, and went with them to church. After returning from service she expressed her dislike to the music and especially to an anthem. "Why, that is a very old anthem; David sang it to Saul," said her host. "Weel, weel, I noo for the first time understan' why Saul threw his javelin at David when the lad sang for him," was the old lady's reply.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 10th.—The monthly report of the State Board of Health, published on the 7th inst., says long diseases hold the front rank. Consumption has been as fatal as lung fever, and there has been a large per centage of deaths from bronchitis and congestion of the lungs. A peculiar spasmodic cough has also been very common, not distinctive enough to be called whooping cough, and attacking adults as well as children. Neuralgia and rheumatism are reported as being prevalent and exceedingly obstinate and unyielding to treatment. Since the introduction into our section of the Craig's cough and consumption cure, pulmonary diseases are rapidly disappearing, and now that the excellencies as a curative power of the French crown plaster is being generally known, neuralgia and rheumatism are complaints not often heard of.

Embarrassed.

The Rev. Mr.——was one of the most bashful men in the profession, and was constantly getting into scrapes, through his nervous mistakes. At one time he rose in his pulpit to give out the hymn, "This world is all a fleeting show," and after clearing his throat he struck a high pitch of voice and began solemnly:

"This world is all a floating shoe." Everybody smiled except the deacons, and the minister was covered with confusion as he began again:

This only made matters worse, and the unhappy man cleared his throat with tremendous force and began once again:

Then he slammed the hymn book down, and wiping his clammy brow, said:

"Brethren, for some reason I cannot read that hymn as it should be read. We will omit it, and the choir will please sing the grand old lines beginning:

"Just as I am, without one flea."

The children of Israel were once fed by manna sent from heaven. This was an undoubted case of "God-send." The amelioration of human ills and ailments has been often undertaken and as often failed. Ely's Cream Balm, however, "has been weighed in the balance and not found wanting." It is a sovereign, speedy, certain and pleasant cure for Catarrh and cold in the head. Thousands of persons have attested this fact. "Ely's Cream Balm is a God-send," writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H. on May 22d, 1882. "I had Catarrh for three years, had tried nearly all remedies but to no purpose. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed quite freely, and I thought the sores in it would never heal. Your Balm has cured me." This preparation is not a liquid or a snuff, and is easily applied. Can you, reader, afford, to experiment with injurious irritants and injections when a pleasant cure is at hand?

"All Right Enough."

A man living in Indiana said, "Well, temperance is all right enough, but there are matters of more importance before the people now." Two nights after he made the above remark a spring-wagon was stopped in front of his house, about one o'clock in the morning. He was called to the door. His wife looked out of the window and saw six men carrying something on a door or wide board. She guessed what it was in an instant and giving a wild, frantic scream, cried, "My boy, O, my boy! What shall I do! He is dead! I have been fearing this would happen by that cursed whiskey!" Sure enough it was her son brought home nearly dead. He had been drunk and engaged in a saloon brawl. He was beaten into almost a shapeless unrecognizable mass. Are experiences like this needed to show Christian men and women that there is something for them to do in the temperance cause?—Home Guard.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

Heartily Recommended.

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good, her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The Woburn Journal

CHRISTMAS.
1882.

A splendid Christmas day is now
A brilliant gift, with Lover's vow
Makes makes hearts to sigh:—
'Tis not the sigh of grief, we know.
Which maidens of do heave,
As Love—does it conceive.

This glorious day, so bright, so clear,
Majestic in the skies,
Brings fondest memories and good cheer;
With pleasure, stisfies:
Its many joys, with pure delight
The cup of bliss doth fill,
Although rude sorrow oft does blight
With melancholy chill.

So holy, so supreme;
Its Christian precepts doth decoy,
Whilst Christ's the magic theme:
The sainted cross, its fruits doth yield
To magnify mankind.
And sinners e'er will always shield,
And wounded hearts will bind.

THE MARRIAGE PORTION.

There lived, about five or six miles from Easton, Pennsylvania, a few years since, an honest farmer named Henderson, who had two very pretty daughters, Ellen and Maude. The first was about twenty years of age, while the latter was but nineteen. The farmer was a thrifty, well-to-do man, though by no means rich; but the family lived in excellent style, and the daughters had recieved good educations.

Both of these girls were pretty, but Maude was perhaps the handsomer. There was no lack of attentive young gentlemen at the farm, though the neighborhood was not very thickly settled. But "beauty draws us with a single hair," and the young ladies were the centre of a gay little circle of friends.

By and by it came about that an earnest, handsome and sturdy young farmer fell desparately in love with Maude and proposed to her. On her part she loved Harry Masters above all the young fellows she knew and told him frankly that he might speak to her father. In the mean time she confided the matter to her mother, a kind-hearted sympathetic parent, who saw no objection to the choice of her daughter, but all was left with the father to decide.

Henderson was a very straightforward and open mouthed man. That is he said exactly what he meant, no more or less, and that he uttered freely. When Harry Masters called him on one side and told him his especial errand as to Maude the father said, "Well, Mr. Masters, Maude is young, I wanted Ellen to be married first; she's oldest, and I have got a marriage portion of $1200 to give her; but I haven't laid up anything yet for Maude."

"I have got pretty well beforehand, Mr. Henderson, for a man but twenty-four years old, and we shall be able to do very well, I have no doubt."

"Well, it's pleasant to hear you say so, because it shows your honest affection, Mr. Masters; but I am to proud to let Maude marry until I can give her a thousand or two towards housekeeping."

"It is not worth waiting for, sir, as long as we really don't need it and both are content."

"Then, again, I'd rather Maude wouldn't marry until her sister is married, because she's so much older, do you see, it will actually make her an old maid. It isn't fair, Mr. Master."

"Ellen is very popular with the gentlemen and will soon be married," said the other."

"That's just I have said to myself, and then I shall begin to pick up a marriage portion for Maude."

"I trust that is the only objection, Mr. Henderson?" said Harry Masters.

"Why, yes; you are a promising and respectable young man and come of a good family," said the farmer; "but I can't let Maude go until I have got together a respectable marriage portion to give with her hand."

"Perhaps you will think more favorably about it," said the lover. "I'll speak with you again."

"All right, Mr. Masters."

Harry and Maude were fond of each other, and now they talked over the matter very seriously. Maude could not blame her father, and did not herself like the idea of going to Harry without a proper portion to contribute towards their joint partnership in domestic life.

"Never mind, Harry," said the handsome young girl; "Ellen will soon get married. I have pretty good reason for knowing."

"Ah, but then your father says he wants time to pick up a marraige portion for you, and that will take three or four years, perhaps."

"That is a good while, is it not, Harry?" said Maude, just blushing a little, for fear it sounded forward and bold.

"It's ages!" said the young fellow.—"Think of waiting three years—why, we shall be quite old folks by that time!"

"Not quite as bad as that," said Maude.

"I'm sure my hair will be gray by that time!"

"Nonsense, Harry! Now you are joking."

"I was never more in earnest in my life," said he, as he stole a kiss from her pretty lips, and ran away, so as not to hear her chide him for his boldness.

"Maude," said her father, coming into the house from the barn, "I wish you would ride the sorrel mare into Easton and get this hundred dollar bill changed at the bank.—The workmen have got done with the roofing of the barn and I want to pay them off tonight."

"Very well, father. Let John put the side-saddle on and I will be ready in five minutes."

The sorrel mare was brought up to the door, and Maud was soon on her way at an easy hand gallop toward Easton. She had an excellent seat, and was a good horse-woman. As she knew this very well, she would not object to have Harry see her just now; but he had gone a few moments before in an opposite direction.

When Maude got into Easton she rode directly to the bank, but was unfortunate enough to find that it was already closed. After a few moments' thought she resolved to try to get the note changed at the grocer's or at some of the other stores and went immediately to do so. Fate seemed against her, for no one had small change enough to accommodate Miss Henderson.

At one of the stores where she stopped a very gentlemanly-looking person took out his pocket-book and said he thought he could change it for her, and she handed him the bill; but he returned it, saying, after all, he had not so much small money. He seemed to regret it however, and even followed Maude to the door and assisted her to remount her horse.

She was forced to give up her errand as she did not like to run about among strangers, asking them to change her a bill, especially as no one seemed able to do so.—She therefore turned her horse's head once more towards home. Scarcely had she passed the outskirts of the town when she was overtaken by the stranger who had spoken with her in the last store, and who at first thought he could change her bill.—He was mounted upon a fine-looking bay horse, and saluted her respectfully as he came along side.

"Did you get your bill changed?" he asked.

"Oh, we don't mind five miles in the country."

"You are an excellent rider."

"I have ridden since I was six years old," she said; "but my sister Ellen is a better rider than I am."

"You are generous to admit it," said the stranger.

"Why, its only the truth," she answered frankly.

After they had passed about two miles, they came to a very lonely piece of the road, quite removed from any dwelling houses. Still as the stranger appeared so gentlemanly, and had addressed her so politely, she had not the least suspicion of any evil intention on his part.

Presently he said, suddenly, "I will thank you for that bill."

"What?" said she, half smiling.

"Please to give me that bill."

"What do you mean?" asked Maude.

"Just what I say!" he replied, suddenly.

"I shall do no such thing!" she answereded firmly.

"I am sorry to draw a pistol upon a lady," he continued, suiting the action to the word, "but I must have that hundred-dollar bill at once."

"Do you mean to rob me?"

"I must have the money!"

It was still with difficult that she could believe that the man was in earnest; but when he now cocked his pistol and held it toward her with one hand, while he extended the other for the bill, she was forced to yield to the necessity of the situation.—She was a brave-hearted girl, and even now did not turn pale nor tremble in the least, but saw that she could not help herself and so made the best of it.

Just as she held the bill to him, a sudden puff of the wind blew into the road and carried it gently several yards from them. The stranger alighted to get it and quick as thought Maude struck her horse a smart blow, in order to get out of the robber's power. The sorrel mare was a spirited little creature and sprang into a smart gallop at once; while the stranger's horse, which had been left standing beside her, also started off at full speed in her company!

Bang! went the robber's pistol after them, having only the effect to increase the speed of the flying horses, both of whom were now on the dead run. Maude did not care how fast she rode, the sorrel was as easy as a cradle at that speed, and in ten minutes she dashed into her father's yard followed by the riderless horse.

Her story was soon told, and her father was with difficulty prevented from starting after the robber with his pistols and rifle, but he knew that the scoundrel would naturally take to the woods at once, where he could not follow or find him.

"Well, we've got his horse, at any rate," said the farmer; "and he is worth more than $100."

"Hallo!" said the man John, who had been taking the saddle bags from the strange horse.

"What is it, John?"

"These bags are full of something."

"I should think so," said the farther as he unstrapped the leather bags.

They were found to contain some counterfeit plates, a quantity of counterfeit money in various bills, and also a little over $1500 in good money!

"Huzza!" cried the farmer.

"What is it, father?" said Maude.

"Why your trip to Easton has proved a profitable one, at all events. Here's over $1500, good money."

"Ah, but it will be claimed by the owner."

"Do you think a counterfeiter will dare to come for the tools that would convict him?—to say nothing of highway robbery."

"I didn't think of that."

That evening Henderson sent John over to young Masters with a message to call round and see him, to which Harry responded instantly.

"Mr. Masters," said the farmer, as he came into the large, old-fashioned sitting-room, "you remember what you asked of me this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I give my consent. Maude has just furnished her marriage portion. Take her, my boy, and be happy."

Free Men.

BY WM. N. BURR.

A stranger arose recently in a young men's prayer-meeting and said:

"To-night when I was on the street a young man approached me and handed me a printed invitation to this meeting. I crumpled it in my hand and went on to the saloon where I have been accustomed to spend most of my evenings. Soon after I entered the saloon some of my companions asked me to drink, and I stepped up to the bar intending to drink with them when suddenly I was reminded of the invitation which I still held in my hand. I don't know what made me do it, but I just turned away from that bar and walked out of the saloon, and came straight up here to your rooms. Now I feel that I want to live a different life, and I ask you to pray for me."

On the other side of the room sat the young man who had given the invitation to the stranger. He had come in from his work that evening greatly discouraged, for he had met with more rebuffs, more sneers, more unpleasant experiences that night than ever before while engaged in distributing the invitations.

"I don't believe I can ever do it again," he said just before the meeting began.

"I'll be glad to go every Saturday night," he said with a beaming face at the close of the meeting.

"I want to be freed from this appetite," said the stranger; and he accepted the Christ as his helper before he left the room.

"I want to be freed from all fear of man," said the other. "If the Master is willing to use me I am willing to be used anywhere, in any way."

"In the morning sow the seed, and in the evening withold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

Mothers Should Know it.

A man never looses anything by being polite. A Camden gentleman, waiting for a train, saw a woman slip upon something and nearly fall. He hurried to her assistance, and helped her to rise, and as he did so she dropped a velise, which proved to be his own, that he had left in the depot a few minutes before, and which she was attempting to steal.

that so many otherwise attractive, polite and particular people afflict their friends by the foul and disagreeable oder of their breath, it is mainly caused by disordered digestion and can be corrected by removing the cause, by using that pure medicine Sulphur Bitters.—Health Magazine.

Of all other views man may, in time grow tired; but in the countenance of a woman there is a variety which sets weariness at defiance. The divine right of beauty is the only divine right a man can acknowledge, and a pretty woman the only tyrant he is not authorized to resist.

The Woburn Journal

SPECIAL NOTICE.

All Advertisements, to insure insertion in this paper, must be handed in as early as 10 o'clock on Thursday forenoon.

THE LEGISLATURE.

On next Wednesday the Legislature of this State meets, the same being the first Wednesday in January. At an early day in the session the election of a United States Senator to succeed Mr. Hoar will take place. The Republicans having a working majority in both branches of course Mr. Hoar's successor will be of that stripe of politics, unless Gov. Long should make a fight and the Democrats should turn in and help him through.

Two weeks ago or thereabouts the tide began to turn in favor of Senator Hoar. For some time previously it had seemed to go against him and it was a serious question in the minds of his friends even whether he could regain the lost ground and secure an election. As soon, however, as the people went to thinking the matter over in a serious mood and to look at it in all its bearings, the prospect for Mr. Hoar began to look better. The tide turned and has been setting in his favor ever since so that now there can be little or no doubt of his success.

Another important matter with which the General Court will have to deal this winter will be the elevated railway scheme that gave so much cause for anxiety and fear in Boston bosoms last year. It is bound to come up again and stronger than ever. Shrewd men predict that it will succeed. Gov. Butler is a fast friend of the measure, and suburban members will be able to give more effective support to it than hitherto.

Other projects are on foot which will give the Legislature work enough to do during the session of which mention need not be made at this time.

CITY CHARTER.

A large number of the foremost citizens of Woburn have affixed their names to a petition to the Board of Selectmen for a Town Meeting to consider the question of applying to the General Court for a city charter. The petition will be presented at the next regular meeting of the Board, and a warrent will issue immediately thereafter. If the men whose names are appended to the document are in favor a speedy change in our government, and we are credibly informed that they are enthusiastically so, their prominent business and social standing will have great weight in determining the question in the affirmative.

At a meeting held on Tuesday evening the citizens of Waltham voted to go ahead for a charter and raised committees to carry out the wishes of the town, and this after the most thorough discussion of the question and candid deliberation. We have no doubt but that Woburn will follow in Waltham's footsteps, and take measures for securing a city charter at the earliest possible period of time.

ENLARGED.

Feeling it our duty to do something by way of celebrating the advent of 1883, we concluded to enlarge the JOURNAL. So, we have done so. At the earnest solicitation of our host of aged readers—good, staunch friends and supporters of the JOURNAL—who have for some time found it difficult to read its fine print, we set a major part of the paper in larger type. The price remains the same.

☞ The Woburn JOURNAL has been progressing for several years and now the JOURNAL is anxious for Woburn to do likewise. It want the town to become a city.—Boston Post.

And as public sentiment is in accord with the JOURNAL we expect to see Woburn take a position among Massachusetts cities at an early day.

☞ While there may be honest differences of opinion as to the best means of promoting the cause of temperance all good men will agree that existing laws should be enforced or repealed.—Advertiser.

That is sound doctrine. While a law remains on the statute book it should be observed by all.

— It has been suggetosted us that a box for mail matter ought to be set up at the depot. That it would be a great convenience to locate one in Mr. Cooper's news depot, but the question is, who would take the letters and papers to the post office?

— The Belleview Club, which, though young, is one of the most flourishing in town, will give a select Bon Bon party at Army Hall, on Friday evening, January 5. Tickets may be had of the Committee. It will be a tip top society affair.

— We learn with pleasure that Mr. Fred. Ellis, a Woburn boy, is making good progress towards a "pile" at his home in Bandera, Texas. He has leased his ranch to responsible parties, and is now giving his attention to contracts for building, in which he is meeting with excellent success.

— Fred. Leed's hot coffee, chocolate and other temperance drinks has a big patronage. It is increasing too, for as the merits of the drinks become more generally understood, and people find out how much better it is to take them than to guzzle down beer and other intoxicants, they are more in demand.

— Hon. John Cummings was the first man to put his name to a petition to the Selectmen for a Town Meeting to act on the matter of a city charter. We understand Mr. Cummings is strongly in favor of a change in our local government, as we should expect any one of his good, sound, practical sense to be.

— Rev. S. A. Burns, the evangelist from Providence, R. I., still continues his revival meetings in the Methodist church, which will close next Monday evening unless he can be induced to remain longer. Meetings are held every evening and Bible readings each afternoon. A deep religious interest is the result of Mr. Burns's labors here.

— The Woburn JOURNAL and Advertiser are pegging away for a city charter. We hope their efforts will meet with success. [Winchester Star.] Your hopes will end in fruition. Woburn is going to have a city charter this winter. When a whole host of leading citizens of both parties take hold of a scheme, as they are doing in this, it must go.

— To-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the request of a large number of people, will be repeated "Bo-Peep" at the Unitarian vestry. When given last week it was highly praised and greatly enjoyed by all who saw it, and as there were many children who were so unfortunate as not to be present for their especial delight it will be repeated tomorrow afternoon.

— Breakfast Cocoa as a beverage is universally conceded superior to all other drinks for the weary man of business or the more robust laborer. The preparations of Walter Baker & Co. have long been the standard of merit in this line and our readers who purchase "Baker's Breakfast Cocoa" will will find it a most healthful, delicious and invigorating beverage.

— Our energetic antiquarian friend, William B. Harris, Esq., has added to the antique department of the Public Library an ancient tobacco box with one pewter pipe bowl whose stem was commonly a quill; and three different styles of the old-time clay pipe; with a bunch of old fashioned leaf tobacco. Our smokers may be interested in these articles, and also in a cast-iron handled knife from the New Hampshire State Prison belonging with them.

— Mark Allen, of the Woburn Advertiser, favors a city charter for Woburn, meaning to run for Mayor; and Brother Hobbs of the JOURNAL backs him up, meaning to be Alderman-at-large. We are sorry to see this appetite for office on the part of our contemporaries, but as they insist on it, we, too, are favorable for a city charter for our big neighbor. Let the boys go in while they are young.—[Medford Mercury.] Partly true, and partly not true. Mr. Allen, unquestionably, is booming this question with mercenary ends in view—to capture the honorable post of Mayor; but as for ourselves, we deny the soft impeachment, although, of course, if the people insist on it we would make the sacrifice. In others words, we are, as politicians say, in the hands of our friends.

— The St. Charles Sunday School Teachers Association presented Mr. Richard Lynch with an elegant easy-chair and hassock as a token of their esteem and good will.

— We are now at peace with Brother Hobbs, and hope to maintain amiable relations with the rest of mankind. [Advertiser.] Well, now, that is a happy frame of mind to be in, and we hope it will last.

— The regular meeting of the Board of Selectmen will be held next Tuesday when a strong petition will be presented for a Town Meeting to decide the question of petitioning the Legislature for a city Charter.

— Grammer Brothers have just taken from a bankrupt debtor a large stock of ladies' boots of their own make which they are now offering at half prices. This sale affords an excellent opportunity to buy ladies' boots very cheap.

— We understand that Hammond is closing out his stock of Overcoats at extremely low prices before he takes account of stock—Feb. 1. Now is your chance to get a good Overcoat for a little money at Hammond's Clothing House, Lyceum Building.

— The new song by E. A. Samuels, entitled "My Darling Marie," is one the most charming compositions of recent publication, and it is fast becoming very popular. Every one who sings should own a copy. It is published by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston. Price, for voice and piano, 35 cents.

— Mr. William Kimball has a notice in this paper which speaks for itself. Mr. Jenkins is a new-comer, but brings good credentials as a business man and citizen. He has spread his tent here "for keeps," and we have no doubt but that our people will find him worthy of their patronage.

— After twenty years of faithful and acceptable service as postmaster of Woburn Nathan Wyman, Esq., will in a few days surrender the keys of the establisment to his successer, Col. W. T. Grammer. He has done well by the public in that twenty years, and when he leaves he will be missed from the old post.

— At nearly 12 o'clock last Saturday evening, Officer McSweeney cleaned out Moses Givens's place in double-quick time. There was quite a row in progress at the saloon, which, on being discovered by Bryan McSweeney, was soon quelled by that efficient officer pitch-poling the whole lot out doors. He keeps a sharp eye on the doings of the inmates of saloons, and of late has had a good many hard tussels with some of them.

— John G. Maguire, Esq., has we suppose finished his study of Cushing's Manual and is now ready to shoulder his share of the legislative duties when called on so to do. The Esquire is a Democrat of the old Bourbon stripe, dyed in the wool, and all that, and yet we have no fears but that he will carry himself in a decent way this winter, and help to give the people some wholesome laws if closely watched. We don't know who his candidate for United States Senator is, but it is quite safe to say it is not Hoar.

— By invitation of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Simonson, the Y. M. C. A. will join in holding a Watch-Night service in the Baptist Church on next Sunday evening. Services will begin at 10 o'clock, P. M. The first half hour will be devoted to a praise service, Messrs. Osgood and Bennett cornetists. At the close of this a half-hour sermon by Rev. Mr. Simonson will be preached. Fifteen minutes will then be given to a recess and during the remaining three-quarters of an hour a prayer, conference and social service will be held. All are cordially invited to attend.

— There are but three localities, or towns, in the world, by the name of Woburn. In addition to our own flourishing village of that name we have Woburn, Bedfordshire, England, of whose existence and whereabouts most readers of this paper are cognizant. The third Woburn is found by the last United States census to be located in Bond County, Illinois. It is there set down as a post village with a population of 131, and as having had no existence in 1870. It might be interesting to know whence the origin and name of this new Woburn. Can any of the readers of the JOURNAL furnish an answer?

— Annie Sullivan took the 1.10 train from this place last Tuesday afternoon for Winchester. On arriving there she did not leave her seat until the train started again, when dicovering her mistake she undertook to step off and before she could be prevented from doing so she fell under the wheels of the car and had one arm and both legs cut off. She lived only a few moments after the accident. Mrs. Sullivan lived at Woburn Highlands and was probably more than 100 years old—it is said that she was 104 years of age. She was an active, smart, intelligent woman, with all her faculties remarkably well preserved, and well known in this community. She leaves a large number of children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

SCHOOL MEETING. Regular meeting held Tuesday evening—V. M. Simons, secretary, absent, and G. P. Bartlett appointed pro tem—Voted, to procure the necessary books for a thorough trial of supplementary reading in the Grammer schools—Resignation of John A. Walsh, janitor, accepted.

— This is the fifth day of Christmas: it rules May: May will be a delightful month.

— We have had delightful weather ever since before Christmas. The mildness of the temperature is favorable to the poor.

— The singing books used in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. are those presented the Association by Mr. Amos Cummings.

— Mr. Ober the new assistant State Secretary visits the Y. M. C. A. to night. It is hoped all of the members and friends will be present to receive him, at 8 o'clock.

— Persons wishing to sign the petition for a Town Meeting can do so by calling at the Advertiser office. A large number of prominent citizens have already signed it.

— A great many people would like to see some snow for sleighing. Friend Allen says we have had eleven snow storms this season, and we would like to know what has become of them.

— Prof. Roberts of the Boston Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium and an assistant visited the Y. M. C. A. of this place last evening and gave a very pleasant entertainment to the members and friends, giving some excellent instruction.

FIREMAN'S BALL. This evening Gilereast H. & L. Company will give their second annual ball at Lyceum Hall. Marrinan's orchestra will give a concert from 8 to 9 o'clock.

ACCIDENTS. David Ronco's little daughter fell and broke her arm while sliding on Sturges street the other day. Mrs. Tolan, Cross street, fell and broke her collar bone. —— Mrs. Richard Hawkins fell on the ice and dislocated her shoulder.

— The other day Mr. J. Q. A. Brackett's horse escaped from the stable and before being caught and returned caused considerable of a disturbance and some trouble on the streets visited by him. Several horses attached to teams caught the spirit of the fun and ran away. The sum total of damage was: one hydrant knocked over, several wagons partly wrecked, twelve frightened women, and Thomas Freeney badly demoralized by being dragged over the rough ground and severely scratched.

— "A new broom sweeps clean" is a very ancient saying, and as true as old. It may not be the properest figure of speech to employ in alluding to the most excellent improvements which the new incumbent, Col. Grammer, has made on the post office, but it is not bad, and as one better fitted to the case cannot be readily called to mind by the writer we adopt the old saw and let it slide. Retaining the figure, the post office shines. The very best kind of improvements have been nearly completed and when done we shall not be ashamed to place our office along side of the best of them for comparison. The overhauling and changes have been quite general which will add to its convenience and looks, and make a public place creditable to Uncle Sam and his employe, Col. Grammer. As these improvements are noted by several hundred people per day a particular description by us would seem to be a work of supererogation.

— There was a pleasant affair at the residence of Mr. T. G. Merriam on last Friday evening in which Miss Vanie B. Robinson, who recently resigned the position in the High School which she had filled for a dozen years or so with much credit to herself, profit to scholars, and acceptability of the school authorities, was the principal character. On retiring from the post which she has held so long and honorably filled the pupils of the High school wishing to make some manifestation of their love and esteem for her, chose a delegation from the several classes to wait on Miss Robinson and present her with a token of the same. W. P. Symonds and Ella M. Crane were chosen from the first class; A. W. Whitcher and A. Dora Brown from the second; and Harry Pindar and Edwin Davis from the third. These repaired to the residence of Mr. Merriam on Friday evening and in behalf of the school presented Miss Robinson with a costly French clock and statuette, which were gracefully accepted with warm thanks. It was a fitting gift and worthily bestowed. Miss Robinson has been a very popular teacher, esteemed by pupils, and her leave-taking is very much regretted by all.

JOURNAL COURT RECORD.

FOURTH DISTRICT COURT OF EASTERN MIDDLESEX.

Parker L. Converse, Judge.

There has been a great rush of business at the District Court this week. Christmas seems to have raised Cain with a good many people's spirits and they went in sheeting width. A big batch of young fellows who were just more than howling and going it over by the Highlands were run in and detained until Tuesday morning when they were fined. Michael O'Hara of Winchester was bound over to keep the peace for threatening to slay somebody. Ellen Ryan was mulcted in 85 and cost for disturbing the peace, and George Devine $10 for the same offence. There were a good many other things before the Court about which we have not time to write.

Our Business Report.

In conformity to its custom for years past the JOURNAL submits its report of the manufacturing business of Woburn this week. It of course deals principally with leather, as that is the chief industry on which we thrive. The facts have been carefully collected, and are here given.

These statistics have been gathered from the owners and foremen of the shops, and are based upon their statements, which may be considered as near the truth as possible. In tanneries and currying shops the terms used may require an explanation: A hide constitutes the entire covering formerly worn by the now defunct animal, and it is put through the process of unhairing and tanning without being diminished in size. After a hide has been tanned it is usually divided equally, making two sides of leather. Each side is then run through a machine which splits it into two unequal thinner pieces. The pieces which was the outside of the hide is the larger, more valuable of the two and is called grain leather. The other which was on the inside of the hide is called the split.

The side of grain is finished by different methods into various qualities of leather, such as polish, imitation gont and calf, and buff leather.

The splits are sold by the weight and the amount finished is given by tons.

Where calf skins are finished there is no splitting, and the amount is given by the number of dozens finished.

North Woburn which forty years ago was the business center of Woburn, is now but a shadow of its old time greatness. Since the suspension of traffic on the Middlesex canal the village has grown but little, its remoteness from railroads being the chief cause. At present its business activity is much better than during any previous years. During the year a small concern which manufactured oiled papers has discontinued, but the currying shops by their increased activity more than make up the deficit.

THE WONDER

Is becoming universal as to how such an immense sale could be created in Lowell for HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. But, my friend, if you could stand behind our counter a week and hear what those say who are using it, the reason would appear as clear as the noon-day sun. The real curative power of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA demonstrates itself in every case where our directions are faithfully regarded. We would that we might get before the people a fractional part of the confidence that is expressed to us every day in this medicine by those who have carefully noted (without prejudice) its effects upon the blood and through that upon the whole system, stimulating all the functions of the body to perform the duties nature requires of them. Try a bottle and satisfy yourself.

Col'd Hands and Feet.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—About one year ago my daughter commenced taking your Sarsaparilla. At that time she had very little appetite; could take no long walks, and her face was badly broken out with a tumor. She was low-spirited; troubled with cold hands and feet; her blood seemed to be poor, and she was in a condition which caused us great anxiety. After taking one bottle of your Sarsaparilla she began to improve; and she now has a good appetite and can take much longer walks. Her humor is nothing compared with what it was one year ago. She is in better spirits. Is not troubled with cold hands and feet as previously. And I attribute this improvement in her condition largely to your Sarsaparilla. She has taken six bottles, and intends to continue its use. I was inclined to oppose the trial of it at first. I now have great faith in it as a blood purifier. Very truly yours,

A. L. HINCKLEY,

Antiquarian Reminiscences.

I.

BY W. R. CUTTER.

We take pleasure in contributing an item or two relating to the history of our town, from a source too well-known to need particular mention. From an account book of Capt. Benjamin Edgell, a prominent citizen of Woburn in the last century, the following is taken, concerning the first meetings of the Baptist Society in this place:

"The Society meet at my house, 1792, April to December, two Sabbaths each month. From April, 1792 to April 27, 1794—38 Sabbaths. 1794, May, June, and July,—2 Sabbaths each month. [Total] 44 Sabbaths."

From the same is also the following account with Daniel Thompson, of Woburn, who was killed in Concord Fight, April 19, 1775, the account containing entries contracted the month before his death:—

MR. DANIEL THOMPSON, DR.

1774.	To Entering and Spiring his cart	£1 2 5
March.
1775.	To six oz. of Indigo 4-6	1 7 0
	To a Last	0 7 0
		2 17 0

Rec'd the Full of the Above Account.

BENJA. EDGEL.

Thompson and Edgell were both residents in that part of the town now known as Central Square, and it is honorable to the memory of the early Revolutionary patriot and martyr, to know that the above account was so speedily settled, before he succumbed to the bullets of the foe, on that never-to-be-forgotten day of the birth of American liberty at Lexington and Concord.

May we be forgiven for presenting to the public, the following letter of Josiah Wright, Jr., a native of Woburn, who married Susanna, daughter of Benjamin Edgell, 1801, and had a daughter Susan, born in Woburn, 1802. The letter is descriptive of a voyage to Portland, Maine, of the abo e persons, and shows the excessive discomforts of journeying at the period of which it treats. We know it was never intended for the public eye, and contains certain strictly personal allusions to persons probably all now deceased, but it is so interesting that we decide to give it entire. It should also be understood that it was written at a time when postage was high, and letters were sent but seldom, and that it had a higher value when families at a distance only heard from one another at long intervals:—

PORTLAND, May 9, 1803.

Honored Parents:—We sailed from Boston, half past two on Saturday, with a good wind, which very rapidly wafted us to opposite Portsmouth Harbor, when a head wind arose from the northeast, which at ten o'clock on Sabbath day, being very violent and accompanied with frozen rain, hail and snow, obliged us when within four hours sail of Portland to put about and go into Old York Harbor. All three of us were so very seasick that we were in a most forlorn situation, and great and little Susan were so indisposed that we were obliged to go on shore at York in the snow-storm, on Sabbath day, and were hospitably entertained at a widow Sweat's house. She saw our distress, and her benevolence was equal to our wants. This morning we set sail again, and a good wind by sunset brought us to Ingraham's Wharf, about five o'clock.

We are all quite well, and I think you'd laugh to hear Susan call for and eat bacon and eggs. Accept, Honored Parents, our filial duty.

SUSANNA WRIGHT.

To Mr. Josiah Wright, or Capt. Benjamin Edgell, Woburn.

N. B. The snow lies a considerable depth back from Portland.

Josiah Wright, Jr., is said to have been a school master, and to have located himself in different places, more or less widely separated. A letter dated "Waterford," November 12, 1806, signed by the same Josiah and Susan Wright, son and daughter of Capt. Benjamin Edgell, Woburn, says, among other things, "Susan has become a great girl, and sends her love to all." We find no further reference to these persons in the papers before us.

NORTH WOBURN.

Alice O'Brien was taken to the almshouse last Tuesday. She sold liquor.

Mr. John L. Carter has been doing a large lumbering business this winter and is still at it. Lately he has been cutting the timber on a lot near Lexington center consisting of pine, oak and other woods, for which a ready sale is found. Some of the pine trees, natives of the soil and of great age, make 3000 feet of lumber. Others are sold for masts, and the oak goes to Newburyport for ship-building. It is a little singular that such timber, the original growth, should be found in such abundance so near Boston at this late date in the nineteenth century.

MONTVALE

Engineer Phillip McKenna of the Fire Department, was presented with a regulation hat by Hose 4 on Christmas night.

Mr. James E. Rogers of Montvale, has recovered a silver cake basket and pitcher which were stolen from his house some three years ago. Hearing that there was some silver-ware found in the robber's cave in Reading a few weeks ago, he sent a drawing and description of the plate to the parties who had the contents of the cave and so identified them. A salver was stolen at the same time but had been destroyed. There is more silver-ware in Reading waiting to be identified.

EDITOR OF WOBURN JOURNAL:—

The citizens of Dedham held an indignation meeting on Wednesday evening last to consider the subject of lower fares and faster trains on the Boston & Providence Railroad. A similar meeting here in Woburn wouldn't be out of place, for no town within the radius of ten miles from Boston, has such old-fashioned accommodations as Woburn. It isn't the frequency of trains we complain of, but the too frequent delays in running of the Woburn Branch trains.

What the citizens of Woburn need is quicker communication between here and Boston. Even our so called "Express trains" frequently consume 30 to 40 minutes in making the run between here and Boston, in fact our trains are late every day. Will our citizens put up with such a state of affairs without protesting?

If we intend to make our beautiful town a city, surely we must have a more efficient railroad accommodation to make a successful and desirable place than we have at present. Do I stand alone in this opinion? Should like to hear from other pens on this subject with a view to taking steps toward accomplishing results which will benefit our town in this direction.

ANTI-FOGY.

Dec. 28, 1882.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure, it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.

WINCHESTER.

The town is putting up a building for the stone-crusher. By the way, the stone-crusher is prized by us as a boon.

The public deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Leone S. Quimby in the loss by death of a little daughter last week.

Our public schools will open again on the morning of January 8th, being the anniversary of Gen. Jackson's victory at New Orleans.

Bacon street rejoices in recently erected lamp-posts, and very soon the good people on that thoroughfare will have something to thank the authorities for.

The exhibition given by the pupils of the High School last Friday, gave great satisfaction to the parents and friends present. The proficiency of our High School is unexcelled by any in this region, I believe.

Messrs. George G. Stratton and Abijah Thompson are members of the Reception Committee of the grand ball of the Knights Templars to be given in Charitable Mechanics Association building, Boston, on the evening of January 31, next.

Our town timepiece comes in for a good deal of bitter malediction these days. To be sure it does have a way of its own for indicating time, and the way is like unto the way of cranks, still, I don't think it deserves all the "cussin" it gets.

About quarter past one o'clock P. M., Mrs. Sullivan of Woburn Highlands, a very old lady, undertook to leave Mr. Judson Hart's train after it started from here, and fell under the wheels. Both legs and an arm were cut off, and the poor woman lived only a few moments after. She was said to have been 102 years old.

Last Tuesday night burglars tried to break into the store of C. W. Brodeur, but officer Todd emptied a broadside of shot and shell into them, and they lost no time in getting away from that immediate vicinity. But as, later on, W. E. Taylor's place was burglarized it is thought the same fellows had a principle hand in it.

Tuesday was a day of considerable excitement here. In the afternoon two boys about a dozen years old, one the son of Daniel Rooney, and the other of A. E. Rowe, were coasting near Whitney's Pond and went into a hole in the ice. The Rooney lad was drowned, but young Rowe was rescued and saved. It was a very sad accident.

As near as I can learn there is some diphtheria in this town, but it is not so prevalent or malignant as to cause any great alarm. There is more or less of it every winter in New England towns, but the per cent of deaths from it is not large compared with other diseases. The cause is as much a puzzle to the medical profession as to laymen.

There were merry doings and jolly goings-on here on Christmas. The different churches had Christmas exercises of a pleasant and interesting character; there were family gatherings and Christmas Trees; swarms of crickets on the hearths, and other jovial things. Winchester people are loyal to all holidays, especially Christmas.

As was anticipated Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, the eloquent temperance lecturer, drew an immense audience last Friday evening at the Congregational Church. Her theme was constitutional prohibition which she handled in a masterly manner from a legal and other standpoints, and she could not have failed to make a deep and lasting impression on the hearts of her listeners. Her arguments were solid chunks of logic, her appeals in the highest degree eloquent, her facts indisputable, and her conclusions just and righteous.

"Citizen" has an excellent letter in last week's Star on the custom of publishing by the Boards of Selectmen the names of paupers. It contains a good deal of the "milk of human kindness," and its sensible suggestions ought to be heeded by Boards of all towns that follow the practice. To publish the names of the unfortunate poor can do no possible good, while, on the other hand, sensitive hearts are pained, and sorrow produced when it ought not to be. "Citizen" struck a good note, which I hope will find a response in all human hearts.

"Cricket on the Hearth" was given by the Good Will Club last Thursday evening week, at the Unitarian Church. It was received with enthusiasm by a large and highly appreciative audience. Misses Dow, M. E. Carter, J. Sewall, Metcalf, Nellie Nourse, Safford, and Messrs. William Webb, J. H. Dwinell, W. E. Boynton, and Kimball participated in the play and did themselves credit. Between the acts there was very fine music by Messrs. Hyde, Dutton, Day, and Mr. Swift of the city, which all enjoyed. Messrs. R. C. Metcalf, A. B. Winsor, W. E. Boynton and Josie Sewall constitute the Dramatic Committee of the Club.

There is considerable talk about the bad ventilation of the Grammar School. I don't know anything concerning it, but I do know that a good deal of the talk is bosh. The world is getting to be altogether too scientific for practical purposes. There was just as much sickness among children of the early times who laid the foundations for their destinies in houses through the sides and roofs of which astronomical observations could be made owing to the way the frames were covered, as there is now among those who study in rooms having such terrible ventilation; proving that free circulation of fresh air through the house was no more conducive to good health than the air of modern structures. There are heaps of nonsense in the noddles of the professedly learned now-a-days.

The churches of this village all looked real nice on Sunday. Nearly all were decked out in Christmas greens, which means pleasant things to the eye even in the absence of holly, mistletoe and bay. They looked sort of joyful, hearty, benevolent, with an air of welcome and peace on earth, good will to men, pervading them which all like to see and feel at this blessed season of the year. The Baptists held a Christmas festival on Monday evening, and it was a royal good one, whereat many hearts were made glad. The Orthodox Sunday School was a very interesting affair—very, and so also was that of the Unitarian society. Every one did his best to make the children happy, at home, in Sunday School, at the social board, and elsewhere. And so the season passed pleasantly in this pleasant village.

BURLINGTON.

CONCERT.—The members of the Sunday school gave an interesting concert in the church on Christmas Eve. The exercise "Glory to God" was given with appropriate songs and recitations. The church was tastefully decorated.

ENTERTAINMENT.—On Thursday evening of last week, a company from Lynn under the direction of Mr. M. H. Nichols gave an entertainment in the Town Hall, for the benefit of the Literary Union. The programme consisted of the short drama "Once on a Time," readings and music. Messrs. M. H. and W. Nichols, the former well known and popular with Burlington audiences, acquitted themselves admirably in the play and the other parts were well sustained. The elocutionist, Miss Hattie Smith, gave a dialect selection in fine style and responded to a hearty encore. After the entertainment the party were entertained by the Literary Union, in the supper hall.

WAKEFIELD.

The fifth entertainment in the Lyceum Course was given Wednesday evening before an audience that completely filled the Town Hall. The musical programme comprised choruses and part songs by the Wakefield Choral Union under direction of Mr. John C. Warten, which were given with much precision and harmonious effect. The chorus of "Nazareth," with bass solo by Mr. James C. Miller, was specially fine. A soprano sole was sung by Mrs. Wm. Spaulding, and solos rendered on the piano by Mr. Frank Gilder, xylophone by Mr. Thomas B. Senior, and violin by Mons. Alfred De Seye. Miss Ida Perry Dawes also added greatly to the pleasure of the evening by several recitations.

Chicago's New Board of Ttade

On Wednesday, Dec. 13th, the cornerstone of the new Board of Trade, Chicago, was laid, with interesting ceremonies by its members and their invited guests. This will be the finest Commercial Exchange building in the world, and the West may well be proud of it. Chicago's commission merchants are everywhere noted for their enterprise, push and energy The advertisement of one of them, Messrs. Fleming & Merriam, has been running in our columns for several months. This firm, in addition to their warehouse and recieving business, have ably met the needs of those who desire to speculate safely with small and medium amounts. Their Fund W., which has paid regular monthly profits to its patrons for the past twenty months, is firmly established. It is certainly ably and conservatively managed.

A Boston correspondent of the Chicago Tribune is responsible for the following illustration of how artistic Boston is, even in ministering to the palate: Into the shop of Mr. F., a well-known Boston confectioner, went a gentleman one day to give orders in regard to his daughter's wedding reception, and asked to see Mr. F. himself. He was told that Mr. F. was engaged, but still pressed the importance of his errand and insisted upon seeing the proprietor. A few minutes passed in argument between the gentleman and the clerk, when at length the latter drew himself up with great dignity and said, with much emphasis, "Mr. F. is in his studio engaged in tinting water-ices, and he cannot be disturbed!"

Magazine of American History.

EDITORS, B. F. De Costa, Henry P. Johnston.

With the close of the eighth volume the publishers of THE MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY, beg leave again to invite attention to its character and its claims to public favor.

The Magazine is published monthly, and the plan contemplates several original articles on important historical subjects in each number, treated with candor and ability; followed by valuable Original Documents forming authentic material for history, together with Reprints of rare and curious pieces not generally accessible to the ordinary reader.

The Notes, Queries and Replies form a special feature of THE MAGAZINE, and afford the means of putting on permanent record interesting facts and suggestions that may not require lengthened treatment, and of asking for special information on topics of literary, historic or antiquarian interest. This department will be found of great convenience in connection with research, as is enables readers as well as historical students and writers to make valuable exchanges of the most varied information.

The Proceedings of Historical Societies and notices of important public events have their place; together with impartial reviews of new books devoted to history, literature and associated studies.

Thoroughly National. THE MAGAZINE makes a strong appeal to cultivated tastes in general, and is especially deserving of the support of all persons interested in the study of American History.

It is in every sense a first-class monthly, and the only one of its kind published in this country. It aims to be thoroughly national, and not local or sectional, and among its contributors will be found writers representing all parts of the country. Its pages are open for the free discussion of all questions connected with the early and later history of the American continent, excepting only current or recent questions of public or partisan discusion.

In Line with Progress. Within recent years a fresh and gratifying interest in the history of the country, both early and late, has developed in educational circles, and it is worthy of note as a result that chairs of American History have been endowed in more than one of our principal colleges. THE MAGAZINE aims to keep line with this progress, and will be a medium for all students in this department of letters.

Rare and Choice Engravings. While endeavoring to encourage the study of history in accordance with the principles of a sound and impartial criticism, THE MAGAZINE will, at the same time, seek to present subjects in an attractive style, and add to their interest by varied and valuable illustrations, including portraits and views on steel. In this respect it will aim to present its readers with only rare and choice engravings. Its success in this is well attested by the engravings of the past year, among which those of LaSalle and the Duke of York having been engraved for the first time for THE MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY. The due proportion will be maintained between documents and reprints and original matter, and it is hoped that all the values that have hitherto given a high character to THE MAGAZINE may be retained and supplemented by the able and opportune treatment of fresh topics. THE MAGAZINE should be found in every public and private library.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

One can hardly over-estimate the permanent value of this monthly publication to future historians and all serious students of history. It is, therefore, gratifying to find it so well and carefully printed, and the bound volumes are substantial and handsome enough to occupy a prominent place on the shelves of the most elegant private library.—New York Daily Tribune.

Not only has it increased in its value as a historical work, but it has added beauty to value in its handsome steel and wood engravings and maps, illustrating important facts of history.—Inter-Ocean Chicago, Ill.

The MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY is one of the most valuable publications in this country. It contains no paper that is not worthy of careful preservation. Its notes are of great interest to the most igtelligent and thoughtful. * * * * *

It is a model of excellence and beauty in its printing and illustrations, and must be a welcome visitor who comes to stay, in the library of every one who aspires to be well read in the history of his country.—Observer, New York.

The value of this work, as the only monthly publication in the United States devoted to the discussion of historical matters, with special reference to this country, should command for it a wide-spread recognition, and should bring to its support every student of history, every investigator into the past life of America, and every true-hearted advocate of an honest attempt to preserve the facts which pertain to the inception and growth of this nation.—Morning Whig, Troy, N. Y.

This work, valuable from the first, grows grows more valuable with age. It fills an important place in American literature, and its intrinsic value as a historical record is only equaled by its beauty as a magazine.—Golden Era, San Francisco, Cal.

Christmas Doings.

It may seem almost like "the day after the Fair" to write of Christmas now, but ours is not a daily paper in this morning's columns of which yesterday's history is written, and therefore we adopt the old rule "better late than never," and jot down an outline of the Christmas-day's proceedings here. There is not much to tell of the day's doings outside of the churches, though the season was generally observed by all. The day, itself was beautiful. Not exactly a typical Christmas day, but nice. There was no sleighing, to the disappointment of many owners of fine horses and handsome cutters, but the sun shone brightly, and it was warm and good comfortable out doors weather. It is seldom that we have it so lovely on Christmas day, and it was duly appreciated.

On Christmas Eve the most interesting gatherings were held and appropriate entertainments given. Nearly all of the Sunday Schools gave their Christmas concerts, for which extra preparations were made. At the Baptist church the services all day Sunday were very interesting. The choir was reinforced by some excellent vocalists and the music was appropriate and excellent. A first-rate Christmas sermon was preached in the morning by Rev. Mr. Simonson, who deemed the joyful occasion worthy of an extra literary effort; the organist rendered some fine pieces; the church was inviting in appearance, and on the whole a happy and profitable day was spent. The Sunday School concert was also of a good deal more than ordinary interest, and afforded great pleasure to a large attendance.

The Unitarian Society paid much attention and did a great deal to give the season an appropriate celebration on Sunday. The Mozart Male Quartette was in demand all day and in the evening, and gave the large attendance splendid music. Christmas greens adorned the house and everything was lovely. Mr. Young delivered an admirable discourse, and at the Sunday School concert there were songs, recitations and other delightful exercises. The small folks were made happy, and the old ones enjoyed the Christmas feast of literary and musical fat things.

The Methodist had their usual services on Sunday, but on Christmas evening held exercises in the church which were very interesting. The Sunday School came out in the Christmas spirit and looks, and added zest to the pleasures of the occasion.

There was a great attendance on the masses at the Catholic church. Mass was held at 6 o'clock on Christmas morning, and Solemn High Mass was held at 10.30 a. m. The excellent choir of the church had aid from out-side, so that the music was of the very best. There were good sermons, and devout religious services through the day on which a large share of the Catholic population attended.

At the Episcopal church the day was made much of. The services were appropriate to the season and very interesting.

Dr. March preached a good sermon Sunday morning at the First Congregational church, and music for the occasion was well chosen and performed. Mr. Buck played some excellent Christmas pieces on the organ, and Dr. Lang, the Conductor, seemed to be imbued with the real Christmas spirit.

No Trouble to Show Goods.

Owing to the sudden illness of Mrs. Seaver the soprano of the choir, Mrs. Charles M. Strout, at a moment's notice, kindly consented to take the place at the morning services as well as as the evening concert, at both of which she rendered her music in a manner that reflected great credit on the musical ability of this amiable lady. The Sunday School concert in the evening, conducted by Superintendent J. G. Pollard, and Assistant Superintendent, E. E. Thompson, was very fine indeed. "The Night of Glory," by the choir and some forty trained voices under the leadership of Dr. Lang, with Mr. John C. Buck, organist, and Mr. Bryant, flute, was a genuine musical treat. There were solos, duets, quartettes, quintettes and choruses, with ringing of bells, echos, flute, and "organ's pealing notes," all together making a concert worth hearing. The audience was very large. There were recitations by the the little ones, and a Christmas poem very finely read by Miss Ellard. Dr. March made brief pleasant address.

A great many of the young people spent a large part of the Monday skating on Horn Pond, and in the evening there was a dramatic performance in Lyceum Hall, which was not first class, parties, Christmas trees, family gatherings, and many other merry goings-on. Crowds of people went into the city in the afternoon and evening, and crowds of those who remained here got gloriously over-the-bay on very poor rum.

On the whole, the day was a merry one here in Woburn, and a large share of our people were all the happier, and better we hope, for having participated in the celebration.

Gleanings.

In a difficulty at Troy, Ala., on Christmas Day, George Fallmar shot and instantly killed G. F. Halloway. Both were merchants and highly reputable citizens.

George Portwood and Town Officer Laughlin of Lawrenceburg, Ky. fought Christmas night. They held each other by the lappels of their coats, drew pistols and simultaneously fired, fatally wounding each other in the breast. Laughlin died almost instantly. Portwood lived only a few hours.

Owing to the large number of persons in Camden, N. J., out of work there is a great deal of destitution among the poorer classes, and the City Council appropriation for the poor has already become exhausted.

The Democratic Committees of the Ninth Congressional District of Indiana has nominated Judge Ward, Congressman-elect, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. G. S. Orth.

Samuel Blackwood, aged 12, playfully pointed a loaded pistol at Louisa Stannard, also 12, in New York Tuesday, and pulled trigger, sending a ball into the girl's brain. The police are hunting for a hardware merchant who sold the boy the pistol. The girl is not expected to recover.

In view of the disturbed condition of affairs growing out of the potters' strike at East Liverpool, O., Mayor Burgess has issued a proclamation to the effect that all persons assembling on the streets and highways, unlawfully congregating in buildings or insulting citizens pursuing their work, will be dealt with according to law.

Col. J. B. Taylor was nominated on the 32d ballot at Bellaire, Ohio, Tuesday, by the Republican Convention to fill the vacancy in Congress caused by the death of Mr. Updegraff.

The Common Council of Louisville last night formally impeached City Auditor Phil Hinkle, Assistant Fire Chief George W. Levi and two of the City Hall officials, under indictment for frauds in the Assessors' and Tax Collector's offices. The managers appointed to conduct the impeachment reported the articles to the Board of Aldermen.

Health of Connecticut.

HARTFORD, CONN., June 10th.—The monthly report of the State Board of Health, published on the 7th inst., says long diseases hold the front rank. Consumption has been as fatal as lung fever, and there has been a large per centage of deaths from bronchitis and congestion of the lungs. A peculiar spasmodic cough has also been very common, not distinctive enough to be called whooping cough, and attacking adults as well as children. Neuralgia and rheumatism are reported as being prevalent and exceedingly obstinate and unyielding to treatment. Since the introduction into our section of the Craig's cough and consumption cure, pulmonary diseases are rapidly disappearing, and now that the excellencies as a curative power of the French crown plaster is being generally known, neuralgia and rheumatism are complaints not often heard of.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, it is point straight to eternity. It may be impolitic even to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

A Legal Obstacle to Christian Union.

The second part of Dr. Washington Gladden's "Christian League of Connecticut," in the January CENTURY contains the following surprising statement regarding the attitude of the laws towards any plan of Christian Union:

The report of the conversation in Dr. Sampson's study furnished a theme for the next meeting of the club.

"Since our talk that morning," said Dr. Samson, "I have taken pains to get a few of the facts about the small towns in this county. Monroeville is the type of a class. There is Stapleton, with a population of eleven hundred, and with churches: Scantico, with six hundred people and three churches; Rowell with nine hundred people and four churches, and so on. Eight towns in this county, with an aggregate population of nine thousand one hundred and thirty-four, support thirty-seven religious societies. Of these at least fifteen are receiving more or less aid from the various home missionary organizations."

"Even when the societies are self-supporting," said Dr. Phelps, "the support is generally meagre, the membership is small, and the terms of the pastorates are lamentably short."

"It is plain," said Mr. Hartwell, that the churches in these small towns ought to unite. What hinders them?"

"First," answered the doctor, "is the strength of the sectarian prejudice,—always more intense in the small places than in the large ones. Then there is a sentiment much less reprehensible,—the attachment to the local organization, around which many grateful memories cling. The people do not like to give up a church which may have a noble history, and which is sure to be the shrine of sweet associations."

"Certainly," said Mr. Hartwell; "those hindrances are obvious. They may be called sentimental; even so they are not so easily overcome. Are there any other practical obstacles?"

"In most of the towns," said Mr. Peters, "the only way of uniting would be to abandon the old organizations and form a new one,—a union church, like ours at Cypressville."

"But do you know," Mr. Franklin broke in, "that it is legally impossible to do anything of the sort?"

"What do you mean?" demanded three or four voices.

"Just what I say. The union of two churches of different denominations is so rare that no provision for it is made, so far as I can learn, in our statutes, nor in those of any other State. Secular corporations can be legally consolidated, but church corporations cannot be. Christian union seems to be regarded by our legislators as against public policy. Churches have sometimes been brought together, but the act was unwarranted by law. Any troublesome member of either church could have procured an order from the courts tearing them apart again."

"Then," said Mr. Strong, "it is high time that we had an act before the Legislature, enabling churches to obey the Christian law. I hope that unanimous consent will be given to the appointment, by this club, of Mr. Franklin as our agent, to secure the passage of such a law at this session."

Consent was readily given. Concerning the work of Mr. Franklin in the lobby of the Legislature the historian of the club is not fully informed; but the facts to be recorded below indicate that he must have been successful.

The Mate of the "Mark Twain."

A humorous paper on Mississippi River travel, in the January CENTURY, is entitled "The Trip of the 'Mark Twain,'" and is cleverly illustrated by Pennell. A typical character of river life is allowed to speak for himself as follows:

The first mate of the vessel, he of the fur cap, was a character. It was appropriate to find him in the Mark Twain. He was bald and looked very old but declared he was thirty.

"Ef you had been through what I hev, my travelin' stranger," quoth he, "you too would look like an example of the longest kind of long-gevity. My name figures prominently in history. I've been published in four-hundred and thirty-nine newspapers and one almanac. I've been blown up by steam-boats in twenty-two States and several territories. On most occasions everybody on board perished except myself. Pieces of my skull is lain' round loose all up and down this river, and numerous of its tributarrys. Awful? Yes. Once I was aboard the Obiona. I knew we were goin' to bust that arternoon, for it was about bustin' time with me, and bust we did. When I come down I couldn't find nothin'. Everything had blowed to dust, or gone so fur that nothin' was within visible distance. But bless you!—that's nothin'. Minor catasterfies? Oh, yes. Once we smashed a wheel against a snag. Of course when we progressed we went round and round, and so went round and round all the way down to New Orleans, describin' circles the whole time. We all got orful headaches owin' to the centripetal tendency of the periphery."

The question of the present—what to buy?

LITERARY NOTICES.

A look into Hawthorne's Workshop is a most remarkable feature of the January CENTURY, when we consider that the paper consists of the most interesting portions of Nathaniel Hawthorne's own posthumous notes for a romance. The notes are published here for the first time, the original manuscript, in Hawthorne's minute and difficult hand-writing, have been lent to the CENTURY by Mr. Julian Hawthorne. In these gropings after a satisfactory plot and characters Hawthorne displays, in the most fascinating manner, every characteristic of his genius. Professor Wallace contributes The Debt of Science to Darwin. The frontispiece of the number is a striking portrait of Darwin, views of Darwin's home and study are also given. Another Englishman, writes briefly upon the personal and literary influences of the late Dean Stanley. George W. Cable begins in this number his illustrated historical studies of Old New Orleans, by answering the much-asked question, Who are the Creoles? Dr. Eggleston's second paper on colonial history is well illustrated. The Planting of New England is the striking title, and the Puritans are treated with keen insight and sympathy. Two practical subjects, effectively treated and profusely illustrated in this number are Hydraulic Mining in California, and Farming for Feathers. The Trip of the Mark Twain is a slight, humorously illustrated and written paper on Mississippi River travel; Frank R. Stockton describes the amusing experiences of The Rudder Grangers in England. In another vein is John Burroughs's charming studies in natural history, entitled, A Mole, a Lamprey, and a Fairy. The January chapters of Mary Hallock Foote's romance of the silver mines, The Led-Horse Claim, introduce a tragedy underground, and develope a powerful interest. The third part of Dr. Gladden's practical story of The Christian League of Connecticut mention the fact that the laws of many States virtually forbid the union of Christian churches. Mrs. Burnett's Through One Administration is continued. The poems of the number are by Paul H. Hayne, H. C. Bunner, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Edith M. Thomas, Henry Ames Blood, E. C. White, and Maria W. Jones; and among the verses of lighter vein in Brie-a-Brac, are two of Uncle Remus's Christmas Dance songs. Topics of the Times discusses The Revolution in American Politics and current subjects, and the other editorial departments are unusually full and interesting. Among the book-notices is one of Mr. Howells's A Modern Instance.

A Tragedy.

Not long since, there occurred near Asheville, S. C., one of the most sickening and sorrowful tragedies ever enacted in this poor earth. A farmer, in good circumstances, but of intemperates habits, was accustomed to take his little daughter, Ruth—a bright, beautiful girl of eight years,—with him on his drinking expeditions, as well as to send her to the grocery for liquor when at home. She had never been known to taste it, and no wonder, when she saw what it was doing for her father. But last Wednesday while he was sleeping off the effects of a spree, on which as usual had taken his child (probably with the selfish design of securing his own safety), her curiosity, and perhaps an awakened hereditary appetite, tempted her to creep up to him and swallow the remainder of the liquor in his bottle. She then made her way home, where her father found her in a state of beastly intoxication. Frenzied by the effect of his debauch, and doubtless by the remorse of his own conscience, he swore that he would kill her. On being roused and told of his intention, the poor little thing begged piteously for her life, saying with peculiar pathos:

"Pa, don't kill me now. I am drunk wait till I get sober!" But the demoniac dragged her out of bed, and beat her to death.

"Jewing Down."

Perhaps few stories would be sadder than the related experience of poor girls and women who do sewing and similar work by the day, or who trade on their own account. Perhaps the supposed inhumanity of women to women never comes nearer being a fact than when they have money dealings with each other. Most housewives have a talent for making bargains, and there are few gifts more subject to abuse. Ladies, have a care in poor economies of this sort lest you be found to 'grind the faces of the poor.'

We have known a wealthy woman, and a prominent church member to 'beat down,' for a troublesome and expensive white work, a young woman to whom a dollar meant almost the difference between hope and despair.

Once a minister's wife said, complacently: 'I got her to let me have this for half a dollar less,' when we could scarcely help exclaiming: 'Don't you know the poor old lady of whom you bought this is almost on starvation's verge—is living on two meals a day in this bitter weather?' The whole purchase amounted to two or three dollars, and the reduction had only been consented to under the urgent necessity to sell. How cruel! and yet, in both instances, the wrong was done by kind-hearted women. More evil is wrought by want of thought than by want of heart. But in this world it is our business to think.—[Selections.

Absent-mindedness has been considered a mark of a great man, but a fellow never feels very big about it when he lugs a napkin away from the table in his handkerchief pocket.

A statistician computes that one hundred and fifty tons of human hair annually changes owners in France. This does not include the locks that change owners in conjugal unpleasantness.

Baby had been forbidden to ask for dessert. The other day they forgot to serve him, and as baby is very obedient, he remained silent, although much affected. "Josephine," said the father, "pass me a plate." "Won't you have mine, papa?" cried baby; "it is very clean."

A humane man grabbed a club, jumped in and killed a goat that was chasing a man who carried a red handkerchief in his coat-tail pocket, down the street. And the man came back and asked him why he did it. To save you! replied the humane man. Save me be hanged! cried the other; I've just bought that goat and was coaxing him home.

He stood on the postoffice stoop, says an exchange, and everybody knew him as a newly married man. Now what did she want on the other two fingers?

The United States fish commission has gone to work to propagate a native American codfish, so that we may be entirely independent of the Newfoundland variety. About one hundred million eggs, it is thought, can be secured daily. It is confidently asserted by the commission that the new codfish will wear a distinctive American perfume, but of this we have grave doubts. You may break, you may shatter the ball if you will, but the scent of the codfish will cling to it still.

Webster, the lexicographer, defines Catarrh to be, "A discharge of fluid from the mucous membrane, especially of the nose, fauces, and bronchial passages, caused by a cold in the head. It is a disease common alike to all classes of society. Unlike an ordinary cold, it cannot be cured by family remedies, but requires an antidote from the ranks of materia medica. The preparation so universally known under the name of Ely's Cream Balm is a sovereign, unfailing cure for Catarrh. It is a neat, pleasant, yet thoroughly efficacious remedy. "I have been troubled with Catarrh so badly," writes B. F. Leipsner, A. M., of Red Bank, N. J., "for several years that it seriously affected my voice. I tried various remedies without relief. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored and my head feels better than for years.' 50 cts only.

 A coward can be a hero at a distance; presence of danger tests presence of mind." Presence of disease test the value of a curative. Kidney-Wort challenges this test always and everywhere, so far as all complaints of the bowels, liver and kidneys are concerned. It cures all, nor asks any odds.

It almost seems incredible, and had I not had ocular proof I should not dare to state it, that a single dress should have on it 1800 buttons of varying sizes. Ten days were consumed in arranging and sewing on the buttons by a seamstress. On each sleeve there was 100 buttons; on the body, basque and collar, 350, and on the skirt 1350. Those on the skirt were arranged in triangles, squares, crosses, stars and other curious shapes, on foundation of black satin. The dress had a satiny appearance and was very weighty—so much so that it would require a lady of considerable strength to wear it. The intention was to have 2000 buttons on it, but the entire surface of the dress would have to be covered. The buttons were all black, some round and others flat and many of them quite expensive.—[Detroit Free Press.

What is needed is pure blood, as the influence of its purity upon the health cannot be overestimated. When it becomes impure it gives rise to a large number of diseases, such as biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, low spirits, nervousness, female complaints, etc. The success which has attended the use of Swedish Botanic Compound warrants us to say that for purifying and enriching the blood, creating an appetite, strengthening and renovating the whole system, nothing surpasses that great remedy.
